All Alumni of Boston University

As most of us know, the ground has been broken . . . construction is actually in progress on the new College of Liberal Arts, the College of Music, and Science buildings.

During the fund-raising campaign of last year, the Alumni Fund pledged itself to raise $250,000 over a period of three years . . . and this contribution is vital if the work on these buildings is to attain successful conclusion.

Our Alumni Fund goal this year is $80,000 . . . of which, as BOSTONIA goes to press, only $50,000 is definitely in sight. We need . . . we must raise . . . the remaining $30,000 if work on the new campus is to continue.

THE ALUMNI ROLL CALL FOR 1946 IS ON!

Join in with your contribution . . . bigger and better than ever!
If this were your family, you’d know what you want to see in future photographs. But will you?

Have the children’s education and mother’s needs been provided for—just in case you step out of the picture? Or, even if you live long past your span—will you be free from financial worry?

Perhaps you’re all set—no matter what happens. But remember, all things human change. The perfect insurance program of a year ago may not fit your needs now. Wouldn’t it be a good idea to check up on your policies with your New England Mutual Career Underwriter today?

Can you guess the rest of the pictures?

Rhode Island

The Boston University Club of Rhode Island held its first meeting of 1946 at the Narragansett Hotel in Providence on Friday, October 18. President Francis I. McCanna presided. A large and interested group was present.

The chief emphasis of the meeting was football at Boston University. The speakers included: Head Coach Walt Holmer of the Terrier football team; Dr. John M. Harmon, University Director of Athletics, and Warren S. Freeman, Executive Secretary of the Boston University Alumni Association.

Considerable interest at the meeting was centered on the Boston University-Brown game on October 25, at the Brown Stadium. A large delegation of Rhode Island alumni was present at the game to give support to the fighting Terriers.

Maine

A meeting of Boston University alumni in attendance at the Maine Teachers Convention was held on Thursday, October 24, at the Penobscot Exchange Hotel in Bangor, Maine. Many teachers, who have studied at the University and who were present at the convention, heard talks by Dean Donald D. Durrell of the School of Education, Mr. Winston Keck, who is in charge of educational placement of the Boston University Placement Service, and Warren S. Freeman, Executive Secretary of the Boston University Alumni Association.

Several teachers present expressed interest in the formation of the Boston University clubs in various cities and towns in Maine. News of these clubs will appear in future issues of BOSTONIA.

Worcester

One of our most active Boston University Alumni groups, the Boston University Women's Club of Worcester, is again having an active season under the presidency of Miss Mary G. O'Flynn.

The first meeting of the year was held on October 5 from 2:30 to 5 p.m. in the Worcester Art Museum. New members were welcomed by Miss Eleanor Reardon, Chairman of the Membership Committee. The hostess for the day was Miss Eleanor Murray. The second meeting will be a workshop meeting on social problems, Thursday, November 14, at Mrs. Jacob Kessler's house at 8 p.m.

Officers for the Worcester Alumni Club are:

President: Mary G. O'Flynn
First Vice-President: Helen Uphraim
Second Vice-President: Mrs. Walter F. Beth Corresponding Secretary: Estelle Harrar
Recording Secretary: Margaret Broderick
Treasurer: Mrs. John Francis O'Connor
Auditor: Mrs. Jacob Kessler
Chairman of the Nominating Committee: Mrs. F. Joseph Donohue Better Films Representative: Mrs. Henry C. Walsh.

Lawrence

The Organization Committee of the Boston University Club of Lawrence has been active during the past few weeks. Meetings have been held, and plans are now under way for a series of group meetings during the coming season. Lawrence alumni will be notified of these meetings by mail. The organizing committee at present includes:

Michael J. Batal, 56 Nesmith Street, Lawrence, Massachusetts; Maurice Rapaport, 267 Ames Street, Lawrence, Massachusetts; Eleanor Angus, Andover, Massachusetts; Joseph L. Daly, 39 Katherine Street, Lawrence, Massachusetts.

On October 8 the first meeting of the new Board of Directors of the Boston University Alumni Association was held in the Boston University Woman's Building. There was discussion on changes in the constitution which would permit closer affiliation of area clubs with the general Alumni Association. For further news on this question, see the forthcoming issues of BOSTONIA.

THE SUGGESTION BOX

School of Theology alumni may be interested in the suggestion sent in by Carl Pershin of the Class of 1941. Carl wrote that perhaps the School of Theology graduates should have state or sectional reunions since so many of the alumni are scattered over the country. Many of the Theology alumni were unable to come to the all-University reunion last May because of the great distance between Boston and their various homes. What is your opinion?

During the past summer the Alumni Office received a very interesting note from Ella M. Gerrish, RE'25, G'35, who submitted the following idea:

"I am enclosing my contribution for the Alumni Fund with a deep sigh as I realize the more of those grand new buildings you put up, the less we old-timers are going to feel at home. Couldn't you put on a two-weeks' summer session without credits that we could take? We could get two weeks of lectures on some of our suppressed desires which we didn't have time for or were too practical to take for a whole semester. (Make mine Art. I can't draw a crooked line so it is interesting!)

"If you don't, we'll be coming back to see the new buildings, pestering the few profs who try to remember us, and coming away so homesick, the college will be dead to us. How about putting it up to alumni to see if they'd pay tuition for two weeks for the sake of a trip back to their college days? We wouldn't be sightseers in our own university then, trying to keep our smiles from freezing, but students who have business there.

Sincerely and homesickly yours,
Ella M. Gerrish"

Recipe for Good Telephone Service

Take four Ms and a W: Men and Women, Money, Management and Materials
Stir well with Efficiency
Season with Experience
Add a dash of Enthusiasm
Serve withCourtesy and Understanding

It takes many people and many things to keep on giving you the best telephone service in the world.

It takes a lot of money—investors’ money—to provide the facilities.

There’s an investment of $240 behind your telephone and every one of the 25,000,000 telephones in the Bell System.

It takes good management and good employees to operate these facilities. There are about 600,000 Bell System employees—many in management and supervisory positions.

It takes faith in the future. We’re busy right now on a $2,000,000,000 building and expansion program—to catch up with the Nation’s needs and give you more and better service than ever before.
Veterans and Education

More than a year has passed since the long-awaited message, "Cease Firing," re-echoed on the battlefields of World War II. The horrors of war are beginning to recede, and Americans now turn to the hydra-like problems of "peace in our time." For many, the increasing irritation of shortages, strikes, crime waves, threats of depression, and international dissension seem far more portentous than the terrors of war just ended.

The flood of servicemen and women released from the Armed Forces since V-J Day numbers into the millions. From a strict military regimen they have been thrust into a pattern of living where each must form his own destiny. To many veterans the prospect is bewildering. In the maze of possibilities which lies before them, which is the right road?

For the greater percentage of returning servicemen the first decision is the major one: Shall I return to college under the G.I. Bill or shall I seek a job now when good opportunities are open to me? One alternative means hard work today with only a probable reward tomorrow. The other means ready money today with little guarantee for the future. The decision is a grave one.

Here at Boston University, where the enrollment has swelled to over 20,000 this fall, including more than 7,000 former service people, it seems certain that the veteran is casting his lot on the side of education. This is not a capricious decision, for the returning G.I., mature beyond his years, has studied the problem carefully.

He sees primarily the need for educated men in modern America, in politics, in labor, in business, in science, and in every other field of endeavor. He is beginning to feel that most of the problems of our modern world stem from the want of comprehension. In the international field, a lack of knowledge of the history, traditions, languages, and ideologies of other countries is resulting in irretrievable losses of good will and cooperation. At home, suspicion, distrust, and bungling in domestic affairs are fostered in part, at least, by the dearth of trained leaders in every group, whether it be management, labor, or government.

There never was a time in the history of mankind when there was greater need for leaders who, by their knowledge, understanding, and tolerance of human failings, can help restore to the world the balance of all nations at peace. To these leaders of tomorrow, colleges and universities pass on some of the fruits of learning: the straight, analytic thinking of the science laboratory; the freedom of speech and thought of the political science class; knowledge of man’s sublimer nature, the arts; and some conception of the meaning of the universe through religion and philosophy.

The only sure road to the creation of a better world is through education. The returning veteran has felt this and is standing up to meet his responsibilities.

"O, brave new world that has such people in it!"

ON our cover is shown the entrance to the College of Liberal Arts in two aspects of its transition from an all-out war program to a more normal peace-time schedule. Oldest of all Boston University undergraduate departments, the College of Liberal Arts is perhaps most representative of the progress of which President Marsh speaks in his Annual Report to the trustees which is printed in full in this issue.

The cover picture is a postwar shot of the steps of the CLA building, inundated daily by throngs of ex-GI and non-veteran students. In the inset is shown a group of the soldiers who, under the Army Specialized Training Program, brought CLA back in 1943 the singular sight of students marching in orderly, uniformed columns into the classrooms of "688." The military lines are now gone, and in their place the students of 1946 patiently elbow their way into classes through the largest crowds ever to populate the CLA 'marble'.

According to a recent issue of the Harvard alumni magazine, undergraduate life, as defined by some hermetically-minded persons, has taken on the appearance of a "bargain-basement" society. However well this may apply to postwar University life, it is equally as true of almost any other phase of our postwar living.

In fact, as shortages increase, it seems that one of the most dependable criteria of the value of an article is the length of the line waiting to purchase it. Based merely on this standard alone, the education offered at Boston University in this postwar period is worth its weight in waiters.

PROGRESS IS AN INTERESTING WORD. It has connotations that appeal to the American mind. We commonly think of it as a movement forward in business, industry or politics. As a matter of fact, progress is etymologically more intimately related to education than to anything else. It is derived from two Latin words: pro, meaning "forward," and gradus, meaning "to step." Hence, in its literal etymology, it means to step forward. We have the gradus part of it in our word "grade" or "grades." We also have it in our word "graduate." That is why the word "progress," as meaning gradual betterment or advance to an objective, is a pleasant word to educational administrators.

Humbly and gratefully, I make this my twenty-first Annual Report as President of Boston University for a year of progress along many lines.

PROGRESS HAS been made in closing up our war work. On March 22, 1946, we had the last of separate graduations for the School of Medicine, under the accelerated program. Hereafter medical students who have completed their course will be graduated at the regular annual Commencement of the University.

Members of the Staff of Instruction who were on leave for service with the armed forces and for civilian service with the Government have nearly all returned to their work in the University.

We have many words of commendation from government officials, assuring us of the Government’s appreciation and respect for the service Boston University rendered during the war. For example, let me quote a letter from Lieutenant General LeR. Lutes, Commanding General of the Headquarters Army Service Forces at Washington, written on June 10, 1946. General Lutes says:

"Dear President Marsh:

"The War Department wishes to extend to you, as the representative of the staff and faculty of your school, the thanks of a grateful government for the unstinted and whole-hearted cooperation given to the War Department in the preparation, conduct, and successful completion of programs of instruction for Army personnel.

"The training so provided was a vital part of the national effort expended in the triumphant prosecution of World War II, and the Secretary of War will dispatch to you a suitably engraved certificate as soon as it can be completed.

"Inasmuch as the Army Service Forces under which this program has been conducted ceases to exist after today, I am taking this opportunity to add my appreciation for your efforts.

"Sincerely yours,

(Signed) LeR. LUTES
Lieutenant General, USA."

Pertinent also is a letter from A. N. Richards, Chairman of the Committee on Medical Research of the Office of Scientific Research and Development, Washington, D. C. Under date of July 22, 1946, Chairman Richards writes as follows:

"My dear President Marsh:

"It is my privilege to attempt to express to you, and through you to Boston University, the grateful appreciation of the Committee on Medical Research for the assistance which the Committee has received from certain members of your faculty and staff in the fulfillment of the responsibilities delegated to it by the President in 1941 in the order which created the Committee as an agency operating within the Office of Scientific Research and Development.

"Dr. William C. Boyd and his associates under Contract OECmr-547 undertook research on the standardization of blood grouping materials designed to increase the safety of blood transfusions in our armed services.

