Where should the scholar live? In solitude, or in society? In the green stillness of the country, where he can hear the heart of Nature beat, or in the dark, gray town, where he can hear and feel the throbbing heart of man? I will make answer for him, and say, in the dark, gray town. LONGFELLOW

THE NEXT STEP
President L. H. Murlin

The future historian of Boston University, in writing of its first one hundred years, will divide his story into two parts — all that happened previous to 1921-22 and all that happened since. And when he writes down some of the sub-heads of this all-important year he will name Foch Day, 1921, as the day when Boston University began to have a fuller sense of university consciousness and found itself on a mighty wave of contagious, joyous, super-abundant enthusiasm.

He will also say that on that day preceding the Foch meeting there gathered about 500 picked undergraduates, young men and women from the different classes, with members of the various faculties of the University, workers all, each of whom was to canvass at least ten of his fellow-students or colleagues during the following ten days, ending November 23. The twenty-third day arrived with practically every department 100% subscribed, totaling $365,000, with the probability that the amount will reach $400,000 when the final figures are made up, probably the largest amount of money ever pledged by any student and faculty body in America for any cause whatever!

Those conducting this canvass ask the students, graduates, friends of the University, and the public generally to add Four and One-half Million Dollars to the University’s capital fund, to be at the disposal of the trustees for endowment and development purposes. The first unit — the undergraduate — has made its goal: we now turn to the graduate unit.

Several conferences have been held with alumni from the various departments of the University and numerous methods of participation have been suggested. One eminent financial statistician suggested that we divide the amount we wish to raise ($4,500,000) by the number of graduates (about 8,000), thereby gaining, according to his judgment and experience, the most reliable and reasonable individual quota — about $520. 1,644 Wesleyan men averaged $416; 12,322 Harvard men averaged a little less than $800; 6,680 Tech men averaged $365; Mt. Holyoke women graduates averaged $305; Wheaton College women have assumed a quota of $260 each, graduates and undergraduates. Of course this means that in each group there are many who gave much more than this average, since there must have been some who could not give that much.

We have not thought it best to fix any quota. We tell you what graduates of other colleges are doing and what our undergraduates have done. It surely should be not less than the lowest above mentioned — Wesleyan and Wheaton. Even so, some will have to rate themselves up into the thousands, for many cannot reach even the Harvard, Tech, Mt. Holyoke, Wesleyan, and Wheaton figures. But this must be our goal — and this we are confident we shall have — the name of every graduate on the subscription list, each according to his ability.

There is much more involved in the next goal we have set than in reaching this goal as merely an end in itself. If this mark is passed proportionately as successfully as the first one, we shall approach our third goal, the great Foundations, with a most impressive momentum. We have reason to believe they will deal generously with us; but the degree and fullness of that generosity will be determined by the degree, fullness, and completeness of the response from our graduates. If our graduates are 100% subscribed, with a good showing in our average quota, we are well on our way to certain victory. Dr. Wallace Buttrick, President of the General Education Board (Rockefeller) says: “The measure of outside support is largely influenced by the loyalty of the alumni.”

The only sectarian department of the University is our School of Theology. We cannot ask the Boston public, nor graduates other than those of this School, for money for this department. The graduates and friends of the School of Theology must, therefore, provide the funds necessary for its development and maintenance. The University is not and never has been sectarian. Among our patrons and supporters are Jews, Catholics, Protestants of all faiths, and people of no faith. That we have so many worthy people of widely divergent beliefs is one of the glories of our University. Our other glory is that the University is instinct with religious life, ideals, and spirit as revealed by the fact that we have among our 10,000 students over 1,000 men and women, ministerial or lay, preparing for twenty different forms of religious work representing twenty-five denominations. These religious ideals and spirit are manifested in such a broad way that each student, each member of the faculty, and each trustee feels perfectly at home, and in this great enterprise has joined heart and hand in every fundamental good thing that concerns the betterment of human life and welfare through education. The University is irrevocably committed by charter, statutes, personnel, and administrative procedures to this great, broad, religious, non-sectarian ideal.

