THE PLACE OF MEDITATION IN THE LIFE OF A STUDENT

By RUFUS M. JONES

Dr. Jones is a graduate of Haverford College in Pennsylvania and has studied at Heidelberg and Oxford. He is a minister of the Society of Friends and a member of the American Theological Society. Since 1893 he has taught Philosophy at Haverford. Dr. Jones has written numerous books, among which are The Inner Life, The World Within, and Pathways to the Reality of God. The following address delivered before Boston University students, on Tuesday, October 17, is a stenographic report.

IF YOU WENT to the Grand Canyon, as I hope you will go before very long, the thing you would do the minute you get up to the great ridge and have stood on the edge and looked off would be to fall into a hush. It would be an absolute hush and if anybody was along and began to chatter about it you would want to push him over the edge, because the right attitude as everybody knows in the presence of a stupendous reality is to be quiet and to have nothing said.

I have been going to a Quaker Meeting at Haverford where our entire student body and entire staff of professors go together every Thursday, and we sit down without a word spoken. I never heard a hymn sung in my life in that meeting and usually there isn't a thing happens for the first ten minutes. This year one hundred of the students or new men never attended a Meeting before; about forty per cent of the students were Episcopalians, and almost as many Presbyterians, and the fringe of Quakers very slight indeed and yet there was hardly a muscle moved as we sat down in the perfect quiet. I am convinced that something happened to every fellow who was there. He felt himself in the presence of something great, and the interesting thing about corporate silence is that it can be a case of team work in which everybody lends his soul out to raise the atmosphere in intensity and expectancy of the occasion. It isn't a good meeting if that doesn't happen. It is like a football game; a star player can accomplish nothing without the backing of his team. You can't have great football without team work. You can't have great spiritual hush without team work. Learn how to have the team work and to intensify the expectancy. Expectancy is the great thing. Have the pause like the pause you would have if you went to the Grand Canyon.

What do you do when you come to "selah" in a psalm? I am always interested to see what people do with "selah." Sometimes they look at it and then say "selah" and sometimes they skip over it. What is it for? It is a pause like a pause in music. There come moments in a great orchestra when there is a pause. They have been climbing up to a great musical end and all of a sudden every instrument stops, but the conductor goes on beating. The violins continue to bow without touching. You climb up through that pause through a greater height than you do during the music. You begin on a high level following the pause. It is intended when you reach "selah" that you stop. When you come to a comma you count 2, colon 3, period 4. "Selah" you don't count. You just let your soul rise to the height of the great truth that has just been uttered. If you did say anything it would be "Think of that. Just think of that."

We don't have enough of these "selah" moments when silence and wonder just fill your being and you want to stop and see what it is all about. The strangest place almost to find one of these "selah" passages is in the 119th Psalm. It is a psalm written by a scribe, a legal scribe. I learned it when I was eight but it is too long for a boy and it was too legal. Right in the midst of the legal psalm there bursts out this great saying "O eternal God, thou dost open up my life." Supposing that did happen. Supposing God did open up your life and for once all your possibilities came into view and all of a sudden you found yourself.

I have a great sympathy with that colored man who had been ill and got well again. When asked how he was cured he said, "That doctor, he gave me something that just went through my personality." You can't say anything better than that you got something like that out of life. "Out of all the gray days of my life I know at last what life means."

There is a splendid book called "Twenty Minutes of Reality." If you can get twenty minutes of reality you can get a whole lot more. Two years after St. Francis died his great friend Thomas of Celano wrote his life and he described that moment when something happened to Francis' life. "He spoke," this man says, "as though a blazing fire had kindled his entire inmost being. It filled everybody with wonder and he became a new man from what he had ever been. From that time on he began to work miracles."

One of my best college students had been at one of these Quaker Meetings and as soon as it was over he came to my study and sitting on the edge of his chair, said, "I'm going to make my life a miracle."

Here was a man who suddenly woke up. He did, and I don't believe many college students get that out of themselves. They never wake up. You aren't quite living if you don't get something out of that pause before you let it go.

Another one of my students was just graduating from college and he came down to my study and said "I'm going to put into my life more that is shining. I am going out to China to the hardest province in China to work in."

"No, you aren't," I said, "Haverford has been watching you and seeing you grow and you must not go to such a backward place and work. Stay with people of your own kind."

"Haverford has shown me what life means. It has put this spirit of service into my soul and I'm going to do that."

"Go ahead." And I wish you could see what he has done. When that great uprising came and all Americans left the province this fellow took his wife's hand and they knelt down and stayed a long time in silence; one of those great pauses. Then he rose and kissed his wife and said, "Of course, we are going to stay."

He called in the Chinese and told them, "If we were afraid of you and ran away when danger came, what would you think of us?" And he stayed.

"Thou, O God, dost open up my life."

I think one trouble with us, and I must say it is a trouble, is that students fall into the habit of being superficial. You sometimes have length to your life. There is a goal that you see and that measures the length of your life, but so seldom do we rise up and have height and depth. You can't have a great life if you have just two dimensions. Pull off number 70 cotton from a spool. Reel it off. Just one dimension. You want length, breadth, and height and you can't get it if you don't get quiet, if you don't have those pauses when the greatness of life breaks in on you.

A friend of mine met a gentleman in Broad Street Station and said, "How's everything going?"

"Oh, I'm doing my little work in my little way."

In the first place that is mock humility, and in the second place you know right off he isn't going to get anything done. Don't think that way about yourself. You must have great expectation. Lift your life out of littleness to greatness. That remarkable little book "The Practice in the Presence of God" by Brother Lawrence is a book you all ought to read.

Saturate yourself with the ideal and the methods in it. This man lived a very humdrum life and he had the humblest tasks to do and yet all the brotherhood said about him that he had amplitude of soul. Well, I can't think of anything I would rather have said about me than "that old fellow had amplitude." It is from bigness to the inward reach of the individual. You should never get to the point where you never know what is ahead of you and you never have a chance to find yourself. My old teacher at Harvard, J. H. Thayer, an old man when I had him, told us one day how you could often get a great truth out of a text when you really wanted to. He told how an oysterman in Boston got converted at a meeting and called the oystermen together and took for his text one day, "Thou knowest I am an oysterman." Isn't it wonderful that Christ had revealed himself as an oysterman. "He found us in the mud. He cracked our hard shells open and found what we were meant for." After he had finished one of the men who was not quite so moved told him that the text really was "Thou knowest I am an austere man."

"I don't care what it is, I got eight converts on it."

Doesn't Christ open up our lives? I can't believe that mysticism is going to be very effective if you don't start meditating with the stupendous sense of awe and wonder. To just sit down is not enough. You have got to come to it as you come to the Grand Canyon. Marvel at life and at life in Christ and the way in which he finds us. The thrill of expectation is what makes meditation great. The complete hush, the concentration of a group and the expectancy of everybody that here is an opportunity to have my whole inner self fertilized with life and power and here is a chance to be kindled and quickened for life service. Nothing can be greater or better. "I am going to make my life a miracle." Wherever Christianity comes alive miracles happen. Water is changed to wine, the lame man walks, the blind see, and the sunset is turned to sunrise. The trouble with us is that we don't expect anything. We go through a kind of routine in a dull work, doing our little work in our little way. Lift it all up and think of the infinite greatness of life and expect to find God and expect to find amplitude of life and you can make your meditation rich and great.

Whittier in "Pennsylvania Pilgrim" says,

"Without spoken words low breathings stole
Of a diviner life from soul to soul
Baptising in one tender thought the whole."

THE TRUSTEES OF BOSTON UNIVERSITY

Annual Meeting

The annual business meeting of the Board of Trustees of Boston University was held on the afternoon of Thursday, October 5, with Judge Alonzo R. Weed, Chairman of the Board, presiding. The election of three new trustees, Judge Emma Fall Schofield, Hon. Merton L. Brown, and Mr. Howard B. Ward, was announced.

The formal business meeting was followed by a reception and dinner at which more than three hundred members of the faculty and administrative staff and their wives were the guests of the trustees. Judge Weed presided and introduced President Daniel L. Marsh who gave his annual report to the trustees. The President's report this year took an unusual form. At his request faculty members and others had submitted to him in advance questions concerning Boston University, its policies, and its problems. President Marsh arranged these questions in a logical sequence and made his answers his report. The result was the interesting and illuminating document which together with the Treasurer's report will be sent to all alumni with the compliments of the Alumni Association.

Of more than usual interest was the Treasurer's report. The total income for the year ending June 30, 1933 was $1,855,952.50, a decrease of 10.8 per cent from the preceding year's income. There was considerable satisfaction in learning that the deficit, which had at one time threatened to be $200,000 had been reduced, by good management, to $56,678.94. In his report, the President explained how this notable feat had been accomplished and announced that, so carefully had the budget been planned, no deficit was expected in the coming year.

The officers of the Board of Trustees were re-elected as follows:

Chairman: Judge Alonzo R. Weed
Vice Chairman: Hon. Frank G. Allen
Secretary: Lieut.-Gov. Gaspar G. Bacon
Treasurer: E. Ray Speare

Three New Trustees

Three new trustees, two of them graduates of Boston University, were elected at the annual meeting of the Board of Trustees at the University Club, October 5.

JUDGE EMMA FALL SCHOFIELD

Added to the women members of the Board was Judge Emma Fall Schofield, Massachusetts' first woman judge. Her father was George Howard Fall, a graduate of the College of Liberal Arts in 1883, of the Law School in 1886, and holder also of the A.M. and Ph.D. degrees from Boston University. For years he taught Roman Law and Constitutional Law at the College of Liberal Arts. Her mother, Anna Cristy Fall, who held the degrees of A.B., A.M. and LL.B. from Boston University, was the first woman lawyer in Massachusetts to try a jury case. Mrs. Schofield herself graduated at Boston University in 1906 and from the Law School in 1908. Immediately commencing the practice of law, Miss Fall (as she was then) specialized in the social aspects of law. In 1911 and 1912 she was a probation officer in Springfield. From 1913 to 1916 she was a member of the Malden School Board. After her marriage to Albert Schofield in 1916, Mr. and Mrs. Schofield spent four years in Africa and in travelling. Since Mrs. Schofield's return to the United States, she has been increasingly active in public affairs. She has been a member of the industrial accident board, and assistant attorney-general. At present she is a Judge in the Malden District Court. Mrs. Schofield is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority and of Phi Delta Delta legal fraternity. Mr. and Mrs. Schofield have two sons.

Officially representing the Alumni Association on the Board of Trustees is Merton Lewis Brown, Commissioner of Insurance of Massachusetts, and President of the Boston University Alumni Association. Mr. Brown was born in Houlton, Maine, December 30,

HON. MERTON L. BROWN

1892 and received the degrees of A.B. and LL.B. from Boston University in 1910 and 1912. He was a member of the Common Council of Malden, 1915 to 1916 and of the Board of Aldermen, 1918 and 1919. He has been Malden's city solicitor since 1924, and State Commissioner of Insurance since 1928. He is unmarried.

The third new member of the Board of Trustees is Howard B. Ward, a retired business man, and former director and officer of the Ward Baking Company. He resides in New Rochelle, New York. Bostonia hopes to publish a photograph and a more extended biographical account of Mr. Ward in its next issue.

The Chairman of the Board

An interview with Judge Weed

If meeting Judge Weed on the bench is as pleasant as meeting him in the Judge's Lobby of the Superior Court, his court must have a crowded docket. Mr. Weed does not look like a heavy-handed judge. Rather he has the appearance of a literary man. Tall, slender, his gray, almost white hair contrasts sharply with his clear-skinned youthful face. His rather serious countenance is lightened frequently by a sudden exceedingly friendly smile. His glasses carried at the end of a narrow ribbon accentuate his scholarly appearance.

The Judge did not wish to be interviewed. He had said so in his letter. But, he wrote, "I shall be glad to see you." Modesty and courtesy are two of his characteristics.

Judge Weed is chairman of the Board of Trustees of Boston University. He presides with dignity and quiet good humor over its meetings, both private and public. He understands Boston University and its problems. Perhaps this is because he has been a teacher in Boston University. He has been more, for during the year 1911-12 he was acting Dean of the School of Law.

Alonzo R. Weed was born in Bangor, Maine, January 22, 1867, the son of Alonzo Shaw and Esther Ann (Marston) Weed. Both his mother and father came originally from Sandwich, New Hampshire, where his mother's father was in the lumber business and his father's father a blacksmith, as his father had been before him. As the pine forests of New Hampshire were depleted his mother's people moved to Bangor where they already had interests. As a boy Alonzo S. Weed moved there, too, to become a clerk in a dry-goods store. He boarded with the Marston family and in due time fell in love and married the daughter. Alonzo R. Weed was their third child. Soon after the Civil War, his parents moved to Boston where his father became publishing agent for Zion's Herald. Judge Weed still lives in the house in Newton into which his father moved in 1871. The Judge graduated from Harvard in 1887 and from the Boston University Law School three years later. He well remembers Dean Bennett, his lucid exposition of the law of contract and his wise administrations, the profound scholarship of Dr. Bigelow, — the keen intellect of Brooks Adams, — the great teacher and lawyer Elias Merwin, — and many others who gave to the school its great reputation.

From 1894 to 1913 he taught Equity and later

Equity Pleading, taking time from his growing law practice to do this. It is valuable experience, he says, for a lawyer to teach a subject in the practice of which he is engaged. As his law practice and public duties came to take up more and more of his time he felt that he had to choose which he would do.

JUDGE ALONZO R. WEED

Since he was already a trustee of the University it is not surprising that he was chosen to act as dean upon the resignation of Dean Bigelow and until a successor was chosen for the place. In consequence he had the satisfaction of helping obtain the services of Homer Albers as Dean of the School of Law.

Judge Weed practiced law for several years with his brother, George M. Weed, under the firm name of Weed and Weed. In 1907 the brothers joined Mr. D. C. Brewer and the firm was renamed Brewer, Weed and Weed. From 1899 to 1903 the Judge was an Alderman of Newton and during 1904 and 1905 Mayor. He was a member of the Massachusetts Board of Gas and Electric Light Commissioners from 1906 to 1919, and from 1914 to 1919 its chairman. From 1919 to 1922, when he became Associate Justice of the Superior Court of Massachusetts, he was a member of the Public Utilities Commission.

The wisdom accumulated by wide experience, Judge Weed devotes to Boston University. His associates know him as the possessor of the ideal judicial temperament, quiet, clear-thinking, firm, and above all, sagacious.

To Judge Weed as he enters his twenty-seventh year as a member of the Board of Trustees of Boston University, Bostonia extends its best wishes.

LITERARY FELLOWSHIPS

Younghill Kang and Louise Bogan Appointed to the Guggenheim Foundation

By ROBERT M. WALSH, '28

Younghill Kang, author of The Grass Roof and lecturer at New York University, was appointed in August to the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation. Mr. Kang, a graduate of Boston University in 1925, is spending the year abroad writing a novel in accordance with the purpose of the award. For creative writing, Louise Bogan, a student at Boston University in 1915-16, poet and author of Dark Summer, was appointed earlier in the year to the same foundation.

The Guggenheim fellowships for advanced study abroad were established by the Hon. and Mrs. Simon Guggenheim as a memorial to a son who died in 1922. They are for the purpose of improving the quality of education and the practice of the arts and professions in the United States, fostering research, and providing for the cause of better international understanding. Twenty-nine fellows, including two renewals and one to accompany the second Byrd Antarctic Expedition, have been appointed for the year 1934. Appointments include seven for creative writing, seven for painting, two for music, two for sculpture, three for physics, two each for chemistry and zoölogy, two for history and two for economics. In addition, nine fellows have been appointed from Latin America for research in the United States.

