Beacon Hill

Professor Robert E. Moody

Few of the hundreds of persons who annually in recent years have made a pilgrimage to Beacon Hill on Christmas Eve come away unimpressed with the quaintness and charm of that section of Boston which along with Beacon Street has come to be symbolic of Boston itself. Yet while we may recognize the romantic qualities which attract visitors at this one time, that section of the city, as many will testify, is well worth revisiting not once but often, and by sunlight as well as by lamplight. And if a light rain is falling or if it is foggy, the hill has still other attractions. Winter or summer, rain or shine, Beacon Hill more than any other section of Boston brings back memories of the past. But one word of warning. Park your cars far down its slopes and travel it on foot.

To know the Hill is to love it and to know it well, one ought not merely to have tramped its streets but he ought also to know its history. No brief account could do more than introduce the subject so completely covered by Allen Chamberlain’s studious and entertaining book Beacon Hill: Its Ancient Pastures and Early Mansions; but the following paragraphs may be sufficient to sketch the general outlines.

The Hill, as we see it, is not by any means old as ages are reckoned in New England. Its contours, as we know them, were carved in the last century, and of its houses, great and small, not more than five at the most were built before 1800. In New England, the Revolution divides the ancient from the modern. Our “new” State House was built in 1795.

When Boston was really new, that is, in the 1630’s, the most conspicuous features of the landscape were the fort on Fort Hill, the Wind-Mill on Copp’s Hill and on the Northwest “a high Mountain with three little rising Hills on the top of it, wherefore it is called the Tramount.” These “three little rising hills” were Sentry or Beacon Hill, the highest point of which was then about as high as the eagle on the Beacon Monument at the rear of the State House, this highest point being somewhat to the eastward of the present location of the Monument. Cotton or Pemberton Hill whose sharply rising slopes had their summit near the present Suffolk County Court House, and Mount Vernon, known previous to the late 18th century by a variety of names. The latter hill, having something the character of a bluff, its lowest slopes washed by the waters of the Charles, then unwalled and penetrated by the incoming tides, was located somewhat to the east of Louisburg Square. The three hillocks were connected by a ridge. It is the partial demolition of these conspicuous landmarks that made possible the change of the whole area from a rough pasture-land, the scene of grazing cattle, to the interesting quarter, inhabited by a cross-section of Boston’s population, that it is today.

Before the removal of the hill tops was accomplished, this portion of the town of Boston had had some interesting associations with important events and persons. The beacon on the plot of ground set aside by the General Court in 1634-5, is commemorated by the present monument, a reproduction of one erected in 1790. A powder house was erected in 1770 not far from where West Cedar Street now intersects Pinckney. William Blaxton, the original claimant to the whole peninsula had his dwelling somewhere on the lower Beacon Street slope. His spring may have been in the northerly end of Louisburg Square and his orchard was quite likely situated between the present Mt. Vernon and Pinckney Streets not far from the head of Walnut Street. The Rev. John Cotton lived near Scollay Square. His back-yard line at the top of the hill which bore his name, is the eastern line of the Boston University Law School property in Ashburton Place. Between 1803 and 1889, the most conspicuous estate on this slope was the beautiful Mansion and gardens of Gardiner Greene, the son-in-law of the painter, John Singleton Copley. In the late 18th century before the building of the New State House, several gentlemen, among them Thomas Hancock, the uncle of John, had their country estates on Beacon Street, opposite the Common. Near the present Bowdoin Square lived Dr. Thomas Bulfinch, the grandfather of the famous architect. Governor Bowdoin lived close to the corner of the street bearing his name and Beacon Street. Opposite the Athenaeum stood the Bromfield House until 1845. On the north slope, not so far then as now from the water’s edge, a community of smaller dwellings grew up before the Revolution. Some of the inhabitants were trades-people and mechanics while nearer the water, the residents had in general an unsavory reputation. Long ago there was a division of the hill between the “bobs” and the “nabobs.” Naturally only the better dwellings, and but a few of them, have survived. The visitor to the hill will want to see the oldest houses there. They are numbers 44 and 46 will see also the African Baptist Church, built 1806, but now a Synagogue. Here in 1832 William Lloyd Garrison formed the New England Anti-Slavery Society. On Cambridge Street, the Harrison Gray Otis house (circa 1796) now the Preservation of New England Antiquities headquarters, probably designed by Bulfinch, and the church next to it, should be the occasion of an afternoon in themselves.

From many points of view, the story of the destruction of summits of “Trimountain” is as interesting as the building of its houses. Gravel was dug from Beacon Hill itself on the Derne Street side as early as 1764. The legislature was appealed to in order to stop it but nothing was done. In 1811, the town sold its beacon plot, six rods square owned by it since 1670, for ninety-three hundred dollars and removal of the summit began in earnest. In 1803, the Mount Vernon proprietors began taking down the top of Mt. Vernon, using the gravel to make Charles Street. An inclined plane was laid for the cars to slide down, the weight of the filled cars being used to drag up the empty ones. There were branch rails at the top and bottom. This has been called the “first railroad ever used in this country.” The cost of the removal seems to have been the exceptionally small sum of $404.58. The removal of Cotton Hill was begun in 1835. Of this operation we have a very careful account from Asa G. Sheldon in his Autobiography of a Wilmington Farmer. A cut of about 65 feet was made at the highest point and the gravel filled in eight acres of land north of Causeway Street. The total cost was approximately thirty thousand dollars.

The real development of that part of the hill which is so much admired architecturally began when the Mount Vernon Proprietors commenced their real estate operations in 1795. Their land purchases included roughly the areas bounded between Joy, Myrtle, Charles and Beacon Streets and the project as a whole was the greatest real estate development undertaken in Boston up to that time. The earliest house built by one of the proprietors, Benjamin Joy, which still stands, seems to be that at 29A Chestnut Street next to the Robinson Chapel of the Boston University School of Theology. It was built perhaps in 1801. The bowed front was presumably added later, for its windows contain the purple window glass distinctive in certain houses built a score of years later. Here was once the home of Edwin Booth. On the lot where the Chapel now stands, Captain Richard Crowninshield Derby, of Salem, built in 1804, a mansion which was undoubtedly the finest house which ever stood on Chestnut Street.

The houses numbered 13, 15, and 17 Chestnut Street were built by Madam Swan, one of the Mt. Vernon Proprietors, for her three daughters. Numbers 50, 56, and 60 Mt. Vernon Street are the stables which went with these houses. Mrs. Swan’s deeds to her daughters provided that the stable roofs shall never be more than thirteen feet above the street. The

In September, 1891, a young assistant professor came from Northwestern University to join the faculty of the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University. Leaving the breezy hospitality of the west and knowing Boston only as a fabled place of austere intellectuality, the transition seemed to the newcomer a momentous step.

Arriving in due time at the college building on Somerset Street, he made the customary initial visit of introduction to the dean. A cordial grasp of the hand, a hearty welcome to the new field of work, an inquiry about his selected place of residence, and an assurance that the faculty were united in greeting their new colleague, were the beginning of an acquaintance which ripened into friendship, mellowed into affection, continued unbroken until, nearly forty years later, it became the hallowed memory of a translated friend.

This initial meeting introduced Dean William Huntington to the writer of this memoir. A week or two later he met Mrs. Huntington at her home in Newton Centre, a home in the loveliest sense of the word. That gathering around the hearth was the first of a lengthening series until December 6, 1930, when the passing of the master of the house wrote the sad word Finis to that chapter.

When the final words of the pastor had been spoken at the funeral service of Dr. Huntington, the writer of this memoir went to the empty house and asked permission of the maid to enter his study for a few moments of silent farewell. Everything was exactly as he had left it; the opened book, the letters on the writing desk, the newspaper, the church weekly, — it seemed as though at any moment he might come back and resume work in the familiar retreat, — everything there except "the touch of a vanish'd hand, and the sound of a voice that is still."