These four goals successively and successfully passed, we are then ready to go to the Boston public. And with an enthusiastic, full, and complete response from undergraduates, faculties, graduates, and the Foundations, we shall have a tremendously impressive appeal to the Boston public. They will surely see us through to our final goal — Four and One-half Million!

Boston University is growing and will continue to grow. There are boundless opportunities for educational service in this metropolitan center. We are daily gaining in breadth, depth, and quality of service. We are just as surely growing in the confidence and appreciation of Metropolitan Boston and of New England. Where in all the world can our graduates place their influence, sympathy, and money, large or small, with greater confidence in its productiveness in the things most worth while?

The Trustees are in great need of this help; but the graduates need still more the rich experience they will have in helping the Trustees. The graduates now hold the key to the situation. If they respond as have the undergraduates, we shall then have the courage to take such a fine showing, constituting, we believe, an irresistible appeal, to the Foundations; after that, we can go to the Boston public with an equally irresistible, compelling appeal.
Shall our Trustees have this $4,500,000 added to our capital? The answer lies in the sort of response that comes from our graduates. The graduates will never have another chance to render so significant and fruitful a service to the University as is given them in this Campaign. We rest the case with them in high hope and confident expectation.

"There is a tide in the affairs of men (and Universities)
Which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune;
Omitted, all the voyage of their life
Is bound in shallows, and in miseries.
On such a full sea are we now afloat
And we must take the current when it serves,
Or lose our ventures."

THE GREATER BOSTON CAMPAIGN AMONG THE ALUMNI OF THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

On December 5 a campaign among the Greater Boston Alumni of the College of Liberal Arts began. The organization consisted of a general chairman, Mr. William B. Snow, '85, and twelve teams, each consisting of a captain and four lieutenants. This group of sixty volunteer workers met in the Dutch Room of the Copley Square Hotel each night during the campaign week for a report. The friendly rivalry among the teams, the good fellowship among the workers, the fine loyalty reported by them, and the inspiring reports made these meetings memorable. The first report, $18,325 pledged, foretold success. The report on Friday, December 9, gave a total of $61,415, to which was added $17,790 already given by graduates who had pledged through the Faculty, Graduate School, or Board of Trustees. The organization unanimously voted to have a "clean-up" during the ensuing week, in order to visit some of the alumni who could not be seen during the five days of intensive work. As a result the total was increased by $14,250 at the final meeting on Friday, December 16. The standing of the teams at this date was as follows:

Grand total

The magnificent spirit of the workers was manifest when they asked that the organization might continue to assist further in making the canvass of the Greater Boston Group complete. Some alumni, because of illness, change of address, etc., could not be interviewed. It is certain that when the complete report of the campaign among the College of Liberal Arts Alumni of Greater Boston in the Classes of 1877-1911 is recorded the amount will exceed $100,000. It should be noted that already the Alumni in the Classes 1912-1920 have pledged $42,657 so that the total to date pledged by the Greater Boston Alumni of all classes of the College of Liberal Arts is $134,812.

The presentation to Marshal Foch of a finely bound copy of the Boston University War Volume was an interesting feature of the reception which the University tendered to the Marshal in the Arena on Monday evening, November 14.

The University still has a supply of the War Record and has made a special price of $1 to close out the stock. Orders should be sent to the Editor of BOSTONIA, 688 Boylston Street.
ABSTRACT OF AN ADDRESS TO THE
AUGUSTUS HOWE BUCK SCHOLARS OF 1921-22
DECEMBER 13, 1921

By President Emeritus William E. Huntington.

MUCH was published in the columns of the June BOSTONIA, 1917, that reveals to those who read these tributes, but never saw Professor Buck, the salient features of his character. It is your pleasure to be reminded afresh in this meeting today of the noble man whose name gives distinction to the Fund under which you are enjoying certain very welcome privileges.