"Under a contract with the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, your Professor of Medicine, Dr. Chester S. Keefer, and his assistants rendered inestimable service in the development of knowledge of the therapeutic usefulness of penicillin; he also assumed the burden of civilian allocations of that drug during the period when supply was limited with such success that the Government was given the highest credit for impartial and scientific justice in the conduct of a task requiring courage, discriminating judgment and complete integrity.

"The new knowledge and the experience gained through the efforts of Dr. Boyd, Dr. Keefer and their associates not only contributed greatly to our war effort and to the national security but they have provided additions of permanent value to the theory and practice of medicine, surgery and related fields of medical science.

"Yours very sincerely,

(Signed) A. N. RICHARDS
Chairman, Committee on Medical Research."

In my Founders’ Day Address for March 13, 1946, I gave an account of the multipotent and multifarious service rendered by Boston University to our Government’s war effort during World War II. This Address has been preserved for the future by Bostonia, which printed it in full in the April, 1946, edition. With Boston University, the contribution of Boston University to the war effort is most impressive.

At our annual Commencement exercises on May 27, we awarded, on the recommendation of the University Council and by vote of the Trustees, posthumous degrees to thirty-one former students who had practically completed the work for their degrees and who had been killed in the service. Members of their respective families came to the platform to receive the diplomas of these thirty-one flower of our youth who had paid the "last full measure of devotion" to their country’s cause. It was a memorably solemn occasion.
A NATURAL sequence of the war is our service to the veterans. Public Laws Nos. 16 and 346, the latter of which is commonly called the "G.I. Bill of Rights," have made it possible for millions of young men to go to college and university at government expense. It is the most generous treatment of war veterans ever bestowed by any government. The result is that practically every institution of higher learning in this country is crowded to capacity. Boston University has done its utmost not only for the veterans who seek their education here, but also in order that we might continue taking our fair share of young people graduating from the high schools. The result is that we now have the largest enrollment in the history of Boston University. As I write this Report, every indication is that the student enrollment for the ensuing year will be in excess of twenty thousand. This is an increase of five thousand above any previous record. We have filled the classrooms of our buildings regularly used, and have acquired several other buildings whose maximum capacity we are putting to use. To make this part of my report complete, I must regretfully add that we have not been able to admit all the qualified young people who have sought admission. Incidentally, when the State of Massachusetts was planning for the establishment of the so-called Veterans College at Camp Devens, Governor Tobin appointed several of the college and university presidents as Trustees of that institution. In our preliminary canvass of the need, we studied the names of 3,390 veterans who had been rejected by the colleges and universities of Massachusetts for lack of room. More than half the total number — 1,885 — had been rejected by Boston University. It is interesting to note that 97.2 per cent of those who had applied for admission to Boston University had made it their first and only choice.

Chester M. Alter, Dean of our Graduate School, was also Director of our Veterans' Reception Center from the date of its organization until about the middle of the past year. At that time, because of the rising tide of returning veterans and also because of increased activities in research enterprises centering in the Graduate School, Dean Alter was relieved of responsibility for the Veterans' Center, and Irving C. Whittemore, Professor of Psychology in our College of Business Administration before he entered war service, and who became a Colonel in the Army, returned to the University and was made Director of our Veterans' Center. Dr. Whittemore has submitted to me a statistical sample of veterans, revealing interesting facts and figures, a few of which I select as follows: The average age of veterans enrolled at Boston University is twenty-six years and four months; the age which occurs ofteneast, twenty-two to twenty-four years. In military experience, seventy-two per cent have been in the Army, and twenty-eight per cent in the Navy, Marines and Coast Guard. The rank and grade of those who have been in the Army range from Private to Colonel, with Sergeant as the commonest enlisted rank, and Captain as the commonest commissioned rank. The rank and grade among those who were in the Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard is from Apprentice Seaman to Lieutenant Commander. As respects their service, twenty per cent had been in the United States only; fifty per cent in Europe, and thirty per cent in the Pacific. It should be noted that these statistics refer to men enrolled in the second semester of the year covered by this Report. Undoubtedly, since demobilization has now been practically completed, the present enrollment would show a larger percentage of veterans who had been overseas. Concerning the marital status, sixty-one per cent were single, and thirty-nine per cent married.

Frequent inquiry is made as to how the veterans are adjusting themselves to college work. I am happy to make an emphatic and unqualified answer of commendation. From every Department of the University, both graduate and undergraduate, come words of praise for the veterans as students. They show themselves to be men of character who comport themselves as gentlemen. They study well, and if, in their scholastic attainments, they differ at all from civilian students, the difference is to the veterans' credit. Of course, it should be said that with so many more applying than we have been able to admit, a high measure of selectivity has obtained, and we have naturally chosen those whom we believe to be especially desirable. We have admitted the best who have applied to the limit of our capacity, without discrimination on account of race, color or creed. Honesty and fairness have been exercised everywhere toward every applicant.

While praising the Government for its generous treatment of the veteran, and also for its fair and generous treatment of colleges and universities, let me utter one criticism, namely: the Government does not pay the veterans' tuition and other university bills until bills have been rendered after the end of the semester. The University, on the other hand, has to pay...

Boston University --- Expansion

its bills from the first day onward. When an institution like Boston University has so many veterans enrolled, and naturally has to incur expenses of all kinds for their education throughout the year, the long delay in collecting from the Government creates a serious financial hardship for the University. Even though it is necessary for the Government to delay until the end of the semester the reimbursing of the University for supplies purchased by the veterans, why should not the Government arrange to pay the tuition of the veteran when he enrolls? Then, if the veteran severs his connection with the University before the end of the semester, the University could reimburse the Government for the unused proportion of tuition advanced. Certainly the Government — with its taxing powers, which it is not at all reticent to use — would stand speechless in such an arrangement more easily than the educational institutions can afford the present plan.

Progress HAS been made by the University in a material way. I am pleased to report that we closed the year with a net addition to surplus of $43,730.95. It is only proper that I should say, however, that our bank borrowings are larger than usual because of the delayed payments of what the Government owes us. Since we are sure, sooner or later, of getting what the Government owes us, we are in a sound financial condition. The budget adopted for the ensuing year is the largest in the history of the University.

Increases in expenses of one kind and another made it necessary for the Trustees to raise tuition fees in the undergraduate Colleges and in some of the graduate schools from $375 to $400 a year. In increasing its tuition fees, Boston University is only doing what nearly all other educational institutions have done. We have, however, kept our tuition rates lower than most other institutions of our class, both in New England and throughout the country.

Material progress includes our building program. Never since Boston University started has it undertaken such a comprehensive building program as it has on its hands at the present time. Contracts were let during the year, and work is now in progress on three major buildings — a new College of Liberal Arts Building, a new College of Music Building, and a new Science Building. It is expected that all three of these buildings will be ready for use in the fall of 1947. They are all on the new campus, fronting on Commonwealth Avenue. Along with the College of Business Administration Building (the Charles Hayden Memorial) which was finished seven years ago, these new buildings will give us a solid facade of 660 feet of Gothic architecture on Commonwealth Avenue, beginning at Granby Street, and continuing to Ashby Street. It will be one of the most beautiful, impressive, modern, and serviceable educational plants in the world.

In addition, the University is erecting on the new campus three smaller buildings of a less permanent character, which are to be scientific research laboratories.

The University was confronted with the absolute need of these buildings, and at the same time, it is confronted with a rising cost of construction. The community responded well to our campaign for funds; but the unexpected increases in the cost of building leaves us under the necessity of finding considerably more money than was secured in the campaign.

Numerous improvements have been made upon our properties — upon our apartment houses converted into dormitories, upon buildings reconditioned for classroom use, upon Nickerson Field and Sargent Camp. Indeed, we have had to spend money upon practically all the old properties of the University.

Sargent Camp, under the leadership of Dean Makechnie of our College of Physical Education for Women, has been greatly improved. This is one of the most beautiful camps in this part of the country. We have recently entered into a contract with the New England Forestry Foundation to advise us on the proper means and methods of scientific forestation of the woodland upon the five hundred acres of land which the University owns at Peterborough, New Hampshire, where Sargent Camp is located.

Progress HAS been made in instructional salaries. Toward the end of the year covered by this Report, we adopted the budget for the ensuing year, and in it made provision for salary increases of the instructional staff, all along the line. The 1946-1947 budget appropriations for salaries of members of the instructional staff are $304,602 more than the total salaries paid to the members of the instructional staff in 1945-1946. The Administration and Trustees of the University have always been disposed to pay in instructional salaries the largest possible proportion of income. We are now paying the highest salaries Boston University has ever paid.

BOSTONIA
Let me announce once and for all that the salary increases which we have made are not intended by the President and Trustees to be "cost of living" increases, which would mean that the increase might be withdrawn if and when living costs recede. Our salary increases are definite salary increases. While making no promises, yet it is my hope that the next change in salaries will be up rather than down, no matter what happens to the cost of living. The average basic salary of our professors today is three and one-fourth times the average salary paid to teachers, supervisors, and principals of the public schools in the United States, and two and one-half times the average salary paid to teachers, supervisors, and principals of the schools of Massachusetts.

The question of salaries at Boston University cannot be considered without including our Group Life Insurance program and our Retirement Pension Plan. This past year marked the fiftieth anniversary of our Group Life Insurance Program. During this period, the sum of $191,000 has been distributed in benefits to members of our staff and their families. It is interesting to note that in over sixty per cent of the cases, our Group Life Insurance was the only form of insurance in force.

I keep studying retirement pension plans at various colleges and universities, and I do not hesitate to say that so far as my knowledge goes, Boston University has the best plan of any. The professor pays into our plan five per cent of his basic salary, and the University, instead of merely matching that, as is done in most institutions, adds nine per cent.

Another form of service rendered the members of the University family is membership in the Blue Cross. There are some instances where the assistance received by this method has made all the difference between the calm sense of security and the corroding fret of inability to meet hospital bills.

During the past year, death has claimed two trustees, two members of the administrative staff, and eight members of the faculty, as follows: Courtenay Guild, a trustee, passed away on April 24, 1946; Robert B. Rugg, a trustee, on May 29, 1946; Charles G. Keene, Associate Council, on February 10, 1946; Ralph E. Brown, Comptroller, on September 4, 1946; Raymond C. Robinson, Professor in the College of Music, October 22, 1945; Frederick A. Cleveland, Professor Emeritus in the College of Liberal Arts, January 26, 1946; Alcide T. M. de Andria, Professor Emeritus in the College of Liberal Arts, March 28, 1946; John J. Elliott, Associate Professor in the School of Medicine, March 31, 1946; Samuel Dupertuis, Professor Emeritus in the College of Practical Arts and Letters, August 26, 1946; Howard M. Clute, Professor Emeritus in the School of Medicine, September 19, 1946; Alice S. Woodman, Professor Emeritus in the School of Medicine, September 25, 1946; Maurice Silverstein, an Instructor in the School of Medicine, killed in action in the service of his country.

"I know not what the future hath

PROGRESS HAS been made in the extension of the University's service to meet the needs of the community. Boston University has always been characterized by closeness to life. It has never been afflicted with that aloofness from life which results in an anemic program, or with an indifference that clogs an institution with the dust of academic dry rot. It has pioneered the way for many other institutions in showing how a university can meet the educational needs of its constituency. It was in harmony with the University's sovereign spirit of service that we have, since my last Annual Report was delivered, established two new major Departments of the University. On March 13, the Trustees voted the establishment of an undergraduate college to be known as the General College. The General College will be located in our Horace Mann Building at 178 Newbury Street. It will offer a two-year core curriculum leading to an Associate in Arts degree, and emphasizing general cultural courses. It will synthesize fragmentary learning into several courses of effective general education. It differs from the traditional liberal arts college not only in its reorganization of fundamental subject matter and its emphasis on contemporary events, been made Dean of an academic Department. It was inevitable, however, that Miss Smith should be named to this position, for the School of Nursing is a natural outgrowth of the Division of Nursing Education which she has so efficiently directed for the past several years in our School of Education. The question of establishing a School of Nursing has been studied by the University authorities for a year. A joint committee of Trustees and Faculty members, of which Augustus P. Loring, Jr., was chairman, worked with several of the hospitals, and finally recommended a cooperative arrangement with the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital. The headquarters of the School of Nursing will be located at 160 Beacon Street. We open the School with the imprimatur of the W. K. Kellogg Foundation, given in the substantial form of a sizeable grant to aid the School in getting started right.