Louise Bogan was born at Livermore Falls, Maine, on August 11, 1897, of Irish-American parentage. Her father's people came from Londonderry and her mother's from Dublin. Her paternal grandfather, James Bogan, was a sea-captain out of Portland Harbor. She received her early education at St. Mary's Academy, Manchester, N. H., and at Girl's Latin School, Boston. She attended Boston University for the academic year 1915-16 where she contributed verse to the Beacon. After leaving Boston University she lived in New York City for the most part during the next ten years, except for a year spent in Vienna in 1922 and another in Santa Fe, New Mexico. In 1924-25 she served as associate editor of The Measure: A Journal of Poetry. In 1916 she married Curt Alexander, who died in 1920 leaving one child, a daughter, Mathilde. On July 10, 1925, she married Raymond P. Holden, himself a poet of distinction, and now lives on a small farm in upper eastern New York State.

Miss Bogan's work was first published in the New Republic. She has also contributed verse, criticism and fiction to the New Yorker, Poetry — A Magazine of Verse, Scribner's Magazine and other periodicals. She has written two books of verse, Body of This Death (McBride, 1923) and Dark Summer (Scribner's, 1929). In 1930 she was awarded the John Reed Memorial Prize by Poetry as "a tribute to the high distinction" of her work.

Her poems are wrought with extreme care and charged with intent emotion. They are authentic stuff, and contain a wistful beauty, serenity of movement, vitality of thought, simplicity of diction and a sense of richness. They excel in the polished phrase and bear the stamp of finished craftsmanship. Yvor Winters, writing in the New Republic, has said that "she is beyond any doubt one of the principal ornaments of contemporary poetry." And the New York Evening Post has called her "one of the most important women poets of the present generation."

As an example of her style at its purest and most intense, the following quatrain is quoted from "Simple Autumnal":

The measured blood beats out the year's delay.
The tearless eyes and heart forbidden grief,
Watch the burned, restless, but abiding leaf,
The brighter branches arming the bright day.

LOUISE BOGAN

Younghill Kang, a Korean of poetic temperament, was born May 10, 1903, in Hamheung, Korea. He is a graduate of Youngsaing High School (1918) and Dalhousie College (1921). In 1925, he received an S.B. degree from Boston University, where he was a member of Beta Chi Sigma fraternity. Harvard University awarded him an Ed.M. degree in 1927. He was a member of the editorial staff of the Encyclopaedia Britannica in 1928-29; since 1929 he has been a lecturer on comparative literature at New York University.

Mr. Kang has had two books published: Translations of Oriental Poetry, 1929, and The Grass Roof, 1931. The Grass Roof is autobiographical and was well received on publication. In it he tells of his early education in Korea, the life and manners of the people, the Japanese invasion and of the chaotic upheaval in peasant life following the occupation and rule by Japan. As a student, Younghill engaged in rebellious activities and served at least one term in jail. He escaped finally, and through the agency of a missionary he made his way to America where he was enabled to complete his formal education.

In addition to the two books mentioned, Mr. Kang has contributed articles to the Encyclopaedia Britannica, the Saturday Review of Literature, the New Republic, the Nation, the Asia Magazine and several other periodicals. He has also translated English classics into Chinese and Korean. The Grass Roof, however, has been his principal achievement to date. It is a stirring and ardent book of unusual charm, characterized by the New Republic as "important and memorable," and by the London Times as "a most interesting and unusual autobiography." It is a record of man's wandering and exile upon the earth, told in simple, almost poetic, prose, and infused with a glowing vitality and color.

C.B.A.'s 20th Anniversary Celebration in Honor of Dean Lord

The 20th anniversary of the founding of the College of Business Administration was marked by special celebrations in honor of Dean Everett W. Lord who has been Dean of the College during practically the whole period of its existence.

The observance of the anniversary began on October 13 with the presentation of a huge birthday cake to Dean Lord by the Evening Division of the College. Edward W. Keough, President of the Evening Division, President Marsh, Professor Harry B. Center, Professor Leo Drew O'Neil, and Professor Charles E. Bellatty participated in the ceremony.

Saturday, October 14, was "Homecoming Day" for the members of the Graduate Club of the College. Alumni of the Department attended the Boston University-Colby football game at Nickerson Recreation Field and a reception in honor of Dean Lord in the clubhouse. In the evening Alpha Kappa Psi and Sigma Alpha Epsilon held banquets, and Chi Sigma Chi an "open house," as part of the homecoming festivities.

Younghill Kang's Latest Book

THE HAPPY GROVE. By Younghill Kang, $2.00 New York: Charles Scribner's Sons, 1933.

Those who remember Younghill Kang's Grass Roof will need no introduction to the plot of the Happy Grove. This volume tells the story of the author's boyhood in Korea as it is contained in the first Book of the earlier work. The story has been revised by deletions and additions to appeal especially to younger readers, who will find it a truly delightful narrative. He includes in this book an entire chapter of new material (Chapter IV) not found in the Grass Roof. This consists of two very charming folk-tales told to the children of the Han household by the childless aunt. He carries the story up to the point where he enters the Japanese high school in Seoul. To those who have Western learning thrust upon them the story of the little boy who walked one thousand li (three hundred miles) to get this education is very touching.

Readers will be charmed by the boyish simplicity of the telling of the story of leadership of the village gang by Chung-Pa (Kang) and his trusty lieutenants, Chak-Doo-Shay and Yun-Koo. Their oath to become the three greatest men in the world will amuse and delight all lovers of boys of eight. His true companionship with Poohung and Da'ksali will find response in all boys, who, of course, find dogs superior to adults in understanding. His girl cousin Ok-Dong-Ya, daughter of the crazy poet uncle, is a very beautiful heroine, although she is, to be sure, somewhat overshadowed by the hero—but then, Korea was a man's country.

There has been some development in Kang's style in the direction of a more facile rendering in English. This is to be seen more especially in those retranslations of Korean poems which are contained in both this book and the Grass Roof. There are, moreover, a number of hitherto unpublished Korean poems from his own translation (with assistance of Miss Frances Keely) which greatly enhance the charm of his story. One of them describes nobility in modest circumstances:

"If the mountain is not high
Immortal ghosts can make it great.
If the water is not deep
A dragon there can give it might.
If the roof is very narrow
Only deeds can make it shine;
Then moss will green the steps with life
And fertile grass will thread the bamboo-blind."

Two poems express divergent views of Autumn:

"Full moonlight, full moonlight
As I go boating up the Autumn river.
Under the sky, the water;
O boatman, catch that moon!
Drunken I'd live with long immortal gazing . . ."

and:

"The Odong tree streams water.
There the rain drips without ending.
As I mourn
Every leaf sods its aching Autumn song.
Plant this wide-leaved tree no more!"

Dean Lord's Twenty Years

A School of Navigation and Commerce appears as part of the original plan for the organization of Boston University. With almost startling foresight the Trustees on October 25, 1873 discussed "the advisability of opening at an early date the College of Commerce and Navigation . . . suggested by the President of the Board (William Claflin)." The subject was "made the theme of incidental conversation by the members present," and "on the motion of Doctor Patten, it was voted that William Claflin, William F. Warren and Henry O. Houghton be a Committee to take this whole subject into consideration. To this committee was added John W. Lindsay. The committee's report was necessarily adverse due to financial conditions.

But forty years later, in the fall of 1913, the College of Business Administration opened with an enrollment of 274 students who attended classes five evenings a week from seven to nine o'clock. In 1916 the Day Division was organized, with an initial student group of 220. This year, too, the present home of the college was rented. Thus step by step, the advance has been made. The broadening of the curriculum, the organization of the student body along the lines of "Academic Democracy," to use Dean Lord's phrase, the establishment of the R.O.T.C., the founding of the Boston University News, are but few of the many contributions made to University life. And from the beginning, Dean Lord, though not the first Dean, has been in the truest sense, the guiding genius. Not to every college dean is given the privilege of being the founder of the college over which he presides. But that privilege was Dean Lord's, twenty years ago.