As the pictures of the past like a panorama slowly follow through the memory, — happy summers at Lake Winnipesaukee, social gatherings in Newton Centre, long association in college work in the old building on Beacon Hill and later in 688 Boylston Street, through them all are seen the face, the personality, the vivid picture of Mrs. Ella Speare Huntington, an integral, inseparable part of the group.

If, thus far, we have mentioned other names in connection with her own, it is because we can never think of any function of Boston University during
Dr. Huntington's life, without mentally associating Mrs. Huntington. Socially, mentally, spiritually, they were counterparts, co-workers, ideal companions.

To the future historian of Boston University seeking dates and details the following may prove helpful. Ella Maria Speare was born in Boston, March 28, 1858, daughter of Alden Speare (one of the Associate Founders of Boston University) and Caroline Robinson Speare. She was educated in the Newton Classical High School; in 1881 she married Dr. William Edwards Huntington. There were four children: Raymond Edwards, now of Wellesley Hills, June 28, 1882; Emma Caroline, 1884, deceased; Genevieve, now wife of Dr. Bertrand E. Roberts of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 29, 1892; Miriam, now Mrs. Davis N. Ripley of Newton Centre, November 21, 1897.

Mrs. Huntington died at her home, 18 Chase Street, Newton, after an illness of two days, due to a heart attack, on Monday, October 26, 1936. The funeral service was held at the Newton Centre Methodist Episcopal Church on the following Thursday; it was conducted by Rev. Ralph B. Davis, pastor of Saint Mark's Methodist Episcopal Church, Brooklyn; he was assisted by Rev. John C. Wingett, pastor of the Newton Centre Methodist Episcopal Church and by President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University. The honorary pallbearers were: Professor Edgar S. Brightman, Frank W. Carter, Samuel T. Emery, Dr. Warren Fowell, William Thayer Rich, William L. Snow, Professor Joseph Richard Taylor, Frederick G. Thayer, Charles A. Thompson, Hugh L. Walker. Following cremation at Mount Auburn the interment was in the family lot in Newton Cemetery.

The broad scope and the diversity of Mrs. Huntington's philanthropic interests are shown by the following record.

She was a member of the Women's City Club of Boston, the Newton Centre Woman's Club, and the Newton League of Women Voters. She was president of the local Woman's Home Missionary Society, and secretary of the New England branch of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society. Her interest in foreign missions was especially deep because her father, Alden Speare, founded the Alden Speare hospital in China. She wrote a missionary pageant called A Bird's-eye View of Missions; she also wrote a missionary play which was published and has been acted in churches all over the country. She was actively interested in: The Oxford Group, The Waldensian Aid Society, The Law Enforcement Society to Strengthen Prohibition, The Allied Youth Movement, The Needlework Guild of America, the work among the mountainneers in the south, the leper colony in the Philippines, Ida Scudder's Hospital and medical missionary work in Yellore, India.

To the end of her life she continued her active and helpful interest in Boston University. She was a member of the Boston University Women's Council, of the Women Graduates' Club, and the Massachusetts Society for the University Education of Women. She was a honorary member of the class of 1887, College of Liberal Arts, and of the Boston University Alumni Association. To those who knew intimately the storm and stress period when Dr. Huntington, in response to urgent appeals, took up the heavy burden of the Presidency of Boston University, the story of Mrs. Huntington's comradeship and help is a chapter that has rarely if ever found its way into print. She stood shoulder to shoulder with him in those days of almost crushing responsibilities; she encouraged him when duties multiplied; hers was the calm clear judgment which proved him the daughter of an Alden Speare and a heroic mother. In the social life of the University her gentle graces found a rich field of opportunity. She invited groups of students to her home that she might become personally acquainted with them. She knew the problems of many worthy boys and girls and was able to help them by counsel and in more practical ways. She inaugurated the Faculty Ladies' Tens to the senior students, to encourage friendly relations between the undergraduates and the wives of the members of the faculty. This association became, later, under the wife of President Murlin, a permanent feature as the present Faculty Ladies' Club.

Amid these many details of her busy life she kept up her large correspondence with friends throughout the world. She received and answered more than a thousand letters of sympathy at the time of Dr. Huntington's death; later, when she was critically ill as the result of an accident, the great number of sympathetic messages which she received testified to the loving regard of her widely scattered friends.

The facts thus detailed may serve the future historian who seeks mere data, but they are inadequate, if one endeavors to sum up a human personality in a few paragraphs of dates and names. In the life of so noble a woman as Mrs. Ella Huntington the real, though often unrecorded facts, are her kind unselfish deeds, her never failing interest in the joys and sorrows of others, the graciousness of high breeding, the sympathy of a kind heart, the beautiful faith of a truly devout soul. Only a few of her most intimate acquaintances were aware of the extent of her bounty; she never personally referred to it; when her kind deeds were revealed it was through the gratitude of some one whom she had helped. She never failed to respond to an appeal; she even went in search of opportunities to aid those who could not or would not ask for aid.

Ella Speare Huntington. Blessed in her parentage, her father, her mother. Blessed in her husband. Blessed in her children. Blessed in her intimates who amid their tears hasten to tell the good deeds of their departed friend.

At least one of the older members of that 1891 group survives. He walks occasionally past the old manse, still standing though now partly over-shadowed by the structures of more recent times. But recollection fondly pictures the dear familiar scenes.

The young professor has told his story. He is no longer young, but memory is unimpaired. He still looks back over the long span of forty-five years to the fair September evening when in that Newton Centre home he first met the Huntington family who were destined to have so large a share in his own university life.
Wilbur Patterson Thirkield

Wilbur Patterson Thirkield, a graduate of the Boston University School of Theology in the Class of 1881, a retired Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, died in New York on Saturday, November 7. Bishop Thirkield was a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University in the Class of 1879; and in 1906 Ohio Wesleyan conferred upon him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

In 1888 Bishop Thirkield founded and was the first president of Gammon Theological Seminary at Atlanta, Georgia, recognized as a foremost school in the training of negro ministers. He remained at Gammon for seventeen years.

In 1906, with the support of President Theodore Roosevelt, Bishop Thirkield became president of Howard University in Washington, D. C.; and in 1912 he was elected a Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church. He served in the New Orleans, Mexican, South American and Chattanooga areas and retired in 1928. After his retirement, Bishop Thirkield was elected chairman of the Committee on Music and Worship of the Methodist Episcopal Church and for some years headed the same Committee in the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. He was the author of many books of religious education, the ministry and church ritual.

Funeral services were held in the Christ Church, Park Avenue and Sixtieth Street, Manhattan; and burial was in Franklin, Ohio, the Bishop’s birthplace.

Surviving are a son, Gilbert Haven Thirkield of 9 Prospect Park West, Brooklyn, vice-president of the Brooklyn Trust Company, and two daughters, Mrs. George A. Wood of Boston, and Mrs. Orwin W. E. Cook of Los Angeles.

Boston University
Home-Coming Game

It was a summer afternoon late in November. In all sections of the country, the closing football contests of the year were to take place. The air was electric with excitement. Fair women and brave men, from eighteen to eighty, in large numbers, traveled many miles to shout and sing and cheer for Alma Mater.

Boston was not without action in this great national picture.

Fenway Park was the place. Boston University vs. Boston College was the game. Outside the motors parked for the game were of value more than sufficient to erect the central building of the new University on the Charles River site.

Inside, in the bright sunshine, the rival bands were active; and the 600 men of the University Reserve Officers' Training Corps, after a parade, were seated in the center of the cheering section.

To right and left, up and down, were gathered more Boston University men and women than were ever together at one time, in one place, in all the University history.

Nowhere in the country that afternoon was there a game where the interest was kept at a higher level or where the game was played with greater sportsmanship on both sides.

The Boston University picture above drawn was made possible by the constructive work of many Boston University men.

First of all, credit should be given to President Daniel L. Marsh. For years, he has planned to have Boston University athletics on a plane where they brought honor and prestige to the University. Through his leadership, with the assistance of Treasurer Speare and the Executive Committee of the Trustees, with the co-operation of the Faculty Committee on Athletics and the Alumni Advisory Committee on Athletics, Coach L. B. "Pat" Hanley was secured; and Dr. John M. Harmon became Director of Athletics.