There are numerous minor forms of new service to the community. Take, for example, our testing service. During the past year, our School and College Relations Committee has conducted testings for 101 public school systems, with a total of 19,864 students. I have received many letters of appreciation for the counseling service rendered by Boston University, praising the work of both the Directors, Horace G. Thacker and Everett W. Stephens. As a sample, let me quote a single paragraph from a letter written me by the Superintendent of Schools of a community somewhat removed from Boston. The Superintendent says:

“I consider the money we pay each year for the special testing service of your University brings a greater return to pupils and teachers than any other expenditure. Our pupils are more interested and do better work as a result. Teachers are much more sympathetic and understand the needs of individual pupils much better because of this service.”

During the past year, college and university students have come to our Department of Counseling Service (which is under the direction of Warren T. Powell) from forty-one different colleges and universities, from as far away as the University of California and the University of Hawaii, and from as near at hand as Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Another sample of the extension of community service is the program of five Industrial Relations Clinics which were conducted last semester, with specialized, intensive training adapted to the practical needs of union officials, industrial relations officers and management officials. The clinics covered a variety of subjects and presented competent and experienced instructors drawn from management, union, and government leaders of the metropolitan Boston area. The clinics were in the form of five consecutive weekly meetings of two hours each, with titles listed as follows: Conciliation and Arbitration, Methods and Procedures; Grievance Procedure and Handling; Interpretation of Wage and Cost of Living Statistics; Interpretation of Financial Statements; and Job Evaluation and Merit Rating.

A further illustration is the Bureau of Business Research conducted by our College of Business Administration. It has extended its facilities for statistics, surveys, and personnel testing and counseling. It has undertaken a number of current projects in cooperation with trade groups.

THE EVENING COLLEGE OF COMMERCE, which is under the control of the regular Faculty of the College of Business Administration, with John Waters as Director, has now advanced its requirements for entrance and for South, thousand dollars as settlement of the Trust which had been year being the receipt by the University of five hundred scholarship, superior training, and native endowment are, to speak with due restraint, in no sense inferior to their academic fathers.

What I have said about the Faculties of Law, Medicine, and Theology, can be said with equal enthusiasm of all the other Faculties of the University. The upheavals wrought by the war, and the reconversion to a peace-time program, plus the necessities created by the abnormal increase in student enrollments have given this University an opportunity to strengthen its faculties, — and we have seized the opportunity by the forelock!

Let me also say that no university president has ever enjoyed a more cooperative group of administrative colleagues than I have in the Deans of Boston University. They are capable men, with faith in the University, with hope for its future, with enthusiasm for their respective fields or service; men of character who are examplars to their students; men of loyalty who vie with each other in helping to promote the interests and to carry the burdens of the University.

And what I say of the Deans, I say of all the members of the administrative staff — the Treasurer (who in himself is a treasure), and the heads of the various Bureaus and Divisions throughout the University.

Many changes have taken place in the School of Medicine. Dr. Charles F. Branch tendered his resignation as Dean to take effect on December 1, 1945, in order that he might accept an invitation to become Director of the Children's Hospital. As his successor as Dean of the School, we appointed Dr. Donald G. Anderson. The officials of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, with which we are so intimately affiliated, and the leading men in our Medical Faculty are all confident of Dean Anderson's ability to give the School a distinguished administration. Much progress has been made in the School, one of the outstanding achievements of the year being the receipt by the University of five hundred thousand dollars as settlement of the Trust which had been established for the School by the late Mrs. Annie E. Southwick. This half million dollars is added to our permanent endowment funds, the income to be used for the benefit of the School, with a preferential for research. The School of Medicine has never before had a Faculty that included so many persons of outstanding distinction as now head up such departments as those of Medicine, Surgery, Physiology, Pharmaceutical Studies and many related subjects. We have on our School of Medicine Faculty experts who are second to none in their respective fields.

The School of Theology has passed through a transition period, when many professors of national and international reputation reached the retirement age and new men have been found to take their places. Speaking always with reverent appreciation of the great men who have given that School its good reputation during the past half century, we can say without the slightest exaggeration that the members of the present Faculty, from point of view of scholarship, superior training, and native endowment are, to speak with due restraint, in no sense inferior to their academic fathers.

Progress has also been made in scientific research. This is one of our most marked new phases of rapid expansion and planned development. The underlying reason for it was expressed recently by Sir Ernest Simon, Chairman of the Council of Manchester University, England. Sir Simon said: "For the first time in history there is strong pressure on the universities greatly to increase the number of students and the volume of scientific research. The triumphs of science in war-time have so impressed the public imagination that in the last two years report after report has appeared from universities, from industry, and from the Government, all demanding more scientific research and the production of more high-grade scientists."

As evidence that Boston University is sensitive to this situation, let it be remembered that we have built upon our new campus three research laboratories, and that we are in process of erecting a fine new Science Building. In the one year covered by this Report, Boston University received twenty-seven different grants for as many research projects. They are all worth while. Many of them are significant. The most outstanding in the list is a basic research program for the United States Government, involving more than a million dollars. It will be conducted in our new Optical Research Laboratory, and is dedicated to the improvement and expansion of the art and science of aerial photography. To a person of imagination, this is one of the most thrilling adventures conceivable in the realm of scientific research, both as high altitude supersonic aviation is related to any possible future war, and also as it is related to peace-time need for precision mapping, geologic, geographic, mining and agricultural surveys. Nobody can predict what future uses may be made of investigations now being carried on by Boston University on its new campus.

These grants for research have come from many different sources, but back of every one of them is some achievement of a Boston University scientist which has inspired the grantor with confidence that we here possess the ability to carry on the investigations which are desired, and that confidence is manifested in the moneys awarded to the University.

PROGRESS in alumni appreciation of Alma Mater is evident. Compared with a few years ago, contributions to the Alumni Fund are noteworthy, and prophetic of a still more helpful day ahead. A more generous attitude is only one of many evidences of an increasing interest in and devotion to the University on the part of our alumni.

When Dr. Judson Rea Butler, who for the past four years has been the efficient Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, was appointed Dean of the newly established General College, Warren S. Freeman was appointed his successor as chief executive of the Alumni Association. Mr. Freeman brings to this important post a trained mind, a loyal heart, and a natural endowment of superior promotional and executive abilities. I am expecting great victories under his leadership, for wherever two or three alumni of Boston University are gathered together in Alma Mater’s name, there is “the sound of marching in the tops of the mulberry-tree.”

PROGRESS HAS been made in the community’s appreciation of Boston University. I cannot omit mentioning in this Annual Report the touching and inspiring recognition paid to my twentieth anniversary as President of the University. Under the leadership of the Trustees and a committee of citizens representing the community, a dinner was held at the Hotel Statler on the evening of January 31, the last day of my twentieth year as President. A thousand guests attended, contributing one hundred dollars each for the College of Liberal Arts Building Fund. On the same occasion, we announced a gift of one hundred thousand dollars in cash from “The Friends of Boston University” to be applied to the Science Building Fund, and an additional two hundred thousand dollars to be made available later for the same purpose. The net result of the occasion was four hundred thousand dollars to be added to the building program, plus imponderable but very real values of a thousand good wishes for the University, and the heart-warming and history-making good will manifested, including the presence and address of General Dwight D. Eisenhower, upon whom Boston University conferred an honorary degree, the first to be conferred upon him by any American institution. If we needed evidence that Boston has taken Boston University to its heart, this twentieth anniversary dinner furnished that evidence. The complete story of the celebration, including the speeches made, is reported in the March issue of BOSTONIA. I refer persons who are interested to that excellent alumni magazine.

I am not under the illusion that this wonderful tribute on the thirty-first of January was exclusively to me as an individual. As I see it, my twentieth anniversary furnished an occasion for the trustees and faculty and the leading citizens of this community to show their affection for and faith in Boston University. Nevertheless, I do wish to express my sincere personal thanks that in paying this tribute to the University, they also warmed my heart and lent me strength for the increasingly heavy burdens which any university president must needs carry. In fact, there is not a thing that Bostonians could do to show their appreciation of the University in general or to be helpful to its President in particular that has not been done during these past twenty years.

Perhaps this is as good a place as any to report that upon the unanimous election by the 196th District of Rotary International and the unanimous election by the International Convention, I have been elected Governor of this District for the current fiscal year. No university president could think of taking on such an additional responsibility if he did not know and believe in Rotary as a vast adult educational program. So believing, I do not feel that my work as Governor of the Rotary District is foreign to my regular work as President of the University, but only an extension of it. The objective of Rotary has been succinctly summarized as a program "to encourage and foster the 'Ideal of Service' as a basis of worthy enterprise and, in particular, to encourage and foster:

1. The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service;

2. High ethical standards in business and professions; the recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations; and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his occupation as an opportunity to serve society;

3. The application of the 'Ideal of Service' by every Rotarian to his personal, business, and community life;

4. The advancement of international understanding, good-will, and peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the 'Ideal of Service.'"

Education is the indispensable means by which these worthy ideals can be realized. To grow a democratic society and the institutions that at once make democracy and are made by it, we must develop a social and intellectual climate favorable to such growth. As our physical climate is created and modified not only by the heat from the sun and by the inclination of the earth upon its axis, but also by ocean currents, mountain ranges, and many other factors, so also, while a social and intellectual climate favorable to democracy is created largely by influences radiating from home, church and school, yet there are other factors exerting tremendous influence, and among these must be named such movements as Rotary International, with its nearly three hundred thousand members in six thousand clubs, in some sixty different nationalities.

What a wonderful thing it would be if we could get the ideas and ideals of unselfish service accepted by makers of opinion and leaders of men throughout the world! Mental and moral reconversion are as important as industrial reconversion. No less an authority than J. Edgar Hoover, Director of the F.B.I., says that those persons are in error who think that juvenile delinquency and criminal activities are due to underprivileged homes. He says that that which makes or breaks a person is his mental outlook. Rotary has to do with the mental outlook of selected leaders in business and the professions, men who by the very nature of their prominence are the fashioners of thought in their respective fields. A great Scottish Divine of a century ago, Thomas Chalmers, preached a memorable sermon under the title: "The Expulsive Power of a New Affection." The title is in itself a challenging thought. One could express the goal of Rotary by saying that it aims to get men so in love with unselfish service that this new affection will expel from their hearts the love of selfish advantage and crass materialism, or by paraphrasing Chalmers's dictum thus: the creative power of a new idea, or the transforming power of a new ideal. And so, with the approval of the Trustees of Boston University, and at the request of the Rotarians of the District, I have taken on the additional work of Governor of the District, in the fond hope that by doing so I can make a little more progress in the great cause to which I have dedicated my life.

PROGRESS is being made in University consciousness and coordination. My Annual Report of one year ago was devoted largely to a review of twenty years of progress in coordination. Additional advance has been made during the past year. Worthy of special mention is our College of Physical Education for Women, formerly called Sargent College. Dean Makechnie and the Faculty deserve high praise for the splendid way in which they have brought that good College emotionally and psychologically, as well as academically, into the University family.

We have fostered the integration of programs among all the Colleges and Schools of the University. While a professor is still appointed to serve primarily in some one College or School of the University, yet the appointment is made with the understanding that he is a university professor, and if he is not required to carry a full load in the Department to which he is assigned, he will be available, if his services are needed, for work in any other Department without additional compensation.

