2005-04-05

Conference: Muslims in Europe

Boston University Institute for Human Sciences

http://hdl.handle.net/2144/20145

Boston University
The Institute for Human Sciences at Boston University serves as a forum for new, non-partisan debate, research, and education in the matters of international (especially transatlantic) relations, introducing European insights and experiences to American debates on major social and political issues, and bringing American perspectives to bear on European discussions. It is affiliated with the Vienna based Institut für die Wissenschaften vom Menschen (IWM), an independent, interdisciplinary center for advanced study in the humanities and social sciences.

European Studies at Boston University is a new interdisciplinary program which is developing European Studies major and minor concentrations. The program sponsors a lecture series and has a Scholar in Residence Program to bring in European professors and professionals for short-term visits. Initiated by the Jean Monnet Chair for European Integration, Professor Vivien A. Schmidt, the program includes faculty from history, art history, languages, English, political science, international relations, economics, and sociology. This year, the program has received generous support from the European Union Commission to develop its academic and outreach activities.