Following the game, as Deans, Trustees, Professors, Alumni and Students greeted each other, there was one expression common to all: "We belong to a great University."

In the following article, Murray Kramer, Supervisor of Sports Publicity, gives a picture of the game and pays a fine tribute to the glorious boys who fought that afternoon.—Editor.

The grandest and most glorious football season in Boston University's grid history was climaxxed with a smashing scoreless tie against Boston College at Fenway Park on November 21.

The cold records show five victories, two ties and one loss as a year's performance, and these results must take top ranking despite the fact that the great team of 1921 actually won six games. The '21 team, though, despite its larger number of victories, suffered two losses as compared to only one for the past year.

Glancing through the records since 1921, it is easy to see why the achievements of this past year were so outstanding. Here are the figures that tell the story:

It has been said that when writing a story, superlatives are in bad taste, but in this particular instance, going to extremes in praise is hardly enough recognition to a gallant Scarlet and White team that continually overcame odds to outfight, outsmart and defeat teams that were potentially much greater.

The Terriers opened their season with a smashing victory over American International College by the score of 40 to 0, and the following week they traveled to Toledo to defeat the Rockets 6 to 0 and ruin the Ohio Home-Coming Day. The Scarlet and White returned home after this game to prepare for the heavily-favored Washington University of St. Louis affair, and the team came through on this occasion with one of the biggest upsets of the college football year by defeating the Bears 6 to 0 at Fenway Park. This victory gave us our first national recognition in a football way.

Following this great victory, the Terriers went down to their first defeat the following Saturday at Philadelphia when they were outscored by Villanova, one of the finest teams in the nation. This loss in no way reflected any discredit to the club, as the Wildcats were an odds on favorite and there was not a football expert in the East that gave Boston University an outside chance of victory. The final score was 25 to 7, but that really does not tell the story of the closeness of the battle.

The return to victory was held up the following week when the Scarlet and White played the University of Miami to a 7 to 7 tie. Miami came to Boston with one of the greatest teams in its history, and until they met Boston University, they had not as yet been scored upon. This tie really ranked with a victory, as the Hurricanes from the South were truly a powerful eleven which ranked with the good teams in their section of the country.

After Miami came Rutgers, and the 7 to 0 victory over the school from New Jersey was one of the most enjoyable of the year. It brought Coach "Pat" Hanley, the squad and everybody else interested in Boston University keen enjoyment in having the Terriers defeat a club which only two years before had defeated them to the tune of 52 to 0. After Rutgers came Clarkson, and here the Terriers, using reserves most of the game, came through with a 14 to 7 win, the visitors score coming in the last minute of play against the Terriers’ second team. And this all leads up to the great finish which was the crowning achievement to a wonderful season.

Entering the Boston College game without a chance of even holding the powerful Eagle machine in the opinion of practically everybody interested in local football, with the exception of the team, the coaching up to the great finish which was the crowning achievement to practically everybody interested in local football has already read the accounts of the game and already knows that although the headlines said: “Boston University Holds Boston College To Scoreless Tie”, it should have read: “Boston College holds Boston University To Scoreless Tie.”

Going back over the year, we must first give credit to Coach “Pat” Hanley. The popular Terrier mentor, who promised improvement every year, more than kept his word when in three years he brought Boston University from a low rung on the football ladder to a prominent place up with the leaders. He has done much to bring the alumni, administration and students closer together, and has given us all a common cause for cheer and good feeling.

As is always the case, there are also others behind the scenes who get very little credit, but who often play a large part in the building of any successful football team — and they are the assistant coaches. Walt Holmer, who has been “Pat” Hanley’s assistant ever since Pat came to Boston, did his usual sterling job with the backs. The finest tribute which can be given Walt is a statement which a newspaperman made after the Boston College game when he said: “The Boston University backs actually handled the ball better than the Temple backs.” When you realize that Boston University uses the Warner system and Warner himself coaches Temple, you can easily see that this is praise of the highest order.

Al Kawal must also come in for a share of the credit for his work with the Terrier line. Outweighed in almost every game, his line was never outcharged or outfought. Mention must also be made of Bob McKelvey, freshman line coach, and Lee Hanley, brother of Pat, who did the scouting this year and performed their assignments so well that Pat was able to prepare adequate defenses which resulted in only two touchdowns being scored upon us this year outside of the Villanova game.

As for the boys themselves, the Terrier deserving of top ranking when honors and glory are given out is Captain Roy Thompson. Here is a boy who was not only a great football player, but who was a gentleman, a good sportsman and a leader of the finest type. He is one of the best leaders the Scarlet and White has ever had, and his loss will be greatly felt next season.

We must next pay tribute to the other seniors who are being graduated. They are Fred Nichols, Bob Allen, Dick Lynch, George Timson and Walter Gainer. Fred Nichols leaves a gap at left guard that will be exceptionally hard to fill next fall. He has played more actual time than any man on the squad and has always turned in performances which left little to be desired. Bob Allen, after two years of intensive work, finally made the grade this season and was a standout at tackle all year. Bob very definitely reaped the rewards of two years of ceaseless effort to make the grade. He is an excellent example of what can be accomplished by determination and courage. Dick Lynch will also be missed greatly, as the tall, rangy end rose to great heights in both the Washington University and Boston College games to play an important role in bringing about the two startling upsets.

To further acquaint the alumni with the other boys who have had much to do with the great success of this year’s team, let us first look at the backfield. Gary Famiglietti, the Scarlet and White’s brilliant 195-pound fullback, although out of the Washington game with injuries and handicapped by a sinus infection all season, was a standout in every game he played. His line bucking, defensive work and pass receiving ability paved the way to more than one victory the past year. In recognition of his work, Austen Lake, outstanding Boston newspaperman, in a syndicated story sent all over the country mentioned Gary as an All-American possibility from New England.

Then we have the sophomore backfield twins, Earle Crompton and Saul Nechtem: Both boys are triple threats and performed like veterans of many years all during the season. Crompton’s achievement in taking over Famiglietti’s job at fullback against Washington University and playing sixty minutes in a bruising game, during which he had his front teeth knocked out and a rib cracked, must go down in Boston University’s annals as a feat of valor. Earle played every position in the backfield and turned in finished performances no matter where he was placed. Saul Nechtem came in for as much glory as Crompton, and was every bit as spectacular. Solly reached his peak in the Boston College game against the sternest of competition and was the outstanding football player on the field that afternoon.

Another backfield member who had much to do with the five victories and two ties turned in this year, but who received little credit, is Leon Spivack, the blocking quarterback. The crowd generally follows the actions of the ball carrier and completely overlooks the blockader who is directly responsible for the success of the back who carries the ball. Time and again, Spivack cleared the way to enable Thompson, Famiglietti, Crompton and Nechtem to break away for long gains. Spivack, in addition to his blocking, was also a bearcat on defense, and the only other praise that can be given him at this time is that (Concluded on Page Twenty-Two)
Dinner Meeting of the New York Club

One of the most important dinner meetings in the history of the Boston University Club of New York was held at Greenwich House, 29 Barrow Street, New York City, on Friday evening, November 13. Present at the dinner were representatives of all departments of the University excepting Sargent College of Physical Education and the College of Music.

George B. Currier, College of Liberal Arts, Class of 1899, presided at the meeting; and during the evening, Mr. Currier received many expressions of appreciation from the Alumni for the service that he has given to the New York Club in the maintenance of a proper mailing list and the giving of helpful service.

Mrs. Mary Kingsbury Simkhovitch, College of Liberal Arts, Class of 1890, was a delightful hostess. Following the dinner, she gave an interesting picture of the origin of Greenwich House and the development of its service until it received widespread recognition in New York City and also at Washington. An opportunity was given to the Alumni to view the building and study the methods employed.