We have coordinated several features of the University that heretofore have been more or less haphazard and Departmental. For instance, we now have an All-University Library Committee, which gives sanity and cohesion of purpose to additions made to the various Departmental libraries, with a view to a future University Library. We have recently appointed an All-University Committee on Musical Organizations, bringing these numerous organizations together under a unified control. We have an All-University Radio Committee, with the same objective. The All-University Bureau of Appointments has heretofore functioned for most of the Departments, but during the past year, it began to serve them all, and it serves with far greater efficiency and satisfaction than any Departmental placement office possibly could.

PROGRESS has been made in the functioning of the University Senate. Let it be remembered that until two years ago, the University Senate was a paper organization. It is now a going concern. It has devoted itself largely to a study of the recommendations made by the Committee of the University in the Post-War World. Among the more important recommendations of the Senate may be named: (1) a series of policies to govern appointments and promotions, the wisest the University has ever had; (2) a definite procedure for initiating and reviewing appointments and promotions; (3) a plan for the development of criteria and accompanying evaluative methods and materials to be used in evaluating services and in recommending promotions in rank; (4) a study of salary adjustments (the principle of which was followed in the salary increases made); (5) a canvass with general recommendations concerning tenure. All these recommendations have been put into full force and effect, excepting that of tenure. This subject was referred by the President, with his own endorsement, to the Trustees' By-Law Committee at the May meeting of the Board. The By-Law Committee is to report at the Annual Meeting of the Trustees. (That is, the report is to be made at the same meeting at which this President's Report is being submitted, and hence the result is not known at the time that this Report is being written.)

Three other recommendations made by the Committee on the University in the Post-War World have been recommended to the President by the University Senate and by the Council of the University Senate. (The Council is the Executive Committee and ad interim Senate.) The first of these had to do with the appointment of a Dean of the University. The first holder of this title at Boston University is Atlee L. Percy, who begins his work with the current year. Dean Percy is eminently qualified by character, personality, experience and training for this position. He has been a member of the Faculty of Boston University since 1919, as Professor of Accounting in the College of Business Administration and head of the department of Commercial Education in the University. For the past twelve years, he has also been Director of our Summer Session. Under his expert guidance, the Summer Session has become a significant part of the University's program. The enrollment for the 1946 Summer Session reached the all-time high of 4,425, with students coming from forty-six of the forty-eight States of the Union, and from thirteen foreign countries. Among these students, seventy-nine occupations and professions were represented, in-

*The By-Laws were amended by unanimous vote of the Trustees in exactly the form suggested by the Senate Council — D.L.M.
We have appointed as head of this new department, Dr. Carl Everett Purinton, who admirably fulfills the requirements we have established for the position. With academic degrees from Bates Colleges, where he was a winner of Phi Beta Kappa; Yale Divinity School, and Ph.D. from Yale University, with additional study at the American School of Oriental Research in Jerusalem, and the University of Leipzig, Germany, he certainly should be intellectually equipped for the task that lies ahead of him. He has had experience as Professor of Religion and Biblical Literature at Smith, Adelphi, and Beloit Colleges. He is the author of numerous learned publications, and is editor of The Journal of Bible and Religion, the official organ of the National Association of Biblical Instructors.

I have never announced any addition to the curriculum with more conviction of its need than I announce this Major in Religion. While it will be in no sense of the word an evangelistic or propaganda department, yet it will be a department for the reverent study of religion under the leadership of a man who himself not only intellectually merits the respect of his students, but who also is a man of character and of religion. I hope that the department will evoke a vital and intelligent interest in the subject of religion; that the thinking of students will thereby be clarified, and that the sweet reasonableness of the religious life will be made attractive to them. If there ever was a time in the history of the world when men needed to recognize the everlasting difference between right and wrong, it is now. The world is in chaos. Pregnant with meaning for today are words written by Woodrow Wilson in the last article he ever wrote, namely: "The sum of the whole matter is this, that our civilization cannot survive materially unless it be redeemed spiritually. It can be saved only by becoming permeated with the spirit of Christ and being made free and happy by the practices which spring out of that spirit. Only thus can discontent be driven out and all the shadows lifted from the road ahead."

We need a center and source of moral authority in each individual's heart that will not only make him know what is right, but will energize his will to do it. The longer I live, the more am I persuaded that morality which does not root in and grow out of religious conviction and experience is like a flower torn off from its roots. Of course, what the world needs is not that type of religion that consists in some mere intellectual assent to creedal dogmas, nor some mere conformity to ritual and ceremony. It needs religion that possesses the whole life, and commands ethical behavior in all the complex relationships of life.

The foregoing explains why I do not view with enthusiasm the present tendency to eliminate all inquiry concerning one's religious faith or affiliations, as is aimed at in the so-called Fair Employment Practices Act. Boston University has fallen in line with the modern tendency to drop references to religion from student admissions blanks, — except, of course, for admission to the School of Theology. Heretofore, as in most colleges and universities, the application form used by candidates for admission has asked for the applicant's church affiliation or preference. The University Council has recommended the elimination of this question. I have given my official approval to the recommendation, but I must confess that I have done so with no feeling of enthusiasm. My lack of eagerness to approve does not stem from the disappearance of the question, but because its elimination is just another indication of a menacing trend of the times, — I mean the trend to bow religion out of everything except church and synagogue. Incidentally, if religion were more vital on the inside of church and synagogue, it would doubtless be more virile on the outside.

This agitation for the elimination of any reference to religion in the application of a student to college, or a recommendation for a job has been promoted by some persons who are professional reformers; by some who are more ambitious to receive tolerant treatment than to give it; by some who think it is good politics; by some whose lack of religion is rebuked by the presence of the question, and by some sincere and well-meaning persons who think that they themselves, or others, have been discriminated against because of their religion. As I view it, colleges and employing concerns have wanted to know an applicant's attitude toward religion because a person who is religious — not formally or fanatically so, but intelligently and ethically so — is a better risk than one who is irreligious.

Another illustration of the tendency of the times is the increasing practice of omitting an invocation at important public meetings. It used to be, when religion was vital and real in the thought of the people, that our dependence upon the Almighty was always acknowledged by an invocation of His aid. Today, however, many meetings are held without any recognition of the Deity. In some instances, a compromise position is taken by having a so-called "silent invocation." This was given wide publicity by the San Francisco Conference that set up the United Nations Organization. The alleged reason for having a silent invocation is that humanity really needs to invoke
That our common seal should carry the actual date of the founding of our oldest Department as well as the date on which the University was chartered under its present name.

I HAVE NOW reported another year’s stewardship. It has been a year of progress. The credit belongs not to any one person but to the whole University family. Executives are in the habit of drawing charts to show their organization. Generally such a chart is a pyramid in form, placing the President and trustees at the top, and other members of the organization down through the pyramid to its base. I much prefer to think of our organization as represented by a circle in which everybody is on the same level. Let the seal itself be our chart. At the center are the President and Trustees, — as loyal, faithful, unselfish, devoted, and serviceable a Board of Trustees as any institution ever had. Close to them come the other members of the staff of administration. Next, but still on the same level, are the members of the Faculties. In the widening circle are the students, and beyond them the alumni, and then our larger constituency. Thus Boston University is best represented not by a pyramid, with some on top and others underneath, but by the seal, a circle, a common plane of equality of opportunity for all to dedicate their highest powers to the service of mankind, to accept full responsibility for the results of their own words and deeds, and in honor to prefer one another.

On this high plane, we know nothing except cooperation and team play. We do not raise the question of who works for whom. The students may sometimes think that they are working for the professors who give them orders, and who appear to hold the fate of the students in their hands. It may sometimes seem to the professors as though they are working for the President and Trustees. There are doubtless times when the President and Trustees feel that they are working for the professors and the students. But the truth is that the students, if they have the proper attitude, are working not only for themselves, but also for the University, and the professors are working for the University, and the President and Trustees are working for the University, — nay more, through the University, they are all working for the progress of mankind. They are all workers together in this emprise.

"Like chords in unison they move, And thrill with like vibration."

Respectfully submitted,

DANIEL L. MARSH,
President.

BOSTONIA
Amual Report of The Treasurer

Dr. E. Ray Speare Delivers His Report

To THE BoARD OF TRUSTEES OF Boston University:

My annual report covering the University's fiscal year ending June 30, 1946, is presented herewith.

Our total gross income from all sources amounted to $3,407,696.14, an increase of $1,137,473.07 or 40.1% over the preceding year. Of this gross income $2,630,659.21 or 77.7% came from tuition and fee receipts, which are 65.3% more than the receipts from these sources last year.

Our registration in all departments showed a heavy increase, as the above figures indicate, reaching a grand total of 17,119, the largest in the history of the University. Of this registration, it is of interest to note that 3,382 were Veterans of World War II, and matriculated under the provisions of the so-called G. I. Bill of Rights, which guarantees payment to the University of their tuition fees and of certain school supplies incident to the individual's school program, the total charge for each student not to exceed $500 for each school year. It is also important to note that while the heavy increase in tuition charges for this period was in part due to the Veteran enrollment above referred to, we also enjoyed an increase of 835 in our total civilian enrollment over the preceding year, and an increase of 4,134 Civilian students over the fiscal year ending June 30, 1944.

The expenses of our Educational Departments increased $456,577.77 or 32.2%. All other University expenses increased $151,162.46 or 28.9%. Operations for the year closed with a net addition to surplus of $43,730.95, after making all proper deductions for expenses and reserves.

As has been repeatedly reported to the Board, our large registration during this period has made our housing problem very acute, both for instructional purposes and for dormitory accommodations. You inaugurated in March a building program to adequately house your College of Liberal Arts, your College of Music, and your Science courses. An active campaign to convert your largest apartment houses into dormitories, and to lease other available buildings for that purpose, has been actively carried on.

At the end of this fiscal year, we were operating thirty-one buildings as dormitories. This special effort on our part to help out on the trying housing situation brought about an increase of $35,194.79 in our dormitory operating expenses, as against an increase of only $29,755.87 in dormitory income receipts.

Net returns on our real estate operations were $6,239.56, a substantial improvement over our last year's results. Scholarships granted from endowment and other University income amounted to $67,920.22, as against $43,268.56 last year.

Principal payments on mortgage obligations during the year amounted to $36,271.58.

Endowments funds at the year's end totalled $6,008,287.10, an increase of $6,782,984.10 during that period.

Due to the unavoidable delay in billing the United States Government Departments involved for the amounts due us under the Veteran's Educational Program previously referred to, and in the time consumed in receiving covering funds from these Government Departments, our current cash operating position has been severely handicapped. For instance, as of June 30, there was due and accrued to us from the United States Government, for tuition fees and educational supplies furnished our Veteran students, the sum of $795,000.00. Had this amount covered civilian enrollment, it would all have been in the University treasury, and available for our operations no later than March first, 1946. This situation has necessitated larger bank borrowings in order to carry on our current operations, though, as of June 30th, our current and educational bank loans were only $18,000 more than a year ago.

Our Net Assets, for the first time have passed the ten million mark increasing $1,280,622.79 during the last year, and standing at $10,719,370.65 on June 30th, 1946.

The Trustees will recollect that at their March meeting, in view of the increasing number and importance of graduate research projects offered the University, and particularly a negotiated contract with the United States Army Air Force for extensive research on certain optical problems, you decided to start building operations on that part of your Bay State Road and Commonwealth Avenue site west of Ashby Street, and authorized me to erect an initial building for this purpose. This research laboratory has been completed and is in constant use. In addition, the Army Air Force have furnished two more buildings and equipment which have been erected adjacent... to our original laboratory, and will be of great value in carrying on our substantial Government and industrial research programs. It is of interest to note that during the last fiscal year upwards of 29 research grants and contracts were awarded the University, these grants totaling more than a million dollars, which is by far the largest sum ever coming to us for such worthwhile purposes in any one year.

As the Trustees will readily appreciate, an increase of over a million dollars — more than fifty per cent — in the volume of business handled by the business offices of the University during the past fiscal year, has meant a tremendous addition to the work of these offices. Your employees in the Treasurer's office which of necessity must act as a Clearing House for all University business transactions, have had their work volume and attendant problems constantly amplified.