The portrait that is before us is so perfect a representation of his face that it is easy for us who knew him well through many years to feel that his vital influence is still working in the College, and that the same remarkable teacher who impressed his students with such power in the time of his strength is helping to mould the character and life of those who in certain relations are known by his name and aim to partake of his spirit.

May I remind you that Professor Buck came to his eminence not by accident, not by reliance upon the strong arm of a rich father or of a benevolent patron, or by a freak of good fortune; but through struggle, by overcoming obstacles, by rigid habits of economy of time and money he gained his education, mastering a rugged environment in his youth, attaining at length the rank of a successful scholar, the first and necessary qualification for a teacher.

His physical equipment was unusual,—the bodily expression of power in mind and heart. His presence in any company was impressive. He moved in his daily walks as if he had work to do and wanted to get at it. He never loitered; his mind was too active for any idle hours, or for mere story telling or frivolous chat. Always accessible, cordial, friendly, he would not waste time in unprofitable intercourse.

His love for classical study revealed itself in his boyhood; for he had read the Aeneid before he was twelve years old. The greater part of his teaching was in Greek and Latin courses, the two most prominent schools being the Roxbury Latin School, of which he was Principal for fourteen years, and the Boston Latin School, where he was master in Latin and Greek courses, and whence he was called to the chair of Greek Language and Literature in Boston.
University. This position he held in honor and distinction until he retired in 1901.

Mrs. Buck's ancestry was German, and her kinsfolk living overseas made it natural for the Professor and his wife to make a visit to the Vaterland in 1907. From this visit they did not return.

Professor Buck's career was during the last period in which Greek, as one of the chief college disciplines, flourished, when in the best institutions the knowledge, more or less, of Greek was required for the A.B. degree. Before he finished his work he saw the time coming when that ancient language would be relegated to the category of such recondite studies as Sanskrit and other subjects of simply antiquarian interest. He was prophet enough to foresee that ere long there would be only a "saving remnant" of scholarship in university life which would carry on studies in the field of Hellenic language, literature, and life. May I suggest just here a hope that the Buck scholars now and hereafter may at least occasionally furnish a man who will help to keep alive the highest standards of learning by doing honor work in classical courses. To be in studious contact with the poets, dramatists, and thinkers of Athenian and Roman renown, during the years of college training under inspiring teachers, gives a flavor, an elevation, to scholarship that do not come by any other means. "While the tide in modern education seems to run strong and in great volume for what is called practical training, the highest attainments in learning are somewhat above the market-place, the shop, and the factory." A great name will constantly stir you to your best endeavors for the best things,—the name of Augustus Howe Buck.

THE sympathy of the University is extended to Dr. John L. Bates, President of the Corporation, in the death of his mother, Mrs. Louisa D. Bates, who passed away in Brighton on Monday, November 21. The funeral services were held on Wednesday, November 23, in the Union Methodist Episcopal Church, East Boston. The services were in charge of the pastor, Rev. C. C. Garland, assisted by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes and two former pastors of the church, Rev. D. D. Hoagland, D.D., and Rev. Edwin Marsh, D.D., of Hyde Park.
THE ASSIGNMENT OF SPACE IN BOSTONIA

By the new arrangement, whereby BOSTONIA is sent to all graduates of the University, each school and college of the institution is entitled to an equitable share of the space allotted to departmental notes. In answer to the request of the editors for personal items numerous responses have been received from the graduates of certain departments; from those of other departments very few notices were forwarded; in the case of a few units of the University nothing whatever has reached the editorial office. Under such conditions the editors have no choice but to utilize for other material the unclaimed reserved space.

BOSTONIA will not reach the maximum of its usefulness until in every issue each school and college of the University is adequately represented. The fixed policy of the editors is to assign the space impartially. BOSTONIA renews its urgent invitation to each department to send items of personal and general interest.

The readers of BOSTONIA have responded generously to the request that prompt notice of all changes in address be sent to this office. All changes thus reported will be carefully noted on our mailing list and will also be handed to the editor of the forthcoming alumni magazine. Graduates reporting changes in address are thus performing a double service to the University.