President Daniel L. Marsh spoke regarding Boston University as it is today, outlined plans for the future, and expressed deep appreciation of the notable work which graduates of the University were giving in many ways in New York. In the course of his address he introduced to the Alumni Dr. Eleanor A. Campbell, School of Medicine, Class of 1916, founder and patron for twenty years of the Judson Memorial Health Centers of New York City’s East Side, who was elected a member of the Board of Trustees at the meeting on October 8, 1936.

Russell S. Hadlock, President of the Boston University Alumni Association, was present at the meeting and gave a picture of the work and the possibilities of the Alumni Association.

There was a discussion of plans by which the Club could undertake some constructive work such as the raising of money for some gift to the University. Before adjournment it was voted that the President, Mr. Currier, appoint a committee to make plans and report at a later meeting.

Among others present at the meeting were the following: Raymond D. Allen, B.B.A. ’21; Earle O. Ames, B.B.A. ’26; Amelia E. Anthony, A.B. ’26; Walter S. Atwood, A.B. ’09; Mrs. F. Spencer Baldwin; George A. Barry, Law ’22; Warren Beebe, B.B.A. ’23; Mrs. Charley Root Bowman, Ph.B. ’88, A.B. ’90; Grace N. Brown, A.B. ’96; Doris E. Campbell, B.S.S. ’26; Eleanor A. Campbell, M.D. ’16; Normand L. Coté, B.S. in B.A. ’32; Robert H. Dolliver, S.T.B. ’29, and Mrs. Dolliver; George A. Dunn, C.L.A. ’89; Edward R. Hardy, Ph.B. ’96; Bertha F. Hayes, A.B. ’07; George W. Hicks, LL.B. ’28, and Mrs. Hicks; Edward C. Holden, Jr., LL.B. ’30; Winifred E. Howe, A.B. ’01; Mary F. Ladd, B.S. in Ed. ’28; Ruth Lindseth, B.R.E. ’28; Franklin R. Magee, Ph.B. ’88; Hazel J. McGregor, B.S.S. ’29; Albert B. Meredith, Liberal Arts ’95, L.L.D. ’30; Dorothy Mitchell, B.S. in P.A.L. ’26; Mrs. Anna A. Nolan, B.S. in Ed. ’22, and Mr. Nolan; Millard R. Robinson, A.B. ’05, S.T.B. ’01, Ph.D. ’16; Mrs. Mabel S. C. Smith, A.B. ’87, A.M. ’88; William H. Stewart, S.T.B. ’24, and Mrs. Stewart; Lucille A. Wheeler, B.R.E. ’28; Grace C. Winters, B.S. in Ed. ’36.

FALLOW GROUND

Meredith Reed, A.B.'13, is the author of FALLOW GROUND, published by the Penn Publishing Company this autumn. $2.00. John Clair Minot in the Boston Herald writes about Miss Reed's novel as follows:

"FALLOW GROUND," is a novel, written with a quiet charm, that takes the story of Janice Penfield from early girlhood through the years with all their changes to the time of contentment when she is "Mums" on the October hill on her New England farm. It is written by the author of "The Glory Trail" and she has many friends locally to rejoice in her success. Her Jan, in this story, is a character you will remember, for Miss Reed handles her vividly and naturally. And she treats her so humanly and consistently. And she treats her so humanly and naturally that it is an actual narrative you are reading.

In the opening, we see a little girl and her grandfather. The man soon passes on—though a letter he writes becomes an important factor when 30 years have passed—and we see little Jan growing up to school age. The village is not large. Her father is a doctor who has more time for good deeds than for sending out bills. Her mother is devoted to her brother who is frail. Her friends are few, and prominent among them is Lance Lawton, whose family have a summer home near by. And there is Brent Doran whose mother is regarded as "queer." He dreams of being a sculptor. She has ambitions for much beyond her village, but that remains her sphere, though she becomes a nurse when high school is behind.

The years move on—never hurriedly, for it is not that kind of a story—and the time for the world war arrives. Its effect on the home village is what was felt on a thousand American villages. Miss Reed is very successful in giving it a touch that is very real and reminiscent. Brent is one of those who go overseas and comes home at last, just after his mother's death, and shaken by his experiences while "missing." He has given up his plans for studying sculpture. Jan loves him all the while—though Lance is never out of the picture through college and afterward—and their marriage and life on a farm makes up the rest of the story.

Make up the next few years, at least. Tragedy comes and hard times that test Jan and show us the strong woman she has become. The author writes an understanding and satisfying story. The characters are true, and the action and dialogue are natural and unaffected. There are many to welcome a novel like this—peaceful, well rounded, filled with the beauty of nature and written with an appreciation of the common miracles of life.

POEMS

David Henry Kyes, A.M. 1911, Ph.D. 1913, in a volume of one hundred and sixty-six pages (The Torch Press, Cedar Rapids) has brought together a considerable number of his short poems, widely varying in mood and measure. Among them he has included seven church hymns and nine carefully studied sonnets. Many of the poems are of the type the British critics call reflective; some might be described as kindly common sense incisively driven home in verse; none of them is fantastic or insubstantial. As a specimen of the second sort, take the excerpt:

"If formers are active, reformers are done; In formative years a boy's nature is won."

Like Whittier, Dr. Kyes has no fear of bookish words, if they name or hint what he has in mind. He matches Whittier's "acclimated" and "habitude" with "amplitude" and "serrations"; not to mention his rather deft way of tucking into rhythm such terms as "jurisdiction", "psychology", "deductions", and "legislature."

Our American universities are not graduating Emersons and Longfellows, Lowells and Holmeses as in the 1829's and 30's. Bostonia congratulates Dr. Kyes on having deepened and made productive in these prosaic decades the poetic interests and impulses that he showed while in this Graduate School twenty or more years ago.

MORE THAN LORE

Marion Talbot, A.B. '80, A.M. '82, is the author of MORE THAN LORE, recently published by the University of Chicago Press.

Miss Talbot's book is more than a collection of "Reminiscences of the University of Chicago from its beginning." It is really the story of women's place in the midwestern scheme of higher education.

Miss Talbot went to the University of Chicago in 1892 as assistant professor of sanitary science; and in 1899 her title became Dean of Women. This position she held until her retirement in 1924. In 1925 Boston University conferred upon her the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

Referring to the history of women on the faculty at Chicago University, Miss Talbot comments as follows:

"This résumé of the history of women on the Faculty has its disheartening aspect and seems to confirm the widespread conviction that present-day conditions offer little opportunity for women to receive recognition for intellectual and administrative gifts. Dis-encouragement is quite general, but here and there the battle cry is heard. The women of today must not falter in claiming the right to use their powers, and they will find more to encourage than to dishearten if they scrutinize this sketch of what has happened at Chicago in less than forty years."
In Memoriam

Robert James Peaslee

Robert James Peaslee, a graduate of the School of Law in the Class of 1886, and for ten years Chief Justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, died in Boston on August 24.

Judge Peaslee was born in Weare, New Hampshire, September 23, 1864, the son of Robert and Persis B. (Dodge) Peaslee. His father was a farmer and land surveyor. Judge Peaslee was educated at Cushing Academy and at the Arms Academy, Shelburne Falls. After graduating from the Boston University School of Law in the Class of 1886, he opened an office in Manchester, New Hampshire, for the practice of his profession.

During his early years of practice, Judge Peaslee was a staunch Democrat and took an active part in politics. His activities in this field were halted by his elevation to the State’s highest tribunal. His counsel was greatly valued by the conservative business men; and he became a Director of the Amoskeag National Bank and the Amoskeag Trust Company.

Since 1911 Judge Peaslee acted as lecturer on Domestic Relations in the Boston University School of Law. He acted as chairman of the Commission to revise the public laws of the State of New Hampshire. For six years he was an Associate Justice of the Superior Court of New Hampshire; and in 1894 he was made (Concluded on Page Twenty-Three)

Elmer H. Fletcher

Elmer H. Fletcher, a graduate of the Boston University School of Law in the Class of 1896, died in Brockton on August 31.