Twenty years! So old was Boston University when the last of its founders Jacob Sleeper, died in 1889. Yet even then, the institution, young in years, but old in its heritage of ideals, had built strong for the future. So, too, in twenty years, under the guidance of Dean Lord, the College of Business Administration has made its influence felt in ever-widening fields. Not for many years has this Department of the University been an experiment in education. Long ago it found a particular place in the community, a fact evidenced by the numbers who have found educational service there. Still, the College of Business Administration has been continuously experimental, never afraid to branch out into new paths, if so its services could be extended.

How does it feel to be a founder-dean? Only Dean Lord can say and his answer would not likely be ours. But those hosts of students, past and present, who know him and who love him, would have him feel happy, and proud of what he has wrought. He may feel with true humility, "So much to do, so little done," but they will point to an institution, thronged with youth, led by him, inspired by him, the creation of his labor of twenty years. If Dean Lord has been as happy living these twenty years as he should be in his recollection of them, he is indeed a happy man.

Education and the New Leisure

A problem unprecedented in American history looms upon the horizon, the problem of leisure. Articles on "the Challenge of the New Leisure," "You can lead a Nation to Leisure . . .", and the like have been appearing of late in our newspapers and periodicals. The interest of the general public in leisure has been aroused by the spread throughout our industries, under the National Recovery Act, of a forty hour week. This particular measure is admittedly a temporary one, but it is already clear that if it fails it will be replaced by a measure still more drastic; indeed the American Federation of Labor is now calling for a thirty hour week. Under the shorter working week a worker has more free time at his disposal than he spends on his job. It has long been the goal of industrialism to give as much work as possible to machines and as little as possible to men. The new leisure has come to stay.

Many and varied are the plans for the use of the new leisure. The amusement industries are preparing for expansion. Race-track betting is increasing and gambling devices are multiplying. Shall our educational institutions be the last to awake to this new opportunity? Let them recognize at once that the noble use of leisure is the aim of education, as valid and vital an aim as training for a vocation. Schools should teach hobbies as well as trades. Many of these hobbies might be cultural or even intellectual. A taste for music, art, or literature, an interest in science, even the science of government, once acquired, could easily be pursued during leisure hours and it might prove to be an absorbing recreation. Such recreations are often of great value to society. Grote, who worked in a bank, became an authority on Greek history in his spare time. James Ford Rhodes was a business man as well as an historian. An English working-man, in a recent year, had a landscape accepted by the Royal Academy. A government clerk has made contributions to literature which are widely known. Might not America, through education, transform her new leisure into a new culture?

Outwitting the Depression

Editorial comment in the daily papers on the recent report of the Treasurer of Boston University has been complimentary. To have come through the year with a deficit of but $56,000 is, says one paper "an achievement of the first order." Both the President of the University and the Treasurer have every reason to be gratified at this well-deserved praise. Under their leadership, what threatened to be a dangerously large deficit was kept within reasonable limits, and plans made for a balanced budget for the current year. With no large endowment to fall back on, and already practicing rigid economies in all directions, Boston University was compelled to adopt heroic methods. Salaries were reduced, the personnel decreased, every expenditure was carefully examined. The results of self-scrutiny are usually beneficial, no less in the case of a university than in the case of an individual. The continual self-scrutiny practiced at Boston University is one of the best assurances that the University is alive to its responsibilities.

An Appeal to Class Secretaries

Early in September the Editor sent a letter to a selected list of class secretaries and other graduates. Unfortunately, the best available list of class secretaries was neither accurate nor complete, but the Alumni Office is preparing such a list as speedily as possible. The letter read as follows:

Dear _____,

May I have your help in making Bostonia to a greater extent an alumni news magazine?

You have doubtless thought to yourself once in a while, "Why does not Bostonia contain more news of my classmates and friends?" The answer is simple: "Because Bostonia has no paid staff of reporters who make it their business to collect such news. It is dependent upon its friends who send in all personal announcements of a formal character, and also news of themselves and their friends. In addition the local papers are searched carefully."

But this is not enough. We need a larger force of interested helpers. So I am appealing to all the class secretaries whose names I have been able to obtain, and to other alumni as well, to send me alumni news for publication.

Please tell me if this office can assist you by sending you a list of members of your own class with names and addresses, or if we can help you by addressing letters. It would be ideal if we could have news of every alumnus and alumna at least once each year. Will you help us to attempt that goal?

Yours very sincerely

Robert E. Moody

Doubtless many other secretaries have class lists in their possession. The Editor will be grateful for their cooperation. He would also appreciate hearing from any whose names are not on the lists in his possession and who consequently did not receive the letter printed above. To all alumni who have contributed news items, he extends his thanks.

Directors' Meeting, Boston University Alumni Association, October 11

Fourteen directors of the Alumni Association were present at the meeting on October 11, and the following Executive Committee was chosen for the coming year:

David Brickman, C.B.A. '31
Doris E. Campbell, P.A.L. '26
Leroy M. S. Miner, Medicine '07
Nellie E. Powers, Education '23
W. H. Shaffert, S.R.E. '27

It was voted that the balance on hand of the Alumni Fund be transferred to the Sixtieth Anniversary Building Fund.

Consideration was given by the Directors to the problem of locating alumni whose addresses are unknown.

It was voted that the President of the Alumni Association should at his convenience appoint three committees, to consist each of ten representatives of the alumni for the following purposes:

1. To consider with the President and a committee of the faculty, if the President should decide to appoint one, plans whereby the students in all departments of the University during the first semester may be educated in the history, traditions, and ambitions of Boston University.
2. A committee to consider with the President and a faculty committee plans for the proper education of the senior class in each department each year as to the importance of maintaining their University connection by membership in the Alumni Association and to start seniors each year as contributors toward the Boston University program.
3. A committee to consider the whole subject of alumni activities in connection with the raising of money for Boston University and to report their recommendations to the Board of Directors. The next regular meeting of the Board will be held on Tuesday, December 12.

Law School Alumni Pass Bar Exams

Sixty-two of the ninety-six graduates of the School of Law who took Massachusetts bar examinations recently, will be recommended for admission to the bar. With the increasing emphasis on legal standards, this high percentage of success is gratifying. Out of the entire six hundred men and women who took the examinations, two hundred and twenty-five or 37 per cent were successful. The complete list of Boston University graduates who passed the examinations follows:

Louise Winsor Brooks Student Loan Fund

Through the generosity of Miss Louise Brooks, a Boston woman who has contributed much to philanthropic causes, Mr. T. Everett Fairchild, in charge of Boston University Student loan funds, has become custodian of notes for a sum of about $3000 now out on loan to various students of greater Boston. When Miss Brooks some years ago decided that her contributions to charity could best be made through the agency of a full time worker, she engaged the services of Miss Laura Heathfield, whose understanding of the problems involved has made possible the successful carrying out of many worthy benefactions.

One of the interesting features of Miss Heathfield's work has been the collection and lending of funds to students in the colleges of greater Boston. These funds have been contributed not only by Miss Brooks, but by many others as well. Roland Hayes, the famous negro tenor, made one of the earliest contributions in recognition of the assistance which Miss Brooks had previously extended to him during the days of his early struggles for recognition.

Recent financial conditions have made it impossible for Miss Brooks to continue the arrangement with Miss Heathfield. On Miss Heathfield's advice the notes outstanding have been turned over to Mr. Fairchild for collection as they become due and for re-lending to other students. Many of the beneficiaries of these loans are now students at Boston University. Other loan funds in charge of Mr. Fairchild, exclusive of the Brooks Fund, amount to $5000. Assistance is being given to some sixty-five students this semester and the average loan amounts to from $50 to $75 a semester.

These funds, of course, constitute but a part of the loan funds available for students at Boston University, other funds being administered by the Deans of the respective Departments.

Samuel Lord Fauntleroy

Marion L. Starkey, C.L.A., '22, writing in the Boston Globe recently under the title of Little Lord Fauntleroy, describes the early life of one of Boston University's most stimulating faculty members, Professor of Romance Languages Samuel Montefiore Waxman.

