BUILDINGS FOR THE SCHOOL OF THEOLOGY
LOCATED ON THE CENTRAL QUADRANGLE AND COMMONWEALTH AVENUE

MY love for this School has deepened as the years have come and gone, and now in this year when it seems to be necessary to spend billions of dollars for physical defense I trust someone will see the wisdom of giving two million dollars to house and endow this School of Theology now absolutely essential to spiritual defense.

Where shall the scholar live?
In solitude or in society?
In the green stillness of the country, where he can hear the heart of Nature beat, or in the dark heart of man? I make answer for him, and say,

In the dark gray city.—Longfellow

“THIS Report is really a tapestry of lights and shadows woven by the thread of the year's work. We have seen the shuttle moving back and forth, leaving the thread now visible and now invisible, but ever weaving upon the tapestry the picture of Democracy.” — PRESIDENT MARSH

The President's Annual Report

To the Trustees of Boston University:

THIS is the fifteenth time I have been privileged to present the President's Annual Report to the Trustees of Boston University. I have endeavored to avoid a sameness by taking each year a different theme as the motif of the Report. Let the central and controlling idea this year be Democracy, repeated with variations throughout the Report.

Democracy is, in America, the watchword of the hour. It is a challenging watchword. It is a proper watchword. The popular Negro spiritual says that “Everybody that talks about Heaven ain't goin' there.” Likewise, not everybody who talks about Democracy either knows what it is or practices it. Democracy, as it is understood in America, rests upon the philosophy that the individual is endowed by his Creator with certain inalienable rights, including “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness,” and that government derives its just powers from the consent of the governed. Hence it means “government of the people, by the people, for the people.” It is a spirit, a way of life. It is a practical or social equality as opposed to aristocracy.

Boston University is democratic in spirit and personnel, in support and in service. To be sure, its Founders and Associate Founders were all men of wealth and of social standing, and at least one of them had nobility in his ancestral line, but all of them personalized the spirit of Democracy. All through its history, many persons and organizations have made Boston University their primary interest. We include the Founders and Associate Founders, the Trustees, the members of the Faculties, the student body, the alumni, and certain benefactors.

YOU have just heard the report of our efficient Treasurer, E. Ray Speare, and have noted that once again Boston University has paid its way. The margin of safety was not very great. To have a balance of $2,290 in a budget of more than $2,000,000 is its own witness to the care with which we have to administer the budget.

Within the period covered by this Report—to be exact, on September 26, 1939—the Charles Hayden Memorial Building was dedicated as the home of our College of Business Administration. The exercises have been recorded not only for the information of the present generation but for preservation against the future in Bostonia, The Boston University Alumni Magazine, issue of October, 1939. No language can overstate the vast significance of the erection of that magnificent building as the first unit on the new campus. As I said in my brief dedicatory address, this building is the head of the nail that fastens down this campus. The comfortable, convenient, commodious building has meant much to the morale of the College of Business Administration, and has been a symbol of our hope for the future housing of the University as a whole.

The improved facilities afforded by the new building have made possible greatly improved service in the various fields of instruction. Let me suggest that you read the Report of Dean Lord to the President, as submitted herewith, particularly noting what he says about the department of Journalism, the Printing Laboratory, and the Bureau of Business Research.

Encouraged by the facilities made available in the new building, several organizations of a professional nature have been developed, including the Psychological Center, under the auspices of the department of Psychology; the Export Round Table, directed by the instructor in Foreign Trade; the Commercial Education Club, under the auspices of the Division of Commercial Education; the Sales Executives Club, promoted by the department of Management; the New England Interscholastic Press Association, and the Professional Council for Journalism, both under the aegis of the department of Journalism.