Mr. Fletcher was a practicing attorney in Brockton for forty-two years, and was probably the most prominent alumni of the Boston University School of Law practicing in Plymouth County. Since his graduation in 1896, Mr. Fletcher has been closely connected with the Boston University Law School Alumni Association and active in its affairs. During the campaign for the Fiftieth Anniversary Endowment Fund, Mr. Fletcher had charge of the activities of the Committee in Plymouth County; and in connection with that Fund he made a gift of $500.

For many years, Mr. Fletcher was associated with Loyed E. Chamberlain, LL.B. ’79, Judge of the Probate Court at Brockton. In 1921 Mr. Fletcher formed a partnership with Harry K. Stone, a graduate of the Boston University School of Law in the Class of 1916; and their office was located in the Home Bank Building in Brockton.

Mr. Fletcher was born in Boston and went to Brockton at an early age. He was graduated from the Brockton High School in 1902 and began the study of law in the office of the late Judge Fred M. Bixby and the late Judge Herbert H. Chase. After (Concluded on Page Twenty-Two)

THE SWAN HOUSES
13, 15, 17 Chestnut Street, 1806
Probably by Bulfinch. Recessed arch windows on first floor; band course between first and second stories; full-length windows on second story Deeds also provide for the perpetual maintenance of a passageway eight feet five inches wide through which the inhabitants of the three houses have the right of “ingress and egress for themselves and their cattle.” This accounts for the low buildings with the broad doorway on Mt. Vernon Street directly behind these houses.

Meanwhile, other houses were being built on Mt. Vernon Street. Harrison Gray Otis, though he had occupied his house on Cambridge Street only a short time before, built Number 85, Stephen Higginson, Jr., Number 87, and David Humphreys, Number 89. The former two are unchanged. Further up the street, Numbers 55, 57, and 59 are architecturally interesting. Number 57 was the town house of Charles Francis Adams, Minister to England during the Civil War. Thomas Bailey Aldrich lived at Number 59 at one time. Number 63, now unfortunately transformed, was the home of Governor William Claffin and here the Massachusetts Society for the University Education of Women was organized. To readers of this magazine, Numbers 72 and 74 will be of special interest. Now the home of the School of Theology, the double house was built by John E. and Nathaniel Thayer in 1847. The architect was Richard Upjohn, an Englishman, who also designed Trinity Church in New York. Several of the rooms, though transformed from their original purposes, fortunately have been unchanged.

Some of the narrow streets of the hill, or lanes, are especially delightful. Of these, Acorn Street, delightfully quaint, still retains its cobblestone paving. But the very essence of the Hill is Louisburg Square, named in honor of New England’s great victory of 1745. Though no single house is especially distinguished from the architectural point-of-view, the Square, as a whole, has an air of distinction and of seclusion hard to match anywhere else in Boston. William Dean Howells lived at Number 4, and Louisa Alcott and her father, Bronson Alcott, at Number 10. Jenny Lind was married at Number 20. At Number 8, once lived Mrs. Andrew C. Pearing, whose given name, Aldeberontophosphonia, entitles her to be mentioned in any story of the Hill. At Number 3, Joseph Tasiigi once lived. It is to his generosity that residents of the Square are indebted for the statues of Columbus and Aristides the Just, which ornament the grass-plot. From 1850 to 1856, a fountain was situated in the center. The entire Square is private property, owned by the abutters, including those on the Pinckney Street side, but not those on Mt. Vernon Street.

Perhaps this is sufficient factual information on which to base a first brief historical tour to the Hill. Beacon Street, with its famous residences, has been entirely omitted and dozens of interesting facts left out. But congenial personalities need but an introduction upon which to base close friendships. The Hill has been introduced. May the reader feel inclined to further his acquaintance. He will find it worth while.

Editorial Comment
Regarding the Annual Report of President Marsh

Boston University

From time to time we have had occasion to praise Boston University and its lofty-visioned President for their contribution to education, good-citizenship, national and international good-will. On the occasion of Doctor Marsh’s tenth anniversary as guiding head of this great seat of learning, we referred editorially to the qualities of his head and heart; his learning, his wisdom, his integrity, fearlessness and sterling character. Tolerant and generous, Doctor Marsh hates tyranny and oppression wherever they show their heads, and as we said before in these columns, President Marsh is more than a university president.

Now, as we read the annual report he delivered to the trustees of the University, we again note the breadth of sympathy and his understanding of the task of the modern university in the social scheme in order that human welfare be served in a constructive way. Dr. Marsh’s statement of facts should be read very carefully by all those interested in helping to make this world a better place to live in. It shows that the University, while constantly attaining new intellectual heights, is not satisfied to stand still in a world torn by strife and dissension; but is making a great and noble effort to promote world peace and understanding. Is there any wonder that the University has recently been awarded the FIDAC educational medal for distinguished service in promoting international understanding and good-will? We rejoice in the work of the “master builder” of Boston University, whose daily constructive work enriches the State and Nation, and whose name is one of honor and distinction in the educational world.

Coach Hanley is mighty happy to have him back for another year.

In the line, Al Holgerson, Harold Canavan and Lou Rudolph performed brilliantly at the end positions all season. Canavan is particularly deserving of mention due to the fact that he weighs only 153 pounds, but he refused to allow his lack of weight to handicap him as he more than made up for it by his aggressiveness and cleverness. Felix Dixon at right tackle was a stone wall defensively all during the campaign, and in addition to his sterling line play, also did most of the punting and his long kicks took the Terriers out of danger on several occasions.

Coming down to the guard positions, we must pay special tribute to Max Miller, the 155-pound watch charm guard. Although one of the smallest guards in college ranks, Maxie played an iron man role all year and was never taken out because of injuries. Although badly battered and bruised after every game, he came back the following Saturday ready to play sixty minutes, and his work from a professorial standpoint would have always given him a rank of straight A. And last but far from least, homage must be paid to Johnny Walker, brilliant sophomore center, who, despite weather elements of all types, never made a bad pass, and who as a roving center on defense was a bulwark of strength in every game played this past year.

Before concluding this article, there was one thing that was prevalent all during the year which is probably as important, if not more so, than the actual victories turned in — and that was the sportsmanship and cleanliness exhibited by the boys all year. Time and again during the season, officials congratulated Coach “Pat” Hanley on the spirit and the clean football played by his boys. In several games, we won’t mention names, the boys took unnecessary physical beatings, but they never attempted to retaliate. They continued to play hard football, and by following their assignments and nothing else, they came through to bring Boston University the most glorious season in its history. The coaching was great, the spirit was great and to sum up the whole situation — everything was great!

Elmer H. Fletcher

that he entered the Boston University School of Law and graduated with the Class of 1896.

Mr. Fletcher became prominent in many lines of activity in Plymouth County. For many years he was chairman of the Plymouth Bar Association and was a member of the American Bar Association. He was vice-president of the People’s Savings Bank in Brockton and in the course of his business had the care of many large estates.

Mr. Fletcher married Miss Florence A. Miller of Camden, Maine. She died in 1908. Some years later Mr. Fletcher married Miss Mabel A. Erskine, a native of Rockland, Maine.

Surviving are a son, Robert M. Fletcher, a graduate of the Boston University School of Law in the Class of 1904, who is associated with the firm of Fletcher & Stone, a granddaughter, Judith, and a son, Fred H. Fletcher, by his second wife.

Mr. Fletcher was vice-chairman of the Porter Congregational Church and was closely connected with many of its activities. Edmund J. Campbell of Brockton, president of the Brockton Bar Association, made the following statement in connection with Mr. Fletcher’s death:

“With the death of Attorney Elmer H. Fletcher this community lost one of its outstanding citizens, and the legal profession lost one of its most capable and respected members.

“No lawyer who has come to the bar in Plymouth County in this generation has made such a marked impression for his ability, sincerity and, above all, integrity.