Born in Boston on the site now occupied by the Shubert Theater, Professor Waxman as a boy was denied the privileges of a Huckleberry Finn and made to conform to the Lord Fauntleroy ideal. "His yellow hair was naturally curly (the incredulous take notice) and could be shaped into the divinest ringlets by his doting female relatives. And when they walked him down Tremont Street in his velvet kilts, lace collar and cuffs, his little cane in hand, lovely ladies stopped to exclaim over him."

Here he developed habits that were to burst forth in later life in the shape of cute bow ties and gardenias flaunted in his buttonhole.

"He grew up," Miss Starkey continues. "He got rid of his velvet kilts. He took up Swedish gymnastics with a view to packing a mean wallop if anyone ever picked a fight with him . . ."

And he has been ready and eager to take on all comers ever since. An exponent of the manly art, Professor Waxman has taken sides verbally in many a "cause celebre." Fond of smelly pipes and fragrant gardens, which he cultivates at his beautiful home in Cambridge and his summer residence on the South Shore, our Samuel Lord Fauntleroy is also noted for his great aversion to Babbits, grabits and academic rabbits. The story appeared on the editorial page of the Globe under the general heading "Boston's Family Album."

Theology Dinner

ALPHA CHAPTER REUNION HELD ON OCTOBER 18

The annual dinner of the Alpha Chapter of the School of Theology alumni was held at the Copley Church vestry on the evening of October 18. Garfield Morgan, '20, pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Lynn, was the principal speaker of the evening. He gave an able and spirited talk on the value of a School of Theology training to a minister of any denomination and of the contribution of the School of Theology to the ministry.

Dr. Elmer Leslie of the School of Theology faculty, S.T. '13, G. '16, was chairman of arrangements. Dean Knudson opened the meeting with a welcoming address. Mr. George A. Dunn, C.L.A. '89, Alumni Secretary, spoke in congratulation to the Alpha Chapter, and expressed the interest of the General Alumni Association in the continuance of the departmental clubs, and of the association's wish to cooperate with them.

The dinner was attended by alumni from all the New England states, from New York, Pennsylvania, New Brunswick, and Northern India. Nearly 150 alumni were present. The hero of the evening was Paul Hulslander, from Oswego, New York, who had recently rescued a young woman from drowning in the Charles River Basin. In response to urgent demand he gave a brief account, modest and humorous, of his adventure.

The School of Theology Class of 1924 held a reunion supper at the Hotel Westminster on October 17. Lawrence H. Blackburn was in charge of arrangements.

Contralto with Charm

MARION SELEE, '22, SINGS AT WORCESTER MUSIC FESTIVAL

One of the most delightful personalities at the Worcester Music Festival this fall was Marion Selee, who received her A.B. degree and Music Supervisor's Certificate from the College of Liberal Arts in 1922. She sang in "The Rio Grande" by Constance Lambert, and had an important role in the opera, "The Secret Marriage."

Miss Selee is the granddaughter of Anna Maria Selee, a graduate of the Medical School, and daughter of the Rev. John D. Pickles, for many years a trustee of Boston University. Her mother, Lucy C. Selee, also was a graduate of the College of Liberal Arts.

A contralto, Miss Selee has had much experience in concert and as music supervisor in several towns and cities. She attended the music school at Fontainebleau, France, in the Summer of 1926. A fellowship enabled her to continue her studies at the Juilliard Graduate School. She took vocal lessons under Paul Reimers of the School faculty at New York from 1928 to 1932, and has studied under the late Charles A. White of Boston. Miss Selee sang in the Chautauqua Opera Company for four seasons with Albert Stoessal conducting. She sang one season in New York in the Opera Comique, and has traveled with the American Opera Company. She is now affiliated with the San Carlo Opera Company, on tour, and has had considerable success in the various roles which she has sung.

In addition, Miss Selee has appeared many times on the concert stage. In Worcester she sang in concert with Rosa Fonselle and was accompanied by Jesu Maria San Roma of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Miss Selee is five feet six inches in height, and has a flashing, brilliant smile. Not a small part of her success on the concert and opera stage may be attributed to her unusual acting ability.

The B. U. News Interviews "Danny"

"You may quote me as saying that the past two days have been the most enjoyable in my entire life," Danny, the pedigreed Boston terrier mascot, told a News representative last Saturday evening, as he lay on his soft blanket in the Newton home of his guardian, Norman M. S. Gay, manager of the University Bookstores.

The year-old terrier was presented to President Daniel L. Marsh as the University's official mascot in the afternoon, and Dr. Marsh designated the manager of the bookstores as custodian of the dog, with the stipulation that Danny will spend the summer months with the President's family.

"AM I PLEASED . . . ?"

"Am I pleased to be at Boston University? I should say I am," yipped the new mascot, as he shifted himself to a more comfortable position. "You know when the boys told me that I was not yet paid for — that was last Thursday evening — I resolved to do my part and try to win student and alumni support to my purchase fund. Well, the first opportunity that I had to 'strut my stuff' came Friday morning, when your boss (News editor) took me on a tour of the University's undergraduate departments.

"Our first port of call was C. B. A., where I found little difficulty in winning over the various secretaries. It didn't require a single bark to do it," Danny continued. "Dean Lord was not in, so we travelled along Boylston street, in the general direction of C. L. A. I felt quite tired by the time we reached the office building at 675, and I suggested that we step into the University Bureau of Appointments to rest a bit. And were the people nice to me in that building — all except one. That was a young lady in the Press Bureau. I can't pronounce her name, but she was rather a snooty Doberman Pincher. I walked up to her and said 'hello,' to which she replied, quite rudely, 'go home, this is my territory.'

"At C. L. A. I first met the President, and let me tell you, Mr. Reporter, he is a 'regular feller.' So is his whole office staff, and it didn't take them long to make me feel entirely at home. Oh, yes, Ralph E. Brown, University comptroller, welcomed me with open arms. I was rather disappointed in him, though, because the 'boys' had told me that he always smokes a big cigar. But he didn't have one when I dropped in to see him. Ralph — that is what I call him — told your boss that story you heard about the Brown bear this afternoon. E. Ray Speare was in the office at the time, and I must say they treated me white, and I certainly hated to leave them.

"After dropping in to see Walter James, University bursar, Dean Warren and the C. L. A. registrar, we walked over to the School of Education," the new mascot went on. "Prof. Linwood Chase invited me to attend his class in secondary education, but my escorts told me that there wasn't time enough. After bidding farewell to the School of Education 'gang,' we visited the College of Music, where we made a real 'hit.' Before we left, a couple of co-eds played 'Clarissima' for me. It was the first time that I had heard it, and I must say that it sounded 'swell.' I thanked the girls, and we headed for P. A. L.

"On the way over to Garrison street, the fellows told me to act my best, because the college is exclusively for women, and you know how fussy women are. Well, I never was much of a 'ladies' man,' but I had come to love Boston University and everybody in it. I certainly gave my finest barks at P. A. L. and did those girls try to flirt with me?"

"When I went home Friday evening I prayed that the Saturday crowd might be generous enough to let me 'go collegiate.' You know all about the game and how the players fought to win the game for me. I don't feel badly over the defeat, because I believe that we will commence to win games after my official coat arrives."

Danny was enthusiastic over the thoughts of the scarlet and white blanket that he is going to wear next Saturday, when "his boys" travel north to skin the wild-cat at Durham, N. H. "Please tell all my friends that I am real proud of them for the 'spirit' they showed in contributing to my purchase last Saturday," barked Danny, as he rolled over and wandered off into dreamland, far away from any inquisitive newspapermen.

Law Review Editors Chosen

A group of 27 student editors who will form the 1934 editorial board of the Boston University Law Review, quarterly publication of the School of Law has been announced by President Marsh and Dean Homer Albers, '85, of the Law School. Seniors occupy the highest posts, and all members of the Law Review staff are chosen from the high-ranking group of students in the school by faculty appointment. Business positions in the staff are competitive and students work out for them.