An important achievement of the year was the purchase by Boston University of the Evans Memorial Building from the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals. The Evans Memorial is a relatively new building, standing adjacent to our School of Medicine and on ground that was originally owned by Boston University. It meets the immediate and urgent need for additional space, and furnishes opportunity for expansion in a way that will enhance the service of Boston University School of Medicine. This does not give us all we need in the way of physical equipment, but it is a definite step forward. Our School of Medicine and the Massachusetts Memorial Hospitals have, from the beginning, intimately cooperated. With the purchase above described, a new compact was entered into between the two institutions which guarantees a larger and better measure of cooperation in the future than in the past. It is a signed, sealed and delivered pledge of reciprocal service whose value will reach far beyond the two institutions concerned.

During the year the University has received gifts and bequests in excess of $503,000. This addition of more than a half million dollars represents the giving of many hundreds of persons in amounts large and small to this institution of their love. The University was also given the vacant lot of ground on the corner of Bay State Road and Granby Street, diagonally across the street from the President's House and directly across from the new campus. The University purchased the adjoining lot,—which, together with the lot donated, provides us with a strategic addition to our new campus. Likewise, the University acquired during the year the former Hollander mansion on Bay State Road near the new campus. This mansion is to be used as a dormitory for girls on the cooperative plan. Dr. Lucy Jenkins Franklin, Dean of Women, deserves our thanks for finding this house, as well as for the promotion of the cooperative plan at Boston University. We are greatly indebted to Miss Harriet E. Richards for her substantial support of this cooperative enterprise from the beginning.

In speaking of off-the-campus improvements which have enhanced the campus itself, mention should be made of the new boat house, built by permission of the Metropolitan District Commission on the Charles River Embankment in front of the western end of our campus. The inspiration for the new boat house came from a friend of rowing at Boston University who accompanied his recommendation for such a building with a substantial gift toward its construction.

The Boston American League Baseball Company showed its helpful interest in Boston University by donating to us, 4,096 seats for Nickerson Field. The damage done to the Field, first by the hurricane of two years ago, and then by the water main that was laid across the Field by the Metropolitan District Commission, has now been completely remedied, and our athletic field is in fine condition.

When we speak of persons having a primary interest in Boston University, we hasten to include the alumni. The efficient Executive Secretary of the Alumni Association, Mr. George A. Dunn, has made his annual Report to the President so brief and yet so full of important things that I am sure you will read it in full and with profit.

TRUSTEES AND THEIR WIVES AT THE ANNUAL DINNER MEETING

AMONG the many persons, groups and organizations which have at least a secondary interest in Boston University are various learned societies and professional and educational associations; the standardizing agencies to which the University belongs and by which it is approved; many of the Foundations which from time to time have made grants to the University,—the Charles Hayden Foundation most of all,—and the colleges and universities of the land which cooperate with Boston University in various ways of institutional fellowship and recognition. Special mention should be made of Harvard University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology, both of which give numerous and frequent evidences of neighborly and reciprocal helpfulness. The Boston Public Library and the many special libraries of this City enhance the University's opportunities for service by making available to its students their rich resources.

The Commonwealth and the City help the University by exempting from taxation its educational plant. The Federal Government helps many students in Boston University through the National Youth Administration (commonly called the NYA). Last year, 706 students earned a total of $82,596.67. This represents a substantial increase in earnings over the previous year, due to an extra allotment assigned to the University by NYA authorities.

It is meet and proper that City, State and Federal Governments should, at least indirectly, assist students to receive an education in Boston University. If ever an institution was democratic in its student personnel, it is this one. Last year our total student enrollment was 13,285, coming to us from every State in the United States, and from Porto Rico, the Canal Zone and Hawaii, and from seventeen foreign countries. These students represented every stratum of social standing and economic ability. There were no lines of race, color or religious faith drawn in the admission of students at Boston University. Upon graduation, an overwhelming number of them go out to serve society in church and state, in education and social work, in jurisprudence, in medicine, and in business.

It is because this University is so democratic in its composition and so unselfish in its service that it has won the confidence and cooperation of so many outside agencies. Educational Boards and Societies in the Methodist, Presbyterian, Congregational, and Baptist Churches aided students here last year. Altogether, Boston University students were aided by thirty-eight student aid funds which are not under the control of Boston University. The greatest of these, of course, is the Hayden Foundation.