“He took an active interest in the civic and political life of his city and State but never allowed party policies to rule his independent judgment on issues of consequences and placed the character of candidates above their party designation. He was governed by the sincere desire to aid and assist in matters which he believed to be worth while and for the benefit of his fellow men.

“We sincerely hope that his honorable and successful career in the profession which he loved so much will serve as an inspiration to the younger members of the bar.”

Judge Peaslee

Chief Justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court. In 1927 Boston University conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

After his retirement, Judge Peaslee joined the law firm of Demond, Woodworth, Silloway, Piper and Jones of Concord as advisory counsel.

Judge Peaslee generously gave his time to civic enterprises. He was president of the Board of Trustees of the Currier Gallery of Art, a counselor of the Manchester Institute of Arts and Sciences and a Trustee of Bache Hospital. He was also a trustee of the Holderness School at Plymouth. He was a devout member of Grace Episcopal Church in Concord and served for many years as vestryman.

Judge Peaslee was greatly interested in Boston University and in its School of Law. From the beginning of the Association until his death, he was a helpful and co-operative member of the Boston University Alumni Association.

Judge Peaslee possessed a delightful sense of humor and a talent for the making of friends. During his ten years as Chief Justice of the New Hampshire Supreme Court, he made a notable record as a profound student of the law.

Increased Enrollment

An increase in enrollment of nearly 1500 students is noted at Boston University this fall in the announcement of registration figures of October 15, 1936, from the office of the President. The increase is in comparison with last fall's total registration of 8874 students with this year's total of 10,335, the difference in actual figures being 1461.

Largest enrollment, according to the statistics, is in the Boston University College of Liberal Arts where 2370 students are registered this fall. Second in numbers is the School of Education with 2036 students. The total figure is based on a student body of 8874 students with this year's total of 10,335, the difference in actual figures being 1461.

The women students will serve as class officers in the College of Liberal Arts. They are: Elizabeth P. Williamson, Medford, president; Alice M. Chamberlin, Newtonville, vice-president; Charlotte A. Conklin, Newton, secretary; and Ruth Friedman, Brookline, treasurer.

Military Ball

Advance announcement by the committee of the date of Boston University's major social event of the fall and winter season reveals that this year's all-university Military Ball will be held on Friday evening, Dec. 11, in the main ballroom of the Stather Hotel.

Dancing to the music of Ruby Newman's orchestra will be the background for an elaborate evening's program. The title of "Honor" and "Health," and the selection of 1937 will assure the Ball is held annually. This is the first year for a long while that such an honor has been given any Boston University co-ed.

Trick drill maneuvers by the prize platoon of the Boston University R.O.T.C. unit will be one of the entertainment features during the special drill presentation that of presenting bars of membership into Scabbard and Blade, national honorary military fraternity, will be performed by the senior cadet officers and the officers of the local chapter.

John E. Arthur of Ft. Barancas, Florida, leads the committee for the ball which includes: Edward Gensch, Dorchester; Jacob Katz, Mattapan; Vincent Caggiula, Mattapan; and Robert Landess, East Milton. Cadet Captain Richard Lynch of Roslindale, is in charge of the special drill platoon.

Fellowships and Assistantships

The announcement of the award of fourteen fellowships and forty-two assistantships for graduate study in the Graduate School has been made by Dr. Daniel L. Marsh and Dean Howard M. LeSourd. The fellowships provide a cash award which is applied on tuition, while the assistantships carry full tuition and half dormitory room expenses.

Of the 56 graduate students who have received scholarships, 32 are working for the Master of Arts degree, and 24 for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Their fields include English, music, medical sciences, education, philosophy, Romance Languages, mathematics, fine arts, history, chemistry, physics, geology, biology, German, government, physical education, religious education, and psychology. The students come from 14 different states, Washington, D. C., and Canada.

The fellowship recipients who are studying for the Ph.D. degree are: Henry A. Black, Boston; Eric W. Carlson, Worcester; William P. McEwen, Williamsport, Indiana; Sankey L. Sheets, Greensburg, Pennsylvania. Those studying for the degree of Master of Arts are: Claudia M. Edwards, Louisville, Kentucky; Sarah M. Farthing, East St. Louis, Illinois; Ernest W. Hey, Methuen; Frances E. Lowell, Hartford, Connecticut; Barbara M. Pierce, Reading; Murray E. Satz, Mattapan; Donald B. Tillotson, Wilmington, New York; Elizabeth M. Wheeler, Washington, D. C.; Leon E. Wright, Boston; George Kwon, Seoul, Korea.

College of Liberal Arts

Lyman Churchill Newell History of Chemistry Room

Faculty, students and friends of the late Professor Lyman C. Newell of the College of Liberal Arts, met on Thursday afternoon, November 19, in Room 22, at one o'clock to celebrate the formal opening of the Lyman Churchill Newell History of Chemistry Room in the College. The room contains the collection of chemistry material gathered and owned by Dr. Newell, professor of chemistry in the College of Liberal Arts from 1904 until his death in 1935.

The collection, containing books, letters, medals, and pictures related to the history of chemistry, was presented to the University by Mrs. Newell and will be on view by appointment in the special room in the College of Liberal Arts. Dr. Newell had as his hobby the collection of anything pertaining to the historical development of chemistry and he spent much of his many trips to Europe with Mrs. Newell in looking for old and rare books and letters.

Dr. Gustavus J. Esselen of Boston, a well known consulting chemist, was the principal speaker in the opening exercises. Other speakers included: Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, Dean William M. Warren of the College of Liberal Arts; and Dr. J. Philip Mason, of the chemistry department in the College.

The Committee in charge of the collection included: chairman, Dr. Mason; Dr. Holmes; Helen M. Stevens; and Marguerite F. Symonds members of the College of Liberal Arts chemistry department faculty. The advisory committee on the Newell Collection consists of Dr. Esselen; Avery A. Ashdown, professor of organic chemistry, Massachusetts Institute of Technology; and Alfred H. Avery of the Boston University Board of Trustees.

Dr. Newell was connected with the chemistry department of Boston University College of Liberal Arts from 1904 until the time of his death in 1935. He received his Ph.B. degree from Brown University in 1890, and the following year was given his Master of Arts degree. In 1895, he received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Johns Hopkins University. Before coming to Boston University, he taught chemistry at Pawtucket High School, Somerville High School, and Lowell Normal School.

Class Elections

Following what has been the custom of other classes for many years, the four classes at the College of Liberal Arts have elected girls to the presidency of the various groups. The women students will serve as class presidents.

Class of 1937

leaders until February, when, in accordance with tradition, four men will be elected to serve for the remainder of the year.

Virginia Parker, of Saugus, and Brightree, is president of the senior class; and Elizabeth Yukevitz, of Roslindale, is head of the third-year students. Both have been active in college affairs. Miss Yukevitz is an officer of the French Club and a member of the staff of the Beacon, college literary publication. The sophomore president is Phyllis Hood, of Brighten, who has been elected to deal of work for the college Y.W.C.A. Susan Treadwell, of Fairfield, Connecticut, is the freshman president.

Frederick Lea of Hull, president of the all-University Student Council, was elected vice-president of the senior class; and John King of Worcester, manager of the varsity debating team, is the assistant secretary.

Other officers are secretary, Francesca Racopi, Salem; treasurer, Sylvia Todd, Rowley; assistant treasurer, Carl Wallquist, Dorchester.

College Officers

The sophomore president is Phyllis Hood, of Bryant, who has been active in the College. Esther O’Brien, of Boston, a member of the present Dean’s Cabinet and of Beta Gamma Sigma, national honorary business college, and of the Commerce and commerce, was elected secretary.

Cron, McNulty, and Timson also were elected to serve on the House of Representatives of the governing body. Other members of the senior class honored with positions on this body include: Roy Thompson, of Westwood, captain of the varsity football team and a member of Skull; Raymond Maddocks, of Dorchester, varsity football player; William H. Scully, of Cambridge, member of Skull and Blade; Edward Gesick, of Dedham, member of Skull and Blade; Edward C. Wheeler of Wayland, editor of the Hub, Boston University, and the only senior who has been on the student governing body for four years, Kenneth Tingley of Plymouth, member of Skull and Blade; David Skoler of Quincy; and Eugene A. Long of Allston.