May I take this occasion to express your and my own deep appreciation of the loyal and efficient services rendered by all those who have had their important part in our enlarged program.

Detailed figures, covering the various phases of our financial operations for this period, are given in my printed annual report.

Respectfully submitted,
E. RAY SPEARE, Treasurer

The Office of Speech Counseling

In the United States it is possible to earn a Ph.D. from an accredited institution of learning and yet find oneself completely inarticulate. Speech difficulties strike all classes of people despite their stage of intellectual advancement. In the case of the uneducated person, ineffective speech may be due to limited knowledge as to the correct way of speaking. The man with the Ph.D. may have psychological "reasons" for his stammering, stuttering, or other speech defect. Whatever the reason, speech impediments can be tremendous drawbacks to a person's progress.

With this thought in mind, Boston University established three years ago the Division of Speech Counseling (now the Office of Speech Counseling) under the direction of Professor Joseph G. Brin. The broad objectives of the new service were to provide every student at Boston University with at least the minimum American standard of speech and to give to anyone having a speech difficulty the chance to receive direction while still in college. The Division of Speech Counseling was set up to serve the entire University with permission to take outsiders when the time was available.

Since that time the activities of the Office of Speech Counseling have expanded greatly. This year, for the first time, therapeutic facilities for remedial speech on all pathologic levels — stammering, stuttering, voice disorders, incorrect breathing — have been made available to students. In previous years when a student showed any difficulty, he had to be referred to an outside psychiatrist or speech correctionist. Now when a student has a speech impediment, major or minor, he is turned over to the speech therapist, Mrs. Edward Hitschmann, who is in charge of remedial work.

The staff of the Office of Speech Counseling consists of: Professor Joseph G. Brin; Mrs. Edward Hitschmann, Speech Therapy; Dr. Richard Norton, Orthodontia; Dr. Carl E. Trapp, Psychiatry; and Dr. Kenneth Christophe, Director of the University Health Service. The correction service is also available to non-students at special rates established by the University. It is expected that the various Veterans Administration offices will soon be referring cases of speech difficulties to the Boston University Office of Speech Counseling.

The problems of the students who come for advice are both multiple and diverse. Very frequently distorted speech is merely a symptom of an underlying physical or psychological cause. Often there are extreme cases of timidity in speaking before groups. Many of the students who have no actual speech defect require aid from the Counseling Service to help break them of the habit of speaking in a monotone. This in itself is a most difficult task, for often students actually resist instruction in vocal punctuation, confusing it with dramatics. To many the well modulated voice seems affected and unnatural. However, Professor Brin will quickly point out that monotony is no indication of sincerity.

The counseling service is an individual procedure operating on an interview basis. One of the basic principles of the first speech examination is to talk on a subject of interest to the person being tested, for, as Professor Brin has discovered, the most eloquent kind of oral communication is that which is natural to the student. Speech reflects the individual personality, and in many cases may be a key to the psychological reason behind a speech defect. Thus in prepared talks for recordings great emphasis is placed on non-standard material — either in the area of the student's life or school experience.

Each test averages about twenty minutes during which time the examiner makes notations on a form known as the "Speech Profile." The student may then be told immediately what the results of his test are or be asked to return in a few days for evaluation. Auxiliaries to the written test are recordings of the student's voice and the playing of professional recordings.

When groups of interested students are gathered, professional recordings are played with a special purpose in mind. It is not intended that the students imitate in any way the speech of the actor or orator recorded. The instructor points out the qualities which are especially attractive in professional speech, but he (Continued on Page Twenty-Nine)
If one word can describe Boston University this fall, EXPANSION, and all that it implies, is it. With a record breaking enrollment of more than 20,000 students and the addition of several new faculty members to take care of the greatly increased student body, the University is probably larger now than at any time in its 107-year history.

NEW DEPARTMENTS

To handle the surge of incoming students, two new departments have been added to the already long list under the heading, "Boston University." The General College, under the direction of Dean Judson Rae Butler, is now in full swing, and students are displaying genuine enthusiasm for the "experiment in education" whereby they follow a course of study leading to a degree of Associate in Arts. Each course offered emphasizes the relation of a particular field to current conditions.

This plan is particularly popular among the veterans, who make up two-thirds of the enrollment of 600. The boys report that, having entered the service directly after high school training, they are not yet ready to decide on a definite field of vocational study. At the General College they are able to build a background in education which they will be able to use later regardless of their field of specialization.

The School of Nursing, with Martha Ruth Smith as Dean, is an outgrowth of the Division of Nursing at the School of Education. The degrees of Bachelor of Science in Nursing, Bachelor of Arts in Nursing Education, and Master in Nursing Education are awarded by the school.

RELIGIOUS AND MUSICAL ORGANIZATIONS

Two features of University life have been centralized. Both religious and musical organizations will be headed by appointees to positions never before held at the University. William J. MacLeod, of Everett, Massachusetts, will be University Chaplain in charge of all student religious groups. Working with the Hillel Foundation, Newman clubs, and the various Protestant organizations, Chaplain MacLeod will supervise and integrate all University activities of a religious nature. In addition, his office at 711 Boylston Street is open for individual, non-sectarian counseling.

The various glee clubs and all musical organizations at the University will be operated under the leadership of a single musical director. Mr. Elwood E. Gaskill has been appointed to this position. He will have complete charge of all activities, tours, and appearances of every musical group at Boston University.

NEW COURSES

Among the new courses being offered by the University, two — the marriage course and a program in Latin American studies — are of great importance. Although the marriage course is not new to several departments of the University, this year for the first time it has been made available to nearly all undergraduates.

Preparing to meet the demand for trained personnel from commercial and industrial agencies engaged in business with Latin America, CBA and CLA will offer a major program in Latin American studies. Under the direction of Professor Camillo P. Merlino, who is chairman of the University's Board on Foreign Area and Language Studies, students will be given an opportunity to study in a field which is not yet overcrowded and which promises to become increasingly important.

UNIVERSITY ACTIVITIES

School spirit, in the material form of reopening of fraternities, a complete football season, and plans for major social events, seems well on its way back to pre-war form. For students who entered in the fall of 1943 this semester will be their first experience with college life as it was before the war. Students who had full-time war jobs as well as full academic programs may now take time out to enter whole-heartedly into the University's extra-curricula program. And co-eds may rest assured that "man-less" dances are a thing of the past.

FRATERNITIES REOPEN

For the first time since 1942 Boston University's fraternities will swing into action once more. On October 28 the rushing season officially opened. Eleven recognized fraternal organizations are eligible to pledge new members under the direction of the Inter-Fraternity Conference. Rushing Chairman is William Wunsch, Kappa Phi Delta. Speaker of the Inter-Fraternity Conference, Peter Lombardi, Sigma Alpha Epsilon, has announced that all fraternities will participate in an athletic program under the direction of Sherman Daniels, Alpha Epsilon Pi.

The fraternities which have houses are Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Phi Alpha, and Phi Epsilon Pi. Alpha Kappa Psi has an apartment. The eleven chapters now operating at Boston University are Sigma Alpha Epsilon, Tau Epsilon Phi, Kappa Phi Alpha, Epsilon Pi, Kappa Phi Delta, Kappa Psi, Lambda Chi Alpha, Phi Alpha Phi, Epsilon Pi, Tau Delta Phi, Delta Sigma Phi, and Alpha Phi Delta.

FOOTBALL

Another strong indication that the student body is expecting to join enthusiastically in making college more than just a place to study was evident even before the school year began. At Nickerson Field the day after Labor Day more than 130 football aspirants reported to Coach Walt Holmer. This was the largest turn-out by far for a Terrier football squad. The first day's invasion was not the total number of football candidates, for others kept coming in even to one week before the first game.

B. U. BAND

Early in October a call was issued for the musical talent at Boston University to swing into step with the new Boston University band. With this action, plans to transform Nickerson Field from a sober, windswept gridiron on autumn Saturdays to the colorful spectacle of a college football game gained momentum. With the exception of two informal games last year, stands have stood empty waiting for the joyous swarms of collegiate rooters to test their strength.

SCARLET KEY BALL

On the social calendar, President William McMahon of Scarlet Key has announced that the first major all-University formal dance will be held at the Hotel Statler on Friday, November 8. The Scarlet Key Ball promises to be one of the highlights of the year, featuring the tapping of new members to Scarlet Key and the crowning of the Queen. This year should be one of the best ever for formal balls and proms. With the many vets now in school the manpower problem which plagued dance committee chairmen in the past is solved. Already co-eds have been shining up to the best beau on their list and have started to work on Dad for "a really not too expensive" formal gown.

At the Trustees' Dinner . . . .

Trustees

Announcement was made by President Marsh that two new members had been elected to the Board of Trustees at the meeting preceding the dinner. The two new trustees are Joseph Earl Perry, President of the Newton Savings Bank, and William B. Snow, Jr., President of the Suffolk Savings Bank. (An account of the two new trustees will appear in the December issue of BOSTONIA.)

Five trustees were re-elected for a five-year term at the meeting of the Trustees preceding the dinner. They are: Vincent P. Clarke, Victor A. Friend, Russell S. Hadlock, Pliny Jewell, and Daniel T. O'Connell.

Award

The Samuel J. Abrams Award, in honor of Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Temple Ohabei Shalom in Brookline, was endowed by Mr. Joseph Ford. The gift amounted to $3,000. The interest accruing from this fund annually shall be awarded to that student, irrespective of his denominational or racial affiliation, who during the year has done most to advance the cause of better understanding and of right thinking and living among his fellow students. The award is made on the basis of the student's character, cultural, social, and spiritual interests. The judges are to be chosen from the faculty. The winner is to receive the award at the annual Commencement exercises.

Dean of Admissions

President Marsh also revealed that Doctor Kenneth L. Heaton, now serving in the Office of the Secretary of War as Chief of the Research Section, Civilian Personnel Division, has been named to fill the newly created faculty post of Dean of Admissions and Examinations for the University's six undergraduate colleges. Prior to the war, Doctor Heaton served for many years as Director of the Bureau of Educational Research of the Michigan State Board of Education.

Job—Hunting—

The Postwar Approach

The following anecdote concerning a Boston University graduate appeared recently in Joe Harrington's "All Sorts" column in the Boston Post:

"For some 20 years Harold Young, (CBA '27, and a director of the Boston University Alumni Association), has been the personnel manager for one of the large insurance companies which has its home office here. During that time he has employed about 43,000 men and women. He met them during the depression when jobs were scarce; he talked with them during normal times when it was even money, and during the war he tried hard to get some sad sacks to come to work for his company. So, all in all, he has had a well-rounded experience.

One day last week he received on his desk a plain card that bore the name of John B. Wooster of Whalen, N. Y. Mr. Wooster came in and expressed his desire to become affiliated with Mr. Young's firm . . . After some technical conversation, Mr. Young asked his visitor how he had arrived in Boston.

(Concluded on Page Twenty-Six)
One of the greatest evils to follow in the wake of World War II is the wave of juvenile delinquency which has swept the country during recent months. The average citizen shakes his head, sighs, and speculates on the probable end of the younger generation. Something should be done about it is the opinion usually voiced, but after all what can I do?

To two Boston University graduates that question was a challenge. For many years the Reverend Clarence Kerr, Theo '42, and his brother, the Reverend C. Russell Kerr, Theo '46, had been in contact with juvenile courts, orphan homes, and other institutions. They had watched the growth of the delinquency problem, particularly among boys, with an eye to causes and cures rather than punishments and penalties.

As Clarence Kerr saw it, most of the difficulties of these young people seem to stem from broken and unhappy homes. In most cases there were no relatives or friends able or willing to take them in. It was then that the idea of establishing a home for neglected boys began to take shape in his mind. Such a home could be a place where youngsters might develop their minds, bodies, and spirits while gradually learning the responsibilities and privileges of self-reliant citizenship. It could be a place where the members would contribute to their own support and, at the same time, learn habits of industry and responsibility.