THE FACULTY are an indispensable element in any educational institution. A university is great or insignificant in proportion as it has great or mediocre faculty members. I heard an internationally famous educator, who has had no relationship to Boston University, in an address at a meeting in a midwestern city, say unequivocally: "Boston University has maintained from the beginning a highly respectable intellectual tradition." That tradition was started by the great faculty with which the first President was able to surround himself, and has never been less than great,—greater today than ever before in its history.

During the past year, 84 different members of the Staff of Instruction at Boston University have written a total of 263 books and other publications. Some fifteen years ago, I began to issue a supplement to my Annual Report in which I have listed year by year writings by members of our faculty to the extent that those publications have been presented for inclusion in the special library in my office. That library is now quite sizeable, and every book in it is from the pen of some Boston University faculty member.

During the year covered by this Report there have been 44 new appointments to our faculty, 24 promotions, 4 sabbatical leaves, and 7 retirements, and the following Divine promotions by death: on September 6, 1939, Charles T. Howard, Professor Emeritus in the School of Medicine; on February 15, 1940, Donald Cameron, Professor in the College of Liberal Arts; on June 1, 1940, Guillermo Hall, Professor Emeritus in the College of Business Administration; on June 19, 1940, Edwin P. Ruggles, Professor Emeritus in the School of Medicine. In addition to these, two have died since the close of the fiscal year on June 30. In strict accuracy, their names would not be included in this Report, but I am constrained to read their names here while we stand at attention: On July 4, 1940, Thomas Chalmers, Professor in the College of Practical Arts and Letters, and on September 26, 1940, Dr. Alexander S. Begg, Dean of our School of Medicine. Appropriate memoirs will be found in the records of faculty meetings, the Boston University News, and Bostonia.

I counsel you to read the annual Reports to the President made by the Deans and other Departmental heads. Not until you read these Reports can you be intelligently acquainted with the enormous service which is being rendered by these important Departments and functions of the institution.

MANY changes in the educational set up have been made during the year in the interest of a larger measure of service to the democratic way of life. Two of these changes merit being mentioned in this Report. The first was the reorganization of the School of Religious and Social Work. This School was established in 1919 as a School of Religious Education and Social Service. Its roots reached back into the Morgan Memorial, the Deaconess Hospital, and the Board of Home Missions and Church Extension of the Methodist Church. During its first decade it was largely an undergraduate college. The model of the School was changed in 1929 into a senior college and graduate school. Prior to 1929, religious education was given the major emphasis, but after that date, training for leadership in social work was given equal emphasis with training for leadership in religious education. In 1935 the name of the Department was changed to the School of Religious and Social Work. The change in name indicated the shifting emphasis. In course of time, Richard K. Conant was appointed Director of the Division of Social Work, while Henry H. Meyer continued as Dean of the School. Two years ago, the Division of Social Work was approved by the National Association of Schools of Social Work and was admitted to membership in that standardizing agency.

The School has not at any time in its existence been able to arrive at self-support. Sometime ago the Executive Committee of the Trustees requested the President to make a new study of the School with a view to amending its form so as to provide better for the training of social leadership in the bewildering day in which we are living, and for the anxious days ahead. I therefore appointed a committee consisting of Dean Meyer of the School of Religious and Social Work, Dean Marlatt of the School of Theology, Dean LeSourd of the Graduate School, and Dean Jesse B. Davis of the School of Education. That committee, together with the President of the University, studied the problem for months, and finally recommended to the Trustees that the School be reorganized in such way as to let it devote itself exclusively to training for leadership in social work; that undergraduate work in religious education be transferred to the School of Education; that graduate work in religious education be transferred to the School of Theology, and that the name of the School be changed to the School of Social Work. When I reported to the Executive Committee of the Trustees the above recommendations of the special committee, the Executive Committee "authorized, empowered and directed the President to carry into full force and effect the changes above recommended or such changes as seem to be meet and proper in fulfillment of the above recommendations, it being understood that the reorganization is to be made with a view to increasing the effectiveness of the University in training for leadership in the social order." In making announcement of the change, I included, with the approval of Dean Meyer, the following sentence: "As a result of this reorganization, training in social work is enhanced and the offerings in religious education are augmented throughout the University."

ANOTHER change, this time not in organization but in leadership, was made at our Sargent College of Physical Education. Again, a word concerning the historical background will not be out of place. When Boston University adopted Sargent College, the gift of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ledyard W. Sargent, the College was made a division of the Boston University School of Education. Dr. Arthur H. Wilde was at that time Dean. Mr. Ernst Hermann, who had been connected with the Staff of Instruction prior to the adoption of the College by Boston University, was promoted to the rank of Professor and was made Director of the College. Later, Sargent College was separated from the School of Education and made a Department of the University, and Professor Hermann was appointed Dean.

A rule of the Trustees requires the President to nominate no one for a deanship after he reaches seventy years of age, "save under exceptional circumstances." Dean Hermann attained his three score years and ten in March, 1939. I invoked the "exceptional circumstances" provision of the Trustees' rule to continue Dean Hermann in service a year beyond the allotted time, thus allowing him to become Dean Emeritus at the end of the last academic year, June 30, 1940.

NELSON S. WÄLKE

JESSE FEIRING WILLIAMS

In appointing Dean Hermann's successor, I was naturally desirous of continuing at Sargent College the very best possible academic administration. Therefore, Dean Jesse B. Davis was appointed Acting Dean. Dr. Davis has been Dean of our School of Education since the retirement of Dean Wilde in 1935. Under Acting Dean Davis, we have appointed Nelson S. Walke Director of Sargent College. Dr. Walke is a product of the best that education has to offer in the States of Ohio and New York. He holds his Ph.D. degree in Physical Education from Columbia University, and has had experience in the administration of physical education, coming to us from Oklahoma State A. and M. College, where he was head of the Department of Physical Education. Dr. Walke also becomes the Director of Physical Education for men in Boston University as a whole.

As consultant, we have appointed the very distinguished physical educator, Jesse Feiring Williams, recently retired from his responsible position on the Columbia University faculty. He has written voluminously, and is recognized as one of the foremost authorities on physical education in the world today. He stands in an advisory relation to the President of the University and to the Acting Dean and the Director of Sargent College.

Former Dean Hermann now becomes Dean Emeritus, and, at least for the present, will bear a relationship to the physical maintenance and operation of Sargent Camp.

NO Department of Boston University is static. Everywhere there is life, which means that everywhere there is growth, which is the same thing as saying that everywhere there is change. For instance, degree requirements in the College of Liberal Arts have been revised. The work was done first by a special committee, then under the critical study of the Faculty as a whole, and finally adopted by the Faculty. This revision of degree requirements indicates that the College of Liberal Arts is alive and is keeping step with the most advanced academic thought of the day. The general aim, says Dean Taylor in his Report to the President, "has been couched in an expression currently used by the faculty in their reference to the newly defined fields, namely, 'organically integrated programs of study.'"

You will note in Dean Jesse B. Davis's Report to the President that fine progress is being made in our School of Education. I call your attention particularly to what he says about the new Division of Commercial Education and the Two-Year Experimental Curriculum. Into this Two-Year Experimental Curriculum have been admitted only students who failed to meet the traditional entrance requirements of our College of Liberal Arts, but who showed by the modern testing processes intelligence of superior ability. The distinctive feature of this experiment is what we call the "core" curriculum, known as "American Civilization." Much time has been given to the students in what is called Guidance, helping them to make personality adjustments and to use effectively their natural abilities. Everything that is taught ties into American Civilization or radiates out from it, like spokes of a wheel from the hub of American civilization.

The second year of the program in Nursing Education has now been completed at our School of Education. The rapid growth of the Division is evidence of its need. One hundred and ninety-six students have completed the formal matriculation for degrees. The Division of Nursing Education is declared to meet the needs of that profession.

Our School of Law, under the skillful guidance of Dean Johnson, has been climbing steadily upward, elevating its standards, enriching its offerings, and refining the process by which it selects its students. Last April, the Alumni Association of the School of Law, at its annual dinner, gave special recognition to six distinguished members of the faculty, each of whom has given twenty-five years or more to and through the School. Those so honored were Homer Albers, Harold M. Bowman, John E. Hannigan, Frank L. Simpson, Orvil W. Smith, and Oscar Storey.

THE Retirement Pension Plan for our professors is now in its third year of operation. Since the Plan was adopted, thirty-nine new members have been added; fifty-one members have received salary increases in addition to the increase given by the adoption of the Plan itself, and membership of twelve persons has been terminated. The net effect of all these changes means a total increase of $76,512 in salaries covered by the Plan. A number of persons already retired and those who will retire during the next year are on a past service commitment made by the University, which is an informal pension plan promising $900 per year. But beginning with September 1, 1942, retirement allowances will be determined and provided for by the Plan. We estimate that the pensions to be received by those who retire between 1942 and 1946 will be about $900 a year, guaranteed under the Plan, with exceptions above or below $900 as provided for by the Plan itself. Beginning with 1946, however, there will be a gradual increase in the pensions to be received, resulting from increased length of service and salaries paid. When the Plan functions normally, a professor retiring from service in Boston University will receive a pension which will be 2 per cent of his average salary multiplied by the number of years in professorial rank. To illustrate: If a man is a professor or an assistant or associate professor at Boston University for, say, thirty-five years, with an average salary during that period of $4,000, his pension upon retirement will be 2 per cent of $4,000 (which is $80) multiplied by 35 (number of years serving), or an annual pension of $2,800 for the rest of his life.

I regard the adoption of this Pension Plan as the best thing that has been done at Boston University during the fifteen years that I have been reporting to you upon the University's progress. I believe that it means more for the morale of the faculty, for the peace of mind and sense of security of the members of the teaching staff, for the permanence in tenure of the top-notch men than anything else that has been done or that could be done.

The University administrative officers are giving careful study to the question of a possible retirement plan for members of the University who are not covered by the Plan above described. We are not yet prepared to announce any definite arrangement. It is possible, of course, that the Federal Social Security Act may be amended so as to include certain members of the personnel other than the teaching staff,—what a pending bill would describe as "ordinary employees."

I INCLUDE in this Report a reference to the Community Fund Campaign of 1940 as source material for the future historian. Each year there is put on in Boston what is known as the Community Fund Campaign, which raises millions of dollars for various charitable and social agencies of the community. One of our beloved and most distinguished Trustees, Mr. Charles Francis Adams, is President of the organization. The Campaign is organized so as to canvass almost everybody in the community. Its organization brings together certain groups in what are called Divisions. One of the main Divisions is known as Institutions. The President of Boston University was made the head of the Institutions Division for the 1940 Campaign. The amount raised by the Institutions Division was $107,844,—which passed the established goal,—and the total amount raised for the Fund was $4,680,935. Each institution in the Division was organized, Boston University among the others. I designated John S. Perkins as head of the Boston University organization. Mr. Perkins did yeoman service and received the hearty support of the entire Boston University family. He has submitted to me a report of Boston University's part in the Campaign, which shows that 690 contributions were received from staff members and nearly 3,000 contributions from students, totaling $4,951.33. The amount pledged was three and a half times greater than the $1,387.37 pledged by Boston University personnel in the 1939 Campaign and five and a half times greater than the $891.75 pledged in the 1938

HAROLD M. BOWMAN

JOHN E. HANNIGAN

Campaign. Ninety-six per cent of Boston University's full-time employees pledged to the Campaign. Forty-eight per cent of 307 part-time employees pledged. Thus, 79 per cent of all those connected with Boston University, full-time and part-time, made contributions to the Campaign through the University.

AN important historical event within the fiscal year herein reported was the celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of our School of Theology. What is now the Boston University School of Theology was founded on April 24, 