College of Practical Arts and Letters

“A. A.” Formal

The first important formal dance of the year at the College of Practical Arts and Letters was that sponsored by the Women’s Athletic Association, which was held the night before the Boston University-Boston College game. This year’s “A. A.” was scheduled for November 20 from nine to one in the Crystal Ballroom of the Hotel Puritan, with Jim Carmody’s orchestra furnishing the music.

Ruth Chandler of Roxbury was chairman of the dance committee, and was assisted by the following girls: Nora van der Groen, Newton; Frances Melrose; Frances Townsend, Weston; Janet Bornhoff, Belmont. The following officers of the association were also active on the committee: president, Carrie Douce; vice-president, Lynn; treasurer, Rosalia Cramer, West Pawlet, Vermont.

College of Physical Education

Rhode Island Senior Club

The Sargent College of Physical Education of the college of the country’s foremost leaders in the field of recreation, spoke on November 18 at a meeting of the Rhode Island Senior Club, which was held at the Pawtucket West Puckett, Rhode Island. Accompanying Dean Hermann, as one of the guests of honor, was Mrs. J. W. King, Jr., of Cambridge, president of the national Sargent alumni association.

The committee in charge of the meeting was headed by Miss Rachel L. Fitzgerald of Barrington, president of the Rhode Island Senior Club. Assisting her were the other officers of the organization: vice-president, Mrs. Irving G. Smith, Providence; recording secretary, Madeleine Trow, Providence; corresponding secretary, Maud Johnson, Providence; treasurer, Madeleine Higgins, Providence.

“Sargent’s” Formal

The most important all-school dance of the year at Sargent College of Physical Education was held November 20 at the College in Cambridge, when the traditional “Sargent’s” formal took place in the gymnasium from thirty to one o’clock. The dance itself, which was held for the benefit of Sargent, the College yearbook, was preceded by open house at Lennox Hall. Sargent dormitory, Jim Carmody’s orchestra played for dancing.

Following a custom which was inaugurated several years ago, a number of men student leaders from other Departments of the University were invited to serve as ushers. Included in this group were: William Lynch, Charlestown, president of the Student Government Association at the School of Education; Edward Gesick of Dedham, president of the Newman Club, College of Business Administration; Doric Alviani of Salem, president of the Gilbert and Sullivan Association, and the Men’s Glee Club; Frederick Lea of Hull, president of the all-University Student Council; Jack Wallace of the Athletic Association; and the Student Physical Education committee at the School of Education.

The Sargent College hostesses were: Agnes Barker, Rutherford, New Jersey; Patricia Lyons, Puyallup, Washington; Maria Sweeney, Simsbury, Connecticut; Charlotte Township, White Plains, New York; Ethel Teter, Collingswood, New Jersey; Dorothy Pierce, Leominster; Ann Carroll, Lenoir,

SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY

Students' Night Dinner

Students and faculty of the School of Theology were guests of the Boston Methodist Social Union at the annual Students' Night Dinner of the organization Monday evening, November 16, at 6 o'clock in the Boston Chamber of Commerce building. The annual dinner is one of the highlights of the School year and is made possible through the heartily received from the late Roswell R. Robinson and his daughter, the late Mrs. G. Louis Richards, former trustees of Boston University.

Dr. Underhay Lee, Dean of the School of Religion, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee, was the chief speaker. His address was, "When the Church Speaks." Dr. Lee, one of the most distinguished writers on Methodist history in the Methodist Church, South. He has just published a book on "John Wesley and Modern Religion" that is receiving wide attention.

William J. Kurtz, president of the Social Union, gave the welcoming address. Ralph W. Decker of Duamore, Pennsylvania, a member of the senior class in the School of Theology, represented the student body in responding to Mr. Kurtz's address. Hon. C. Weil of Wilmette, Illinois, president of the faculty and students of the School of Theology, acted as song leader for the evening.

Guests of honor included, in addition to the faculty and students of the School of Theology, President and Mrs. Daniel L. Marsh; Dr. C. Bay Speare, University treasurer; members of the Trustees' Standing Committee for the School; and District Superintendents of New England, New England Southern and New Hampshire Conferences of the Methodist Church.

SCHOOL OF LAW

Dean Johnson Abroad

Dean Johnson, dean of the School of Law, left New York October 29 on the Ile de France for a trip to Europe which included visits to England, Scotland, France, Germany, Denmark, Norway and Sweden.

In Paris, Dean Johnson attended a conference with representatives from Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, France, Czecho-Slovakia and other countries who met to discuss present governmental trends in Europe.

In Copenhagen, the Dean was received by King Christian in a private audience. At this time, he presented His Majesty with the jewel of an emeritus member of the Supreme Council, 33°, A.A.S.R., for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States.

Dean Johnson holds the rank of Most Puissant Sovereign Grand Commander in this organization.

In Sweden, Dean Johnson and his party were the guests of the Grand Lodge of Masons at Stockholm, of which King Gustav V is Grand Master, and the Crown Prince is the Deputy Grand Master. King Gustav gave a banquet in honor of the party and was presented with the jewel of an emeritus member of the Supreme Council, 33°, A.A.S.R., for the Northern Masonic Jurisdiction of the United States.

The group stayed for a week in Edinburgh, where they attended the bicentenary celebration of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Scotland. On Monday, November 30, the Duke of York was installed as Grand Master Mason of Scotland, which over a hundred Americans attended. On December 8, in London, the Earl of Donoughmore will be host at a dinner for Dean Johnson and his party; and the following day, Dean Johnson will sail for the United States.

Class Officers

Ralph S. Cohen, of Dorchester, has been elected president of the class. He is chancellor of Tau Epsilon Rho, internationa/ legal fraternity, and was a member of the junior prom committee last year.

Two of the officers were elected for the third consecutive year: J. W. McEvoy of Somerville, who is again serving as vice-president, and Maurice T. Taylor of Norwich, Connecticut, who is Student Council representative. McEvoy was a member of the Boston University football team while an undergraduate at the College of Business Administration. The only female officer is Sahnya T. Mass secretary, who was formerly a member of the debating team at the College of Liberal Arts. Stanley W. Ferris of Lowell, is the class treasurer.

Junior class elections resulted in the following choices for officers: president, Joseph D. Ward, Fitchburg; vice-president, Lawrence E. Milena, Jr., Norwich, Connecticut; secretary, Phyllis A. Sullivan; treasurer, Edward J. Nantoski; law student council representative, Frank S. Cappuccio, Westerly, Rhode Island. Ward was a member of the Student Council last year and formerly attended Holy Cross College; Miss Sullivan, who holds an A.B. degree from Trinity College, was re-elected, as was Nantoski, a former College of Business Administration student. Cappuccio, formerly of Providence College, is a member of "Law Review." Milena also attended the College of Business Administration.

In accordance with the School of Law procedure for student council members, two students were reappointed by the Dean and faculty to serve another term. These appointments are in addition to the election of one representative from each class. For the senior class, Hobart A. Cole of Kittery, Maine, was reappointed, holds an A.B. degree from Bowdoin College and was last year vice-president of the Council. Elwood H. Hettrick of Somerset, a member of "Law Review," will represent the junior class.

Hettrick is a graduate of Wesleyan University, A.B. degree.

SCHOOL OF EDUCATION

Full-Time Graduate Students' Organization

For the first time in the history of the School, full-time graduate students in the School of Education now have their own student government organization, formed to promote social life among the students and to offer a program of activities which will be of benefit to the graduate group, and to the School as a whole. Carl Rittner of Dorchester, was elected president of the group at a meeting held November 8 in the Soden Building.