The Reverend Kerr began to formulate plans for his boys' project and waited his chance. His brother, C. Russell Kerr, who worked for a time in the Boys Division of the Boston Y.M.C.A. and saw how desperately such a home was needed, became deeply interested in the plan. A short time later Clarence Kerr was assigned as pastor of the Methodist Church in Smithville, Ohio. Nearby he found the ideal location for his boys' project.

The site was a 123-acre farm just two and a half miles from Wooster, Ohio, across from the airport, and a short distance from Smithville. The Kerrs decided to christen it "Boys' Village." On the property was a seven-room house and barn, both badly in need of repairs. It would be an expensive proposition to put the buildings into shape, but they were ready to tackle it.

Word of the new project spread through the section, and before long volunteers began to arrive with hammers, chisels, spades, and shovels ready to begin work. For months the Reverend Kerr's parishioners and neighbors contributed time, money, and materials to renovate and furnish the seven-room home. A food drive was conducted through the neighborhood to stock the pantry, and live stock was donated. Except for a certificate from the State Welfare Department, which was expected soon, Boys' Village was ready to open.

The Kerrs selected the woman who was to be matron of the home, and a full-time manager was hired. The farm manager is Orrin Beechy, a graduate of Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, a Mennonite institution. All that was left to decide was the basis for selection of the boys who were to make their home in Boys' Village. The Kerrs agreed that any boy would be welcome, regardless of race, creed, or color. However, "Boys' Town," founded in Nebraska by Father Edward Flanagan, who has himself endorsed the Kerr project, was predominantly Catholic. It was thus decided that Boys' Village would be mainly Protestant.

Who would be eligible to enter Boys' Village was the next question to be answered by the directors. Although the Kerrs would have liked to take as many boys as needed their help, there were only accommodations for eight. They decided to establish an age limit of between twelve and eighteen years, the crucial period in the formation of a boy's character. Later, as their plans for expansion begin to be realized, they will take in as many as 500, some of whom will be boys from penal institutions who need home guidance.

The foundation of the Boys' Village project had now been laid. The Kerrs had only to find the first boys who were in need of such a home as theirs. It was decided that preference would be given to an orphan or a boy from a home shattered by separation or divorce. Applications began to flow from interested relatives or friends, juvenile courts, children's homes, and occasionally from a boy himself.

Kenny was the first youngster to be accepted into Boys' Village. A good-looking lad of almost twelve, he had been raised by an elderly woman who was now too old to look after him. His parents were divorced; his mother worked from four in the afternoon until midnight in a factory. It was obvious that she was unable to give her son the necessary attention. The Kerrs decided to take him in.

Kenny was a problem at first. He had never been required to do any kind of work or assume responsibilities, and he found it difficult to adjust himself to the cooperative atmosphere of Boys' Village. He was sensitive and a little resentful of authority, but slowly he began to adjust himself. Now Boys' Village is "home" to Kenny, and he loves it. Under the proper supervision he is assuming his responsibilities and in spare moments is off to the creek, where he spends most of his free time with a pole and string angling for a catch.

Three other boys have arrived at Boys' Village since Kenny came, and clockround their days are filled. They rise at 6:15. Two boys make the beds while the other two go to the barn. One boy does the milking while the other feeds the cattle and live stock. At 7 everyone gathers for breakfast, and at 8 the boys leave on the school bus.

They arrive home from school at 3:30 and have two hours to play before supper is served. After the evening meal, the dishes are washed by two of the youngsters while the evening farm chores are done by the other two. From 7 till 9 is study hour after which there is a fifteen-minute devotion period which includes scripture and prayer. At 9:30 the boys are in bed after an invigorating day of work, play, and study.

The Kerrs have incorporated Boys' Village as a non-profit organization under the laws of Ohio. Heading the Board of Trustees is the Reverend Clarence Kerr, who still maintains his position as Methodist minister in Smithville. The Board of Trustees is made up of Ohio farm, business, and professional men.

Boys' Village is dependent entirely on voluntary contributions. It is not backed by any specific federal, state, or municipal agency, or church organization. However, the Kerrs are confident that there are enough persons interested in the work they are doing to maintain Boys' Village as a thriving community.

Recently Governor Frank Lausche of Ohio paid a personal visit to Boys' Village and brought with him the state license approving the project and giving the Kerrs the go-ahead signal. Now the Reverend Clarence Kerr is looking to the future. Within a few years he hopes to see new buildings go up, including a school, recreation and religious facilities, and enough room for hundreds of boys. With the help of others, his vision can and will be realized.

ALUMNI DIRECTORS

Shown at the first alumni directors' meeting of the year on October 8 in the Boston University Woman's Building are: first row, left to right: Warren S. Freeman, '32, Alumni Secretary; Dr. Royal M. Frye, '12; Anne Leather, '44; Edward M. Dangel, '12; Dr. E. Ray Speare, '94; Nancy Carlock, '33; Francis E. Moore, '23; Phyllis Burr, '44; S. Jane Hisslein, '39; second row, left to right: James Carmody, '34; Robert Newbury, '34; Mrs. Herbert W. Saul, '17; Mary C. Robinson, '39; Harold H. Cramer, '26; Olive B. MacPherson, '38; Emil M. Hart, '31; Gertrude Houser, '45; Robert E. Moody, '22; John J. O'Hare, Jr., '22; Wesley L. Slade, '25; Mrs. Lewis Spaulding, '18; Mrs. Charles A. Tierney, '36; Rosa Rabinow, '44; Paul O. Kelley, '44.
B. U. Terriers Drop First Game, Then Hit Stride with Wins

Although the B.U. Terriers went down in defeat in their first game of the season against Syracuse, who was on the heavy side of a 41 to 6 score, they recovered nobly the following Saturday at Nickerson Field by defeating American International College with a score of 21 to 0.

Paced by Halfbacks Don Giles and Bob Hatch, Boston University scored twice in the second period and once in the third quarter to blank the Springfield team. The only period in which the Aces showed any strength was during the first quarter when they plunged forward to the four-yard line. Not once during the first fifteen minutes did B.U. have the ball out of its own territory.

However, following the change of sides at the end of the quarter, the Terriers hit their stride. In the second quarter the team scored two touchdowns, and Evie Dorr, wounded so badly at Iwo Jima that he is unable to play regular ball, came on to the field to kick the points after both touchdowns. In the second quarter alone the Terriers gained 170 yards to the Aces’ 10.

Following the A.I.C. game the Terriers licked Northeastern 27 to 0; Tufts 35 to 0; and surprised and shocked the Football world by holding a heavily favored Brown eleven to a 14 to 14 tie. The outstanding success of the 1946 Boston University Football Team augurs well for the future success of the entire athletic program at the University.

The Boston University Coaches

WALT HOLMER

Boston University’s head coach was one of Northwestern’s greatest fullbacks and in 1928 was selected to play on the East All-Star team against the West All-Stars. He was largely responsible for the East’s first victory in this traditional post-season affair. Since leaving Northwestern, Walt has played five years of professional football and he also spent one year as a member of the Wildcat coaching staff. He studied for a master’s degree at Boston University when he became backfield coach for the Terriers in 1934.

In 1942 he was appointed head coach and the next three years he was an officer in the Navy. He has a grounding in all offenses of football through five years of professional football under six different coaches but is sticking mainly to the double wing system at Boston University. He did a remarkable job in his first season considering that he had a green team which started slowly and lost only to the great Boston College bowl club in its last four games.

Among the great backs he has helped develop since coming to Boston University are Wally Williams, currently with the Chicago Rockets, Gary Famiglietti, now assistant coach and halfback with the Boston Yanks pro club after seven very successful years with the Chicago Bears, and Pete Lamana, captain-elect of this 1946 club who has joined the pros and will be seen in action with the Chicago Rockets.

RUSS PETERSON

Russ Peterson is well qualified as a line coach, for he was an All-New England guard at Springfield College in 1930. He also starred in basketball and baseball for the Gymnasts before graduating in 1932. He earned his master's degree at his alma mater and was athletic director and head coach of three sports at American International College from 1933 to 1941 before coming to Boston University. He coached the A. I. C. club which scored one of the season's major upsets in 1937 when his club knocked off St. Anselm's eleven which had hung up 23 consecutive victories over a period of two and one-half years. That was the same St. Anselm's club which had Ray McClean, later a sensation with the Chicago Bears. Among the star athletes developed by Peterson are Joe O'Grady, a back, and Babe Meecham, a center, on that 1937 team who received Little All-America honors. He came to Boston University as line coach in 1942 and, after the 1942 season, enlisted in the Navy as a lieutenant. He served three years and returned last fall to coach the Boston University basketball team to 11 victories in 13 starts, their best record in history.

HARRY CLEVERLY

Harry Cleverly is beginning his first year as backfield coach. He is a former three-sport star who graduated from Boston University in 1937. For the next four years he was head coach at Nantucket High and the 1940 club went undefeated in eight games. He came to Boston University as freshman coach in 1941 for all sports except football. Cleverly spent three years in the Navy as the skipper of an LCI in the Pacific and now is head coach of hockey and assistant in football.

BOB MCKELVEY

Bob McKelvey was freshman coach of football from 1934 through 1941 and chief scout for the varsity. This former Villanova tackle under Coach Harry Stuhldreher now is assistant line coach and chief scout for the Terriers. He spends most of his time with the tackle squad.

Track Team in Top Shape

Track Coach Doug Raymond is looking forward to a good season for his cross-country squad when they begin their schedule this month. Outstanding Terrier candidates who will vie for the regular starting positions are: Herb Williams, former Arlington star, who did a lot of running while in the service at Ohio State, Wesleyan, and Bowling Green universities; Larry Dutton, former Lexington High and Hebron Academy star; Bill Kelley, former Arlington High captain; and Dick Lemieux, brother of Ed Lemieux (the New England cross-country champion), who starred at Hartford, Connecticut, High School. This will be Boston University's first cross-country team since before the war.

"By my private plane," said Mr. Wooster.

"By your private plane?" "Yes, I fly one, you see," said Mr. Wooster. "This morning it looked like a nice day so I decided I'd fly over to Boston and have a talk with you."

After his visitor had left, the local personnel man rubbed his forehead and remarked:

"I've seen a lot of applicants for jobs but this is the first one to arrive by private plane."

Dean Chester M. Alter of the Graduate School will assist in the central organization of the Greater Boston Community Fund's November campaign. He will direct the Institutions Division which includes schools, colleges, hospitals, and social service agencies. He has been active in many former Fund campaigns and last year was Chairman of the School and College group. In addition to his activities with the Greater Boston Community Fund, Dean Alter is also Vice-President and Chairman of the Budget Committee of the Newton Community Chest.

Dr. John H. Cauley, Associate Professor of Public Health and Preventive Medicine, has been appointed Commissioner of City Health by Mayor Curley. Dr. Cauley, a Boston deputy health commissioner for three years, succeeds Dr. Frederick J. Bailey, who returns to his former post as Head of the Health Department's Division of Communicable Diseases.

Major Herbert S. Ingram, attached to the G-1 Section, GHQ, of Air Forces, Pacific, who formerly was in charge of Army installations at Boston University, has been appointed Headmaster of the Tokyo School for Dependents of Occupational Personnel.

Dr. Dwight E. Harken has been appointed Senior Consultant in Chest Surgery at the Rutland Veterans Hospital, according to Dr. John N. Wilson, Hospital Manager. During the war Doctor Harken was in the Army Medical Corps, and in 1943 and 1944 he conducted a special course in thoracic surgery for Army medical officers in the European Theater. He is a professor at the School of Medicine and thoracic surgeon at the Boston City Hospital. He will visit the Rutland hospital weekly to advise and assist the medical staff on problems connected with the treatment of respiratory ailments.

APPOINTMENTS

The appointment of Edward M. Dangel, member of the Board of Directors of the Alumni Association and First Vice-President and Treasurer of the Law School Alumni Association, as Assistant Professor at the Law School was announced recently by President Daniel L. Marsh. Professor Dangel has been a lecturer at Law School for many years. He is a well-known Boston attorney and author of books on legal subjects.