George S. Willard, '34, of Sanford, Me., was named editor-in-chief. George W. Gold, '34, of Roxbury, was named associate editor, and a second associate editor will be appointed in December. Paul A. Tamburello of Pittsfield is the new business manager. Twenty-four student editors were named to the other editorial positions. Prof. Arthur L. Brown of the faculty was reappointed faculty adviser, a position he has held for several years. Samuel H. Deitelbaum, '34, of Dorchester will be the advertising manager for the publication.

Other student editors are: Benjamin S. Birnbaum, '35, of New Britain, Conn., Frederick Brodney, '34, of Manchester, N. H., James R. Brooks, '34, of Fitchburg, Joseph P. Carey, '34, of Waltham, Valentino D. Clementino, '34, of Providence, R. I., Sylvia Cohen, '35, of Roxbury, Simon Cutter, '35, of Malden, Robert Dickey, '34, of Pittsburgh, Pa., John J. Driscoll, '34, of Arlington, Julian W. Engelman, '35, of Bridgeport, Conn., Lester F. Farrell, '34, of Norwood, George W. Gold, Jack Golden, '35, of Roxbury, James E. Harmon, '35, of Brockton, William M. Krug, '34, of Willimantic, Conn., Hugh A. McCoy, '34, of North Attleboro, Robert W. McEnaney, '34, of Waltham, Ella M. Poland, '34, of Nantucket, Neil W. Schoonmaker, '34, of Ware, Abram W. Spiro, '34, of Stamford, Conn., Joseph Sugarman, '34, of Brockton, Paul A. Tamburello, George S. Willard, and Sidney Zucker, '35, of New Britain, Conn.

Three B. U. Men Would be Mayor

Of the seven candidates for Mayor of Boston, three are graduates of the Boston University School of Law: Frederick W. Mansfield, '02, William J. Foley, '08, and Michael H. Sullivan, '00.

Mr. Mansfield, who is 56 years old, is a lawyer of outstanding ability, and past president of the Massachusetts Bar Association. He served in the Spanish-American War as a pharmacist. On his return he entered Boston University School of Law, earning his way by practising as a registered pharmacist. Twenty years ago he was elected State Treasurer on the Democratic ticket, and twice he has been the Democratic candidate for governor. He has figured largely as counsel for labor organizations. In 1929 he polled 97,000 votes as a candidate for the office of Mayor. Then, as this year, he had the backing of the Good Government Association.

William J. Foley, at present district attorney for Suffolk County has the backing of Mayor Curley in his campaign. He was a member of the House of Representatives in 1916, 1917 and 1918, and of the Senate, 1919-20. In 1921-22 he was a member of the Governor's Council. He has held his present position since 1926. He seldom misses sporting events in which he finds his sole recreation.

The third Boston University aspirant for the office of Mayor is Michael H. Sullivan, a special justice of the Dorchester Municipal Court since 1909. A graduate of Westfield Normal and, until he entered the law, a teacher, Judge Sullivan has been a distinguished member of the Boston School Committee. He was a member of the commission appointed to investigate the school department. From 1920 to 1925 he was chairman of the Finance Commission.

New Debating Award

A new trophy in inter-Departmental debating will be awarded by Phi Sigma Pi, honorary debating society to the winner of the series of debates which will start next March. The contestants at that time will be the Sneath Club of the College of Liberal Arts, the Buds of the Evening Division of the College of Business Administration, the Demosthenian Club of the School of Education, and, if present plans are realized, the Webster Society of the School of Law, and a new debating society to be organized at the Sargent School. The Shannon Trophy which was awarded for several years in inter-Departmental debating was won permanently by the Buds.

The officers of Phi Sigma Pi are Frank W. Sleeper, Grand Master, Gertrude Yudelovitz, High Master, and Alfred E. Smith, Treasurer and Scribe.

The Kappa Bulletin

Bostonia extends its cordial greetings to the Kappa Bulletin, published by The Kappa Chapter of Boston University, composed of graduates of the School of Religious Education. The first issue appeared in September.

The officers of the Chapter are:

- Everett R. Johnson, President
- Edgar H. Chandler, Vice-President
- Miss Helen M. Fynes, Recording Secretary
- Mrs. Marjorie D. Laufman, Corresponding Secretary
- Miss Margaret S. Urann, Treasurer
- Miss Elizabeth Harris, Loan Fund Treasurer.

These with Mrs. Norma C. Kent, Miss Miriam J. Higgins, and Miss Sara D. Abbott, form the Executive Committee.

The Kappa Chapter hopes to publish its bulletin quarterly. As special features, the Executive Committee intend to print in each number two five-hundred word articles by alumni who are doing interesting and important work in religious education and social service. The special articles in the first number are by Miss Susan Chamberlin, '28, and Miss Victoria Tsakova, '31.

Fraternity Ratings

The following is the list of sororities and fraternities arranged in the order of their scholastic standing for 1932-1933. This list is annually compiled in the President's office. It is taken from the returned questionnaires that are distributed among the sororities and fraternities during the spring semester of each year.

The scholastic rating of each individual listed in the questionnaire is made up by the registrar of the department in which such person has his preliminary enrollment. The values given to the ratings are as follows: A-8; B-5; C-2; D-1; F- minus 4. In this way it is possible to make comparisons, even though the departments use different weightings for the semester marks. The final compilation for the rating of a given sorority or fraternity was worked out in the President's office.

Fiedler to Conduct University Orchestra

The appointment of Arthur Fiedler as conductor of the Boston University Symphony Orchestra brings to Boston University one of Boston's most popular musicians. Mr. Fiedler is a member of the Boston Symphony Orchestra and has won national fame as the conductor of the Pops concerts and of the summer Esplanade concerts. He also conducts the Boston Sinfonietta, the McDowell Club Orchestra, and the Cecilia Society. Mr. Fiedler succeeds Jacques Hoffman, instructor of violin and ensemble in the College of Music, who resigned as leader of the orchestra in order to devote more time to teaching.

Football Gets Under Way

BY MURRAY KRAMER

The last day of September marked the inauguration of a new machine. The straight eleven 1933 Boston University football model. It was a cross between a new car that had to be oiled and lubricated and a broken down flivver.

Middlebury served as the opponent and a light Vermont model clicked on all eleven and rode a slugsaid, "The machine cannot go on its own power. Outside forces must operate and we do not want 'Player Control'." The rest of the spark plugs sputtered in assent.

The result was that after a conference between Dean Frederick Rand Rogers and Dr. John M. Harmon it was decided to let the boys have their own way and the coaches were restored to full power.

With coasting eliminated the Doctor then tore the machine apart and deliberately set about to find out gish Terrier edition up and down the field all afternoon. Boston University seemed to have piston slaps, grinding of gears, poor locomotion and it continually sputtered and stalled.

The machine was operated under "free wheeling" better known as "Player Control" or in other words it ran on its own power. The power was supposed to have generated within but a fuse seemed to have been blown for there was no spark whatsoever.

Critics shook their heads sadly. They figured that the selling power was nil and that all hopes were gone. The flags were lowered to half mast and black ties were in evidence.

Came the first Monday in October and the machine was torn down for a complete overhauling as the power backfired. Captain Al Aliberti came out and what was wrong. He shifted eight men about, oiled the machinery, added a few crude sophomores with potential power, spent a few days trying to develop a semblance of smooth performance and then transported the makeshift idea up to Durham to battle a powerful, veteran University of New Hampshire team.

The score was New Hampshire 35, Boston University 6, which would indicate that the new machine was worse — but to an expert in gridiron mechanics the outfit was much better. Crudeness still prevailed, but the grease was starting to penetrate.

Sputtering and stalling was not so evident and the battle would have been much different if Dr. Harmon had so wished; but the Doctor had several spares and extra gadgets and the only way of determining their worth was to see their actual performance. Some of these gadgets were useless, but one was found which supplied the spark which had been missing. This new spark was George Pattison and here the solution was found which transformed a poor car to one capable of smooth performance and slick running.

The following Saturday came the third test. The Colby double wingback model with stream lines and reputed supreme excellence was slated to come down to Weston and completely break down the Terrier machine. Press predictors shook their heads and firmly believed that there was absolutely no doubt as to the superiority of the double wingback assembled up there at Waterville, Maine, by that master builder Ed Roundy.