The editors of BOSTONIA earnestly request personal items regarding graduates of all departments of Boston University. Such items form one of the most interesting features of the magazine.

During the present academic year BOSTONIA will be issued nine times as follows: September, November, December, January, February, March, April, May, June.

BOSTONIA is now sent free of charge to all graduates of the University.
UNIVERSITY NOTES

THE ALL-COLLEGE CARNIVAL

Beginning February 7, 1922, for five days, in Mechanics Hall, Boston, a Carnival will be held by the following institutions: Radcliffe, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Simmons, Vassar, and Boston University. The profits will be shared by the hostess colleges.

At the request of President Murlin the Women Graduates' Club of Boston University voted to be responsible for Boston University's share in this undertaking. By this vote the Club will be responsible for the Children's Entertainment afternoons and Saturday morning, with ushers; a sales booth; a Boston University Exhibit for publicity purposes; probably also for the waitresses one day at the luncheon which Simmons is serving.

The Club requests every member of the Women Graduates' Club and all graduates of the University who are not members of the Club to volunteer for that department of the Carnival for which they consider themselves best fitted. Those who are willing to be ushers or waitresses are requested to send their names to the Executive Chairman, Mrs. Sidney Peterson, 42 Mt. Vernon Street, Newton. Volunteers, as salesladies for the booths and donors of articles, are asked to communicate with the Chairman, Mrs. W. K. Townsend, 556 Franklin Street, Melrose Highlands. Mrs. Theodore Borst, 2 Hancock Avenue, Newton Centre, will be glad to communicate with any who will aid in the entertainment of children. All who are interested in helping the Exhibit are requested to send their names to the President of the Club, Dr. E. B. Cahill, Hotel Somerset, Boston.

COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

THE FACULTY

Professor Black has delivered a number of lectures in Boston recently. On Thursday, November 3, he addressed the Browning Club at the Hotel Vendome on "Unity in the Variety of Browning's Appeal." On Friday, November 11, in Jordan Hall, he made the principal address at the unveiling of the Edgar Allen Poe bust presented to the City of Boston. On both occasions Professor Black read from unpublished correspondence relating to Browning and Poe.

Professor Black has been elected Honorary Chief of the Caledonian Society of Boston, and on December 6 gave an inaugural address on "Scotland's Contribution to Literature" before the Club in the Caledonian Society rooms.

On December 14 he lectured at the Mt. Vernon Street Church on "The Catholic Contribution to English Literature of the Nineteenth Century."

Professor Black will lecture on "Sir Walter Scott After a Hundred Years" before the Washington Literary and Fine Arts Association, of which he will be the guest on January 12.

Ginn & Company are bringing out a new edition of "The Lady of the Lake," edited by Professor Black, incorporating a poem on Sir Walter Scott with illustrations, from which Sir James M. Barrie has quoted frequently.

A new edition of "Othello" in the New Hudson bears on the title page the names of Agnes Knox Black as well as of Professor E. Charlton Black. Ginn & Company are getting out a new book of Professor Black's entitled "Shakespeare for Teachers and Readers."

Professor Dallas Lore Sharp has brought out, through the Houghton Mifflin Company, an appreciation of the late John Burroughs. His work is entitled "The Seer of Slabsides." Long an admirer of Professor Sharp's literary style, we know of no book of his which quite equals this in its austere beauty, its chaste simplicity. We are reading the words of a man deeply moved, who grips himself lest the grief over the loss of a friend burst its barriers. As the emotion of a disciplined mind deepens the language becomes simpler, more natural. Professor Sharp's later writings are taking on a richer, a mellower tone, reflective of his ripening maturity and his ever-widening vision. A frontispiece gives an excellent portrait of Mr. Burroughs as he sat in the doorway of his home at Slabsides. The price of the volume is 75 cents.

The Revue Philosophique (Paris) from January to March, 1921, contains an extended discussion of Professor E. C. Wilm's work on the Bergsonian philosophy, in an article entitled, "La Philosophie Francaise en Amerique."