The newly created post of University Chaplain at Boston University will be filled by William J. MacLeod, former Assistant Director of the Bureau of Appointments at the University. He will direct and coordinate all student religious groups and will work closely with the Hillel Foundation and the Newman Club as well as the several Protestant groups. Chaplain MacLeod received his master's degree from Boston University in 1940 and has partially completed work for his Ph.D. His office is at 711 Boylston Street and is open for individual counseling with all students.

Seven new instructors have been added to the faculty of the College of Physical Education for Women, Sargent, according to President Daniel L. Marsh and Dean George K. Makechnie. They are:

Dr. Elizabeth Burchenal, of New York City, who will be an instructor for a two-hour co-educational class in folk dancing;

Miss Patti McDaniel, of Cambridge, who has been added to the dance instruction staff;

Mrs. Elizabeth Wellman Gardner, former faculty member, who is returning to conduct biology classes;

Mr. Kenneth Sheldon, tennis director at Sargent Camp, who will be an instructor in Social studies;

Colonel Augustus P. DunCan, summer camp riding instructor, who will be in charge of riding courses at Kendall Green, Weston;

Rene Pery, of Cambridge, who will hold classes in fencing;

Mrs. R. J. Dickman, of Winchester, instructor in handicraft.
Professor Grossman has been Head of the Department of Journalism at the College of Business Administration since 1940.

Deaths

DR. ERNEST GROVES

Professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina and former professor at Boston University, Dr. Ernest R. Groves died on August 28 at the age of sixty-nine years. He taught the world's first college class in marriage in 1925. Nine years later he founded the annual conferences on Conservation of Marriage and The Family at the University of North Carolina. He urged courses on marriage for all schools, holding that wider knowledge and training on the subject would cut the divorce rate. Dr. Groves contended that modern marriage had lost the basis in utility that it had all through history and that consequently the ministry must make every effort to defend and support it. In 1939 he inaugurated a new three-year course in sociology in which, for the first time, the medical background for marriage was included. Dr. Groves became Professor of Sociology at Boston University in 1920 and had held the same position at the University of North Carolina since 1927. He also lectured on "The Family" at Duke University and was the first president of the North Carolina Mental Hygiene Society. He was President of the National Conference on Family Relations in 1941 and a member of the American Sociological Society.

DR. SAMUEL DUPERTUIS

The Reverend Doctor Samuel Dupertuis, French professor emeritus of the College of Liberal Arts and retired pastor of the Hall Place Methodist Church, Quincy, died on August 27. He was born in Switzerland and came to America when he was twelve years old with his family. They settled in Kansas, then Indian territory. He was self-educated and when still a young man, he traveled west to Tacoma, Washington, where he was graduated from Puget Sound College as a minister. He came to New England in 1914 and served successively in pastorates in Lowell, Dracut, and Milford until 1917 when he went overseas to assist in French reconstruction. In recognition of this work he was awarded the "Diploma d'Honneur" by Clemenceau. He joined the faculty of Boston University, first in the School of Theology and later in the College of Liberal Arts. He also taught at the College of Practical Arts and Letters. He became Professor Emeritus in 1942. While a professor, he was minister of the Medfield Methodist Church and the Hall Place Methodist-Episcopal Church, Quincy, where he served from 1932 to 1941. He leaves his wife and two sons.

MAURICE F. REIDY

Maurice F. Reidy, nationally-known authority on real estate and a Catholic layman of great prominence, died October 2 at St. Vincent Hospital in Worcester, Massachusetts. A graduate of Holy Cross College, his real estate enterprises extended throughout New England. He served for seven years as a lecturer at the Boston University College of Business Administration.

RUSSELL SAGE FOUNDATION, $2.00

Shelby M. Harrison, who attended the College of Liberal Arts in the Class of 1910 and received the honoray degree of Doctor of Letters from Boston University in 1942, and F. Emerson Andrews, both executives of the Russell Sage Foundation, have produced in this useful publication a much needed descriptive list of 505 foundations which may make grants for social, educational, or other activities serving the common welfare. Their funds amount to nearly two billion dollars and their expenditures are estimated at 72 million a year.

The purpose and policies of each foundation are listed in sufficient detail to be of value to educators, social workers and others who could make use of such resources. For example, there are listed and described for Boston, 22 such foundations and for New York City, 217.

This scholarly study of foundations and philanthropic giving points out some interesting historical facts such as the following:

- Charitable corporations existed under Roman Law in 150 B.C.
- Licensing of associations became obligatory in the 2nd century A.D.
- In England by the time of Henry VIII ecclesiastical foundations possessed from 1/3 to 1/2 the wealth of the kingdom.
- Benjamin Franklin established the first notable funds of this sort in America.
- The first American Foundation of the particular kind described in this book was established by George Peabody in 1867 with two million dollars devoted chiefly to the advancement of education in the South.
- In forecasting trends in the development of Foundations, the authors predict diminishing gifts because of the progressive income tax and the decreasing attractiveness of perpetual trusts because of low interest rates. They point out, however, the great opportunities for Foundation activity in fields like the study of public administration where non-political bodies are needed to conduct research, in assisting the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations with international research, in the field of international fellowships, in specialization upon certain large areas, and in public education as to the results of educational and social research.

NOTE ON THE AUTHOR: Shelby Millard Harrison, General Director of the Russell Sage Foundation, did postgraduate work in economics and sociology at the College of Liberal Arts in 1906 and 1907. In 1942 he was awarded an honorary degree by the University. The following citation was read at the time of the presentation:

The Imperishable Dust

BRUCE HUMPHRIES, INC. $2.00

THE IMPERISHABLE DUST, a collection of poems in which the author expresses her interpretation of the value of life, was written by Sara Small Handy of the Class of 1898 at the College of Liberal Arts. The verses are simple, sincere, and brief and convey admirably the author's understanding of the problems of life.

Mrs. Handy is the wife of Daniel N. Handy of the Class of 1900 at the College of Liberal Arts. Two of her daughters are Boston University alumnae, Helen with the Class of 1931 at the School of Education and Isabel with the Class of 1941 at the Graduate School. Mrs. Handy was born in Steuben, Maine, and attended East Maine Seminary, Buckport.

Speech Counseling

does not hold up the recorded voice as an idol. The student is advised to make the most of what speech resources he has. Everyone, the Office of Speech Counseling has discovered, has certain limitations, and it is within these limitations that the counseling service works.

The basic occupation of Professor Brin's department is Speech Evaluation. His office works in cooperation with any academic unit of the University, conducts a speech clinic, and also encourages speech clubs on a purely voluntary basis for the purpose of orientating students in group situations. For those who are contemplating serving as officers in college organizations, the basic principles of parliamentary law and the art of conducting a meeting are reviewed.

The Office of Speech Counseling is well equipped with a library of books in the fields of language, speech oratory, semantics, and allied fields, a library of recordings of special interest to students of speech, and several pieces of equipment. The equipment consists of two recording machines, two microphones, a Public address system, and phonographs.

An example of interdepartmental cooperation between the Office of Speech Counseling and another division of the University is the work now being conducted in conjunction with the School of Theology. This year for the first time the entering class at the School of Theology was given a "speech screening." The "speech screening" consisted of a private interview with each student, a transcription of his voice, and finally a special counseling session. Later the student returned to the Counseling Office at which time another transcription was made to check on the weak points observed in the previous test. Those in need of training or retraining were immediately turned over to the speech therapist. Dean Walter G. Muelder receives a complete report on each student.

President Daniel L. Marsh has said:

"The greatest eloquence is the eloquence of sincerity. It is imperative also that the person who would talk should have something to say. But the manner in which one expresses his ideas — and himself — is so important that none can overstate it."

This brief statement is a succinct expression of the aim and purpose of the Office of Speech Counseling.

B. U. Graduate is on the Trail of Nazi-Stolen Art Treasures

It would be a difficult task to find a Boston University graduate who has had a more fascinating assignment than the one now held by Captain Mary J. (Molly) Regan, WAC, Ed. ’42. Captain Regan’s official title is Art Intelligence Research Officer in the Restitution Branch of the Monuments, Fine Arts, and Archives Section of the Economics Division of the Office of Military Government for Germany (United States). In brief, Captain Regan is a "loot sleuth."

Many of the works of art and other valuable loot held by the Nazis from occupied countries are still hidden somewhere inside war-ravaged Germany. It is Captain Regan’s job to help track down these missing treasures and classify them for restitution to their rightful owners. She sits in a small office in Military Government Headquarters in Berlin, surrounded by packing boxes and an occasional minor masterpiece. From her desk she helps to direct an organized network of activity going over the continent.

Captain Regan advises her department chief of particulars of missing objects and classifies clues as to their whereabouts. She works with the Army G-2, the Counter-Intelligence Corps, and maintains liaison with representatives of other occupying powers, with United Nations military missions in Berlin, and with Art Intelligence in occupied Austria. Unfortunately, all the loot recovered was not originally stolen by the Nazis. Captain Regan has also prepared cases against accused members of the American forces.

The department in which Captain Regan works has recovered many millions of dollars worth of stolen art in its "treasure hunt" through Europe. Recoveries and restitutions in a year have included more than a million books and nearly 50,000 works of art, some of them priceless masterpieces. Some of these recoveries have been made in museum basements, some behind false walls in houses, in barns, and in sealed salt mines.

Captain Regan majored in fine arts at Radcliffe and studied art at Harvard. She received her Master of Education degree in 1942. For a brief period she taught drawing and art history in high schools around Boston; later she entered the first WAAC officer candidates school at Des Moines, Iowa. She went overseas to England in May, 1944, and worked in General Jimmy Doolittle’s air-force headquarters. When the war was over, she went to Berlin on temporary duty status.

Captain Regan returned home this summer to bring her parents back with her to Germany. Her father is Headmaster Emeritus of Dorchester High School for Boys.

ERNEST R. GROVES, Hon ‘46. Died on August 28 in Arlington, Massachusetts, at the age of sixty-nine. Professor of Sociology at Harvard University of North Carolina. 15 East Street Boston, Mass.
Montana—Deerfield native and pioneer in the battle against spotted yellow fever, has retired from the Episcopal Church and served as President of the U. S. Public Health Service.

Two years and as pastor of the M. E. Church at Boston University, he came to this country for study there. Career by working in the Indian civil service before he entered Calcutta University. He graduated from the Methodist Church in Buffalo to take holy orders in the Episcopal Church. He first served as curate in St. Stephen’s Church in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and on January 4, 1918, he went to St. Luke’s, Pawtucket, Rhode Island.

Among his other interests were poetry, music, and writing. During his years at St. Luke’s, Pawtucket, excerpts from his sermons appeared regularly in the local dailies. He edited a parish monthly, The Parish Leaflet, wrote lyrics for two songs, “Longings” and “A Persian Love Song,” and he won several prizes for his poems.

After serving St. Luke’s parish for 22 years, he retired December 31, 1939. President of the Rhode Island Alumni Association of Boston University, he was loyal to his Alma Mater in every way and had planned to attend the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation from CLA in May. Several cousins and nieces living in Great Britain survive him.

College of Liberal Arts
Class Reunion

The celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Class of 1896, College of Liberal Arts, began with a luncheon at the Hotel Lenox, Boston, May 23, 1946. This was arranged by and for the Class of 1896.

Of sixty-three associated with the class as members, forty-two are now living. Of these, five were unable to attend because of ill health, and five could not be reached because of addresses which were incorrect. Fifteen were present: HELEN ARMSTRONG PRATT, ARTHUR PRATT, ALMY CHASE GRANT, SUSIE FLINT PAGE, GRACE FOX SCOTT, HELEN DAME, MARSHALL EVANS, ELLA GRAY, EDWARD HARON, EMILY HALL COOK, JOHN MASON, J. ALBERT MORRILL, ETHELWYN REA, FLORENCE WEBSTER, and GRACE BROWN, whose sister was the only guest. MARSHALL EVANS, whose notices had not been forwarded, came unexpectedly after the luncheon had begun, and this was a pleasant surprise.