The afternoon of October 14 arrived and 2500 Boston University die-hards wended their way to the William E. Nickerson Recreation Field, Weston, hoping for the best but expecting the worst.

Out on the field trotted an eleven in light blue that seemed to have weight, durability, speed, and power. It looked bad for the Terriers. Then came the whistle.

For a few minutes both machines battled evenly and then suddenly it happened. That new gadget, George Pattison, 138 pounds of speed and deception, took a lateral and started. He coasted, turned corners on high, reversed and then opened that throttle and went fifty yards for a Boston University score.

This seemed to be the medicine the Doctor ordered, for that lethargy disappeared and the highly touted Colby machine was smashed to make way for a Boston University outfit that clicked. A safety device uncorked later in the contest insured victory for the Scarlet and White. This safety movement proved invaluable later as Colby did manage to score. Once. The final score was Boston University 9, Colby 7.

The tinkering and constant adjusting by Dr. John M. Harmon and his assistants, Dave Mishel and "Moose" Washburn are now producing results. Dr. Harmon has a group of sophomores and is building for the future. Give him three years and he will turn out one of the slickest, smoothest performing elevens that has ever ridden to victory on a white striped field.

"Player-Control" Abandoned

Dr. Frederick Rand Rogers, Dean of Physical Education, Student Health and Athletics, at a special meeting of the football team on October 4, permitted the gridmen to determine the policy under which they wish to play.

Dr. John M. Harmon, director of athletics and head coach of football, put the issues involved up to the boys and they voted to: (1) Have the head coach select the starting line-up. (2) Have the head coach make substitutions aided by his assistants and the captain. (3) Have the coaches in the dressing room between the halves. (4) Let the coaches be responsible if disciplinary measures are necessary for co-operation.

The complete statement of Dean Rogers follows:

"During the last two years the athletic program at Boston University has been revised to improve its recreational and educational values to students. Several new adjustments have been adopted which greatly increase the responsibilities of players for the conduct of games. Two of these — specifically the selection of players and substitutes by captains, and the removal of coaches from immediate contact with players during game time — have so completely failed to win the support of athletes that their enforced continuance would seriously reduce the morale of the football squad. Moreover, controversy over this issue tends to retard the progress of the other more vital phases of our sports program. Therefore, coaches in all sports have been instructed to submit these adjustments (as well as others) to players for approval, and to act, as far as the rules and spirit of the various sports permit, on the recommendations of the majority of the squad for each particular sport."

In response to the question, "What do you think personally of the so-called player-control in football?", President Marsh told the trustees and faculty at their annual meeting, "Since we are conducting athletic sports for the enjoyment and benefit of the students, if they admit that they cannot control their own games, then I see no reason why the coach should not sit with the players on the bench and go with them to the clubhouse between the halves.

"Player control is an ideal, but it seems that we have too few men to realize that ideal so long as the institutions who play with us do not use player control also. One of my pet slogans is, If you cannot realize your ideal, then idealize your real.

"Progress is often made by compromise. Yield the form if necessary, but hold fast to that which is essential. 'The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life.'

"There are too many big things engaging our attention to spend all our time on incidentals. Football itself is hardly worth getting excited about, and certainly so insignificant a feature of it as 'player control' is not worth wrangling over."

University Notes

Mr. Roger Huntington Sessions has been appointed instructor in advanced composition and advanced instrumentation in the College of Music. Mr. Sessions, who is an outstanding figure in American composition today, was born in Brooklyn, New York. He was graduated from Harvard in 1915, after which he studied with Prof. Horatio Parker at the Yale School of Music, obtaining the degree of Bachelor of Music in 1917. He taught composition and instrumentation at Smith College, from 1917 to 1921, and at the Cleveland Institute of Music from 1921 to 1925. Awarded a fellowship by the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, he spent several years in Italy continuing his work in composition. His symphony in E minor was produced at the Poston Symphony Orchestra concerts, under Dr. Koussevitzky, in April 1927.

Under the supervision of Professor Edgar S. Brightman, the Philosophical Club, composed of candidates for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, held its first meeting of the year. After the usual dinner and business meeting, Louis W. Norris, president of the Club, read a paper on the theme, "Hegel's Philosophy of the State." Discussion followed.

The year's program follows: Nov. 1, "Hegel's Economic Theory," Peter A. Bertocci; Dec. 6, "Hegel's Aesthetics in Relation to his Social Theory," Harley H. Zeigler; Jan. 3, "Hegel and Feuerbach," Russell V. DeLong; Feb. 7, "Hegel and Marx," F. Gerald Ensley; March 7, "Hegel and Lenin," L. Harold DeWolf; April 4, "Hegel and Hitler," J. S. Pennepacker.

Dr. Chen-en Liu, special representative of the Chinese Government discussed the subject "Chinese Youth—What is Happening to the Youth in China" on October 2 at the opening meeting of the second annual series of student forums conducted under the Department of Student Counseling and Religious Activities. Dr. Liu is president of the University of Shanghai. His present visit to this country was occasioned by the meeting of the Institute of Pacific Relations, to which he was a delegate. As secretary of the Chinese Government's Education Commission to the United States, he is now making a study of civic and vocational systems for that government.

More than fifty students attended the opening meeting of the Italian Club of Boston University, held October 6 at the Y.W.C.A. building, where the vice-president, Miss Anna Diotaiuti of Salem, outlined briefly the purpose of the club and plans for the current college year. Dancing and refreshments followed the business meeting.

Letters sophomore; treasurer, Antonio Procopio, Brockton, College of Business Administration senior.

The School of Education held an Acquaintance Day at the William E. Nickerson Recreation Field on the afternoon and evening of October 3. Included in the program were a track meet, swimming, canoeing, tennis, and exhibitions of acrobatics and golf, followed by dancing during the evening. John A. McNamara was chairman of the large student committee which planned the event.

New members of the student body at the College of Liberal Arts were greeted by the faculty at a reception, October 13. President Marsh, Dean Warren, and Professor Rice spoke in behalf of the University, the College, and the faculty. William B. Norton, of the History department was chairman of the faculty committee.

The following members of the School of Education faculty attended the Educational Convention at Crawford Notch in October: Dr. Jesse B. Davis, Dr. Guy M. Wilson, Dr. John J. Mahoney, Dr. Donald D. Durrell, Professor W. Linwood Chase, and Professor Charles Giauque.

Lt.-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon addressed the Quincy Women's Republican Club on October 16 on unemployment insurance by state law.

Judge A. K. Cohen addressed Amos Lodge B'nai B'rith on October 9 on the subject "The Present Times and What They Hold for the Jew." Judge Cohen is a member of the Anti-Defamation League, vice-president of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies, director of the Big Brother Association, and counsel of the Boston Bar Association.

Dr. Basil Mathews, who began his regular work as professor in the School of Theology the second semester of last year, will be with the school the first semester during the coming year. He will give two courses. One will be on "The New Christian Initiative in the Present World Crisis," and the other will be a seminar entitled "A Research Study of World Interdependence."

Dr. Jesse B. Davis addressed the faculty and students at the Tilton School, Tilton, New Hampshire, on October 21 on the topic, "Our Boys and Their Future."

President Walter S. Athearn of Butler University, Indianapolis, recently issued a statement to the effect that henceforth the College of Religion in that institution would parallel the College of Liberal Arts. Science he said had "usurped the center of the college curriculum," while a Christian college "ought to place religion at the heart of its program."

The second annual students' handbook has been issued under the auspices of the student body of the School of Education. It was edited this year by Christie P. Harris of Cambridge.