Other officers are: vice-president, Alfa Guyar, Hanover, New Hampshire; secretary-treasurer, Grace Gowen, Central Village, Connecticut; program committee, Brony Kastanti, Brockton; Albert Slavin, Dorchester; George Bartlett, Boston. The graduate division plans to bring outstanding speakers to the School of Education, and also plans to have a number of joint meetings with the students in the Graduate School of the University.

Pi Lambda Theta

The election of new officers marked the initiation meeting of Pi Lambda Theta, national honor society for women in education, which was held October 19 at the Woman's Building, by Alpha Gamma Chapter of Boston University. Dr. Donald D. Durrell, professor of psychology in the School of Education, was the speaker.

Mrs. Madei Tuckey Hatch of Melrose, is the new president of the organization. Other officers are: vice-president, Helen M. Sullivan, New Bedford; secretary, Helen Weeks, Farmington, Maine; treasurer, Marie Morris, Thomaston, New Hampshire; keeper of the records, Grace Gowen, Central Village, Connecticut.

The following new members were initiated: Miss Elizabeth Lamson, research director for the city of Boston; Miss Mildred March, principal of the John Ward School in Newton; Miss Ruth Dority, principal of the Carr School in Newton. The undergraduates are Mrs. Ellen Owen, Medford; Helen Weeks; Selma Krouvdizi, New Bedford; Ettie Christiansen, Westerly, Rhode Island. All were chosen on a basis of scholarship, character and ability in their profession.

Mrs. John J. Mahoney of Watertown, faculty adviser and honorary member, was toastmistress, and the speakers included Dr. Jesse B. Davis, dean of the School of Education; Miss Carol Smith, delegate from the Harvard chapter of Pi Lambda Theta; and Miss Eleanor R. Mosby, Boston University director of publicity, who spoke for the alumni.

Dramatic Club

Future teachers who are now studying at the School of Education will be well equipped to help their students produce plays and programs, because of the work in the school Dramatic Club, which helps them train. The new president of the Club, who is also the speaker of the year November 4 at the Soden Building. The Dramatic Club, which is one of the newer student organizations in the School of Education, is becoming increasingly popular each year, and plans a program of special speakers at club meetings and the presentation of a number of short plays at college assemblies. The season will close with the presentation of a three-act play early in the spring.

Caro Grace of Everett, one of the most active members of the Club, was elected president. Other officers are: vice-president, Lucie De Haro, Jamaica Plain; treasurer-business manager, Milton Matthews, Boston; secretary, Clarinda Magnetic, Woonsocket, Rhode Island; toastmistress, and the speakers included Dr. Margaret Smith, professor of dramatic art, is the faculty adviser.

Student Government Cabinet and Dance

With every table reserved nearly a week in advance, the third annual cabaret and dance, sponsored by the Student Government social committee at the School of
BOSTONIA: THE BOSTON UNIVERSITY ALUMNI MAGAZINE

Education was held in Alumni Hall, Soden Building, November 18 from eight to twelve-thirty. It had been transformed into the "Club Phibs" for the evening, with real night club atmosphere, even to the floor show which was composed of student talent and entertainers from several large Boston hotels. Sum Gardner's "Musical Notes" played for dancing.

In addition to three professional acts, the floor show featured Doris Alvani of Salem, senior in the College of Music, and well known to New England radio and concert audiences for his fine baritone voice; Gordon Hathaway of Boston, a former New England amateur middleweight champion, performed rope-skipping stunts to music. The program concluded with several piano accordan solos by Guido Marchio of Sagamore.

Dean and Mrs. Jesse B. Davis, with Miss Aileen Davis, and all members of the faculty and office force were guests of honor at the cabaret. Chaperons for the evening included Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Rand Rogers, Prof. and Mrs. Edgar Everts, and Mr. and Mrs. James Wiley.

The Wallace of Medford, chairman of the social committee, was general chairman of the cabaret committee. Assisting him in receiving was Frances Jefferson of Framingham. Other members of the committee were:ushers, William Lynch, Charlestown; Raleigh Glynn, Needham; Alfred Starratt, Wollaston; Perry Jackson, Boston; refreshments, Gordon Hathaway; Florence Pacetti, Arlington; Vincent Cohee, Malden; tickets, Ralph Rubin, Taunton; Betty Voos, New Haven, Connecticut.

Notice has reached the Alumni Office of the death of Charles F. Sharpe, Theology, on June 7 at Fullerton, California. Surviving are his widow, a daughter, a son and five grandchildren.

EMMA ATKINSON ALMY, '82

Mrs. James F. Almy (Emma S. Atkinson, A.B., A.M. '80) died October 24 at her home in Salem.

Following her graduation from Boston University, Mrs. Almy became a teacher of English and German at a high school in Washington, D. C., resigning that position in 1883 to become vice-president of the Washington, D. C., Normal School.

On the death of her husband, Mrs. Almy became a partner in the firm of Almy, Beebe & Washburn, a department store in Salem, and sold her holdings in 1900. She is survived by two daughters, two sisters and a grandson.

MORTON BARROWS, '83

Morton Barrows, LL.B., died in St. Paul, Minnesota, September 14, after an illness of several years.

M. r. Barrows was born in Reading, June 14, 1856, the son of William and Elizabath (Cate) Barrows. In 1873 Mr. Barrows' father sent his son to Phillips Academy to prepare for Harvard, from which he received his A.B. with the Class of 1880. After graduating from the School of Law, he went to St. Paul. In the early years, he supplemented his law practice by teaching school. In 1895 Mr. Barrows married Ada Noble of St. Paul.

For fifteen years he was a member of the faculty of the St. Paul College of Law, and lectured on torts.

He managed to settle aside from his extensive practice time for the pursuit of two hobbies — gardening and hunting. For years he maintained one of the finest gardens in St. Paul.

Mrs. Barrows, two daughters and five grandchildren survive.

JOHN HOWARD NEAL, '88

He was born in Elliot, Maine, in 1838. Previous to going to Boston for his college education, he attended school at Kent's Hill, Maine. He received his M.D. degree from Howard University. In 1866 he went to Guatemala, where he was aiding the missionaries and remained there for three years. For a number of years, with his wife, he was actively connected with the Sanitarium and Hospital of the city of Guatemala, where he maintained an office.

In 1893 he moved to Quincy, Illinois, to take charge of the Quincy Memorial Sanitarium.

Besides his wife, he leaves a son, Viril R. Neal, a daughter and a sister.

FRANK C. WALKER, '84

Frank C. Walker, M.D., died at Windsor, Vermont, October 19.

He was born in Taunton, September 15, 1838, the son of Edsel and Hulda (Willbur) Walker. Following his graduation from the School of Medicine, he was connected for several years with the Adams Nervine Asylum and the Consumptives' Home in Dorchester. Here he met Jean Brothers, a nurse, whom he married in 1855.

For seventeen years he was city physician in Taunton and was on the staff of the Morton Hospital in that city. He then went to Nantucket where he conducted a private sanitarium. During the War, he practiced at Bath, Maine; and following the death of his wife in 1890, he went to Portland to practice.

He married Mrs. Julia H. Cowdery of Windsor, Vermont, in 1923, and after continuing to practice in Portland for a year, went to Windsor, where he served as health officer for the past twelve years.

He is survived by his wife and one daughter.

BOSTONIA: THE BOSTON UNIVERSITY ALUMNI MAGAZINE
A BUILDER
An old man traveling a lone highway
Came at the evening cold and gray
To a chasm deep and wide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
For the sullen stream had no fears for him:
But he turned when he reached the other side
And builded a bridge to span the tide.
“Old Man,” cried a fellow pilgrim near,
“You are wasting your strength with building here:
Your journey will end with the closing day
And you never again will pass this way.
You have crossed the chasm deep and wide,
Why build you a bridge at eventide?”
And the builder raised his old, gray head.
“Good friend, in the path I have come,” he said,
“There followeth after me today
A youth whose feet must pass this way.
This stream, which has been as nought to me
To that fair-headed boy may a pitfall be:
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim—
Good friend, I am building this bridge for him.”