The class president, EMILY HALL COOK, presided and after the luncheon called on the secretary for a report of the meeting in 1941 at which fifteen were present. In addition to the report, the announcement was made with regret that the death of BERTHA STOCKBRIDGE GRIFFIN, MARY INGRAHAM WREN, and STELLA CONVERSE THOMPSON, who had been unable to attend then on account of illness. The death during May, of ARTHUR J. WATSON and MARY STEARNES BADLEY, who had planned to attend this year, came as a shock to all.

The class president read a letter from DEAN EMERITUS WARREN explaining that he was unable to attend because of a previous engagement, and ARTHUR PRATT read a letter from GEORGE CHURCHILL expressing his regret that he could not join us and enclosing a rather literal translation of one of the odes of Horace, a copy of which will be sent to the members. The secretary read excerpts from letters of others who could not be present and a letter from Mr. Waxman telling of the serious illness of Professor Geerdes.

Professor Taylor’s letter explaining that he could not be with us arrived too late to be read due to forwarding difficulties.

This meant, much to our regret, that no one who was a member of the faculty in our day was present.

LILLIAN FARRAR had suggested in her letter that GRACE FOX SCOTT, whose four sons are college graduates, should be acclaimed “Class Mother.” It was agreed; JOHN MASON, who told that he has two daughters and two sons who had graduated from Boston University and another daughter who had studied at Boston University for two years, was voted “Class Father.”

After luncheon, ELLA GRAY passed around pictures taken during our college days, and on the whole, we were rather good at identifying the different members.

Pledges to the C.L.A. Building Fund amounting to $500 were made by those present.

Nine members and seven guests attended the Alumni Dinner at the Copley-Piazza that evening and were surprised and pleased at the announcement that the William Fairfield Warren silver cup had been awarded to the Class of 1896 for the largest percentage of attendance at the dinner.

President Marsh’s dinner to the fifty-year graduates at his home was attended by thirteen of our board and was enjoyable in every way.

Baccalaureate services on Sunday afternoon and Commencement exercises on Monday morning, both at Symphony Hall, were attended by several members and were reported as most impressive.

Members of the class occupied four places at “Pops” Monday evening and were accompanied by seven guests.

Those of us living near Boston are planning to get together each year whenever possible. Considering GRACE FOX SCOTT’s trip from Tacoma, Washington, the greatest distance covered by any member, New York and places a similar number of miles away are within commuting distance from Boston.

GRACE N. BROWN, Class Secretary

Winifred Hill Maxfield

In the passing of Winifred Hill Maxfield, CLA'98, in April of this year, Boston University lost a daughter who had brought signal honor to her Alma Mater. She had won a place of no small distinction as a leader and organizer of women, particularly in New York City and state.

As an undergraduate, she was a keen, eager, always outstanding student and, if memory serves correctly, the first president of her class. In her sophomore year she became a charter member of Massachusetts Alpha Chapter of Pi Beta Phi, and her sorority became one of its outstanding women.
the deep and lasting interests of her life. She was also an active member of the college Y.W.C.A. After graduation she taught Greek and mathematics in the high schools of Rockland, Maine, and Watertown and Plymouth, Massachusetts. In 1907 she married Mr. Berton L. Maxfield, a young New York lawyer. Her marriage took her to Brooklyn, where she spent many happy years.

Life became increasingly strenuous for Mrs. Maxfield, but she would not have had it otherwise. She was deeply interested in her husband's work in which she gave him no small assistance and she began to follow law courses at Columbia with a half-formed resolve to take a law degree; she also, at one time and another, took courses in psychology at Columbia and the College of the City of New York.

She was for years a capable and highly esteemed leader of women in her home city, serving as President of both the Brooklyn Woman's Club and the Brooklyn Society of New England Women.

In Mrs. Maxfield's undergraduate days, Boston University had no chapter of Phi Beta Kappa. When, years afterward, a chapter was established there, she was one of the earlier graduates whose record entitled her to initiation. Her Phi Beta Kappa key was henceforth one of her most cherished possessions, and the fraternity itself became perhaps the dominant interest of her life outside of her family. She threw herself wholeheartedly into the work of the central office in New York. Through her efforts the Phi Beta Kappa alumnae of New York City were organized, and she was elected their first president. They numbered 500 active members.

In the spring of 1926 the sudden death of their only child, Berton Lewis Maxfield, Jr., then a freshman at Brown and a boy of rare promise, came as a terrible blow to the Maxfields. Finding herself forced to choose between long, lonely days at home and outside activities, Mrs. Maxfield continued working actively with the many organizations in which she was interested. In 1937 she lost her husband after an illness of several months.

The summer of 1938 was spent with a friend aboard, but disease was already sapping Mrs. Maxfield's once boundless vitality, and the remaining years of her life were marked by repeated crises of ill health and gradually failing strength. In 1939 she returned to Watertown, Massachusetts, to occupy the second-floor apartment in the house where her sisters still reside. Though hampered by health complications, Mrs. Maxfield gradually identified herself in Boston with interest similar to those of her New York days — the alumnae chapters of her sorority and of Phi Beta Kappa, the Massachusetts Society for the University Education of Women, the Women's Council of Boston University, and the American Association of University Women.

Mrs. Maxfield's very active life had given her a host of friends to whom she was deeply attached. She was herself a faithful and dependable friend.

October Law School Commencement

The President’s office in the College of Liberal Arts building was the scene of the last of the “small” commencements for the School of Law on October 2. Of the eighteen students to receive degrees, ten were veterans, one, a woman student, and one, the first Evening School of Law graduate. The afternoon’s program was highlighted by an address to the students made by President Daniel L. Marsh.

Calendar Changes for the Evening School of Law

Classes at the Evening School of Law will be held three nights a week for a twenty-week period this year, according to an announcement by President Daniel L. Marsh and Dean Elwood Hettrick. Last year the Evening School was held four nights a week for a fifteen-week session. The change has been made to meet the demands of working students.

More than half of the students attending the Evening School of Law this year will be returning servicemen and women who are seeking legal training while they work during the day. Students in the day and evening schools are under a common administration and faculty. Among the new faculty members who will offer courses is Lawrence Vold, of Belmont, outstanding authority in the field of Sales. He served in the United States Department of Justice, Lands Division, for four years before coming to Boston University and also taught at the University of Nebraska School of Law.

Bostonia
School of Medicine Notes

New Registrar at the School of Medicine

Dr. Lloyd C. Fogg, Associate Professor of Microscopic Anatomy, assumed the post of Registrar of the School of Medicine on July 1, 1946. Doctor Fogg succeeded Dr. Burham S. Walker. Professor of Biochemistry, who has become Chairman of the Division of Medical Sciences of the Graduate School. Both Doctor Fogg and Doctor Walker will continue their teaching and research programs at the School of Medicine.

Doctor Fogg is well known to recent alumni of the School of Medicine. A graduate of Dartmouth College in 1922, he received his master's degree from the same institution in 1924. He received his Ph.D. from Columbia University in 1930. After teaching at New York University from 1924-1931, Doctor Fogg in 1932 became a cytologist in the United States Public Health Service and was assigned to cancer investigations at the Harvard Medical School from 1932-1936. From 1937 to 1940 Doctor Fogg was on the faculty of the University of New Hampshire, where in 1938 he was made Associate Professor of Zoology. In 1939 he served as Director of the Isle of Shoals Marine Laboratory.

Doctor Fogg joined the faculty of the School of Medicine in 1940 as Assistant Professor of Histology and Embryology. In 1943 he was promoted to the rank of Associate Professor. As Registrar, Doctor Fogg will be chairman of the Committee on Admissions. The difficult task that faces this committee can be deduced from the fact that there are ten applicants for every available place in the class that enters the School of Medicine each fall.

School of Medicine Returns to Pre-War Schedule

Returning to a peacetime program after a four-year accelerated war schedule, the School of Medicine this year opened its doors to 186 students, not including the senior class which entered in June.

Since the accelerated program began in July, 1942, 261 men and women were graduated from the School of Medicine, 217 being commissioned as medical officers in the Armed Forces. Both A.S.T.P. and Navy V-12 units participated in the Boston University medical training plan. The last commencement under the accelerated schedule was in March, 1946.

Of the four classes, 260 students were attending the school during the past year. There were 112 Army trainees, 67 Navy trainees, 36 veterans, 26 civilians, and 19 women students. In March, 1946, a six-month refresher course for veteran medical officers was inaugurated.

Although the September to May schedule will be effective for the first three classes, the fourth-year class began a 48-week senior year last June 3. This arrangement will enable senior students to have more extended assignments in certain important clinics at the Boston City Hospital and Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals than is possible in the usual 36-week senior course. Such a schedule for senior students is experimental for this year, and if it proves of sufficient advantage, the 48-week senior year may be continued as a permanent feature.

Aviation Physiologist Appointed to the School of Medicine

Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, President of the University, and Donald G. Anderson, Dean of the School of Medicine, have announced the appointment of Dr. Kenneth E. Penrod, of Needham, as Assistant Professor of Physiology at the Boston University School of Medicine.

Doctor Penrod, a native of Troy, Ohio, came to Boston University from Iowa State College where he has been an assistant professor of physiology since his discharge from the Army. He assumed his new duties at the School of Medicine on August 1. He is a graduate of Miami University and received his Ph.D. degree from Iowa State in 1942. He served four years in the Army as an aviation physiologist and was with the Aero-Medical Laboratory at Wright Field, Ohio, and the central medical establishment of the 8th Air Force in England.

109 Veterans at School of Medicine Register this Fall

Of the 186 students enrolled at the School of Medicine during September, 109 are attending under the G.I. Bill, and 18 women are enrolled in classes, according to Donald G. Anderson, Dean of the School of Medicine. There were 68 students registering for the first time of which number 41 were veterans, 7 were women, and 20 were civilian students.

IN MEMORIAM

ALICE STUART WOODMAN

Alice Stuart Woodman was born in Nova Scotia on June 29, 1880, and was graduated from Boston University School of Medicine in 1903. Following her internship at the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals, she was successively instructor, assistant professor, and associate professor in histology and embryology. She was retired July 1, 1945, after more than forty years on the faculty of the School of Medicine. Following her retirement, Doctor Woodman studied Braille and spent much time in transcribing children's books for the Perkins Institute. She was a member of The American Association for the Advancement of Science, The American Association of University Professors, The Women's City Club of Boston, and The Women's Republican Club of Massachusetts. Doctor Woodman was also a second vice-president of the Alumni Association of the School of Medicine and a former secretary of the Twentieth Century Medical Club.

HOWARD MERRILL CLUTE

Dr. Howard Merrill Clute, Surgeon-in-Chief of the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals from January 1, 1936, to June 1, 1945, died September 19, 1946. He was born in North Berwick, Maine, January 10, 1890, and was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1911 and the School of Medicine in 1914. In 1941, his Alma Mater bestowed a Doctor of Science degree for his illustrious work in the field of surgery. He was a major in the U. S. Medical Corps in World War I. In addition to being Surgeon-in-Chief at the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals and Professor of Surgery at the School of Medicine, he was a surgeon at the New England Deaconess Hospital. He was consultant and directing surgeon at the Burbank Hospital in Fitchburg and consultant in surgery at the Joseph Pratt Diagnostic Hospital. He was a Fellow of the American College of Surgery, a charter member of the American Board of Surgery, and a member of the American Medical Association, Massachusetts Medical Society, American Surgical Association, New England Surgical Society, Boston Surgical Society (of which he was President in 1945), the Southern Surgical Society, Societe Internationale de Chirurgie, and the American Society for the Study of Goiter. He had published 120 medical papers on various aspects of surgery and its associated problems. He leaves a wife, Josephine Price Clute, a daughter, Alice, and a son, Charles, who is stationed with the U. S. Marine Corps in China. Doctor Clute was not only a surgeon of national reputation, but a teacher, a leader of men, and a sincere and generous friend.