Deaths

JOSEPH E. SEARS, '77

A Tribute

Of the thirty-four who graduated from Boston University College of Liberal Arts in 1877 only five remain. Joseph E. Sears, who died in August, was the last to go. For four years we roomed together in college and an intimate friendship was formed that has not been broken for sixty years. It is sixty years this month since we met at our first class recitation, 18 and 20 Beacon Street. Joe had come to college with Conant, McCord and one or two others from the seminary at East Greenwich. He was a fisherman from Cape Cod, born in Harwich, 1848, and was the oldest member of our class. He was late in beginning his college preparation and had a maturity of thought and a balance of judgment which it did us all good to consider. He was conscientious to the last degree in all his college work and associations. He paid attention to little things and had the unbounded confidence of all his class.

When he graduated he had already entered the New England Southern Conference and was stationed at Acushnet, Mass. The death of his wife's mother made it necessary for him to give up his appointment, and his life after that was spent in Dighton, Mass. He was not only one of its oldest citizens at the time of his death, but it would hardly be too much to say that, measured by everything that made for character and real worth, he might well have been called its first citizen. His daughter Winifred was the class baby of '77, and after her own training became a teacher in town. He was for seventeen years Sunday School superintendent and intensely interested in all the educational work of the town. In general social and economic movements, he was at the front. He maintained his ministerial function as a local deacon in the Methodist Church and as superintendent in the Sunday School. He represented that fine type of New England life which was interested in all that concerned the town. Careful and candid in all his estimates, thorough in all his work, he lived out a long life with a character and a reputation unblemished. No finer tribute could be paid to him than to say that for more than fifty years he had builded himself so thoroughly into the life of the town where he lived and had filled so large a place in its thought and life that in his going out he left "a vacant place against the sky." Doubtless more brilliant men may have gone from his alma mater and men whose names have traveled farther, but among them all there were none who were truer in their devotion to God and men than Joseph E. Sears.

—C. L. GOODELL

DR. SARAH A. HALL, '85

Dr. Sarah Adelaide Hall, College of Liberal Arts, long a well-known figure in Watertown, died suddenly early in October at St. Petersburg, Florida. She was a graduate of Boston University in 1885 and of Tufts Medical School in 1888. Dr. Hall was the widow of Edward C. Hall. She practiced medicine in Watertown for seven years, and was prominent in various ways. She was a member of the town school board for six years, one of the earliest supporters of the Watertown District Nursing Association, and was interested in many philanthropic activities. She was one of the founders of the Episcopal Church of the Good Shepherd, and a member of the Tufts College Medical Society. Dr. Hall is survived by a son, Edward C. Hall.

JUDGE NATHAN WASHBURN, '87

Judge Nathan Washburn, School of Law, presiding justice of the 4th Plymouth District Court since 1901, died at his home in Middleboro on October 12 following a short illness. Judge Washburn was born in Middleboro in 1862, the son of Bradford Sumner and Elizabeth (Harlow) Washburn. He was graduated from Dartmouth College in 1885, and studied law at Boston University. He was admitted to the bar in 1887 and practiced law in Middleboro until 1891, when he was appointed an associate justice of the 4th District Court, becoming presiding judge in 1901. He was a director of the Middleboro Trust Company, a member of the American Bar Association, the Odd Fellows and the Middleboro School Committee. Judge Washburn's wife, who was Etta S. Mendall before her marriage, died six years ago. He is survived by a son, Kendrick H. Washburn of Middleboro, and a brother, Elmer Washburn of Hollywood.

GEORGE H. WHITCOMB, '87

George H. Whitcomb, School of Law, since 1911 Judge of the District Court, Third Judicial District of Kansas, and one of Topeka's most distinguished citizens, died suddenly August 29 in Colorado after an illness of three days.

Judge Whitcomb was born in Stockbridge, Vermont, May 2, 1858, the son of Harvey and Isabel (Moore) Whitcomb. After attending the common schools of Stockbridge, he attended Tilton Seminary where he graduated in 1881. In 1885 he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts from Dartmouth College where he was a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and of Phi Beta Kappa. He was admitted to the Bar of Suffolk County, Massachusetts, the year in which he graduated at the Boston University Law School. In the fall of 1887 he went to Topeka where he engaged in the practice of law until his appointment to the bench. For many years he taught the Law of Sales of Personal Property in Washburn College School of Law.

Judge Whitcomb's wife was Jessie E. Wright, who graduated from the University of Vermont in 1884, and from the Boston University Law School in 1887. She died in 1931. Their six children survive them.

KATHERINE DAME, '94

Miss Katherine Dame, College of Liberal Arts, died suddenly September 9 at Pokegama Sanatorium, Minnesota. After her graduation from Boston University, Miss Dame held a scholarship at Bryn Mawr College where she studied history. She then took the library course at Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, and for ten years was cataloguer in the Cornell University Library at Ithaca, and later at the State Library at Albany.

During the war, Miss Dame served with the Red Cross in Rome. On her return to this country, she became in 1921 the chief of the Reference Department at the Public Library at St. Paul, Minnesota, a position which she held at the time of her death.

She was a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of Gamma Phi Beta Sorority. Miss Dame's four sisters, Lydia, Maria (Mrs. James M. Adams), Elizabeth, and Mary all graduated from the College of Liberal Arts.

DR. CHARLES H. COLGATE, '01

Dr. Charles Henry Colgate of Rockland, graduate of the School of Medicine, and captain in the medical corps overseas with the 11th Division of the U. S. Army during the war, died recently as a result of attempting to save the life of another. When he saw a little child apparently drowning while bathing at Marshfield during the summer, he was the first to go to the rescue. The plunge into the ocean and the exertion in trying to save the child overtaxed his weak heart and he lost his own life.

Dr. Colgate was born in Somerville on February 15, 1874, the son of Charles Henry and Abbie Saulsbury (McLellan) Colgate. He received his A.B. degree from Harvard University in 1898 and in 1901 his M.D. from Boston University where he was a member of Alpha Sigma fraternity. He was a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society, the Masons, the Knights of Pythias, the Red Men and the Odd Fellows. He is survived by his wife, who was Margaret Campbell Hunt before her marriage.

WINFIELD M. WILBAR, '01

Winfield M. Wilbar, School of Law, who as a prosecutor in Plymouth and Norfolk counties moved for imposition of the death sentence on Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, whose trial and execution caused international repercussion, died at his home in Brockton on September 29 from a cerebral hemorrhage. Mr. Wilbar, a native of Brockton, was graduated from the Law School in 1901 and immediately took up practice in his native city. He became successively city solicitor and assistant district attorney. He was appointed district attorney by Governor Fuller in 1924. He leaves a son, Dexter W., and a daughter, Lois; also his wife, the former Bernice Field.

ARTHUR WITHINGTON, '04

Arthur Withington, School of Law, graduate and practicing attorney in Honolulu, died on September 25 at his home in Hawaii after a long illness. He was born in Newburyport, Massachusetts, February 9, 1869, the son of Nathan L. and Elizabeth (Little) Withington. He attended the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, class of 1892, and received his law degree from Boston University in 1904. From 1904 to 1918 he was engaged in the practice of law in his native city. In 1918 he went to Hawaii to join his brother, David L. Withington, in law practice with the firm of Castle & Withington. In 1920 he joined the firm of Robertson & Castle. Mr. Withington was a member of the Newburyport Lodge of Elks and the Tuesday Night Club, and also served as City Solicitor in 1908 and 1910-12. In Honolulu he was at one time president of the Hawaii Bar Association and an active member of the University Club. He is survived by his wife, who before her marriage was Lena Antoinette Blinn of Tecumseh, Michigan.

"B.O." offenders can't win!

THEIR fault is unforgivable. It holds them back socially, in business—in love! Don't you be guilty. Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy. It is so different from ordinary toilet soaps that it even smells different. You will recognize its clean, refreshing, quickly-vanishing scent as your assurance of extra protection. Lifebuoy's creamy, abundant lather does more than merely surface-cleanse. It penetrates and purifies pores—removes every trace of "B. O." (body odor). Helps safeguard health, too, by removing germs from hands.

Complexions clear and freshen

Lifebuoy is a marvelous skin soap. Its pure, bland, penetrating lather gently, yet thoroughly cleanses dirt-clogged pores. Quickly freshens dull complexions to healthy radiance. Try Lifebuoy—for face, hands—bath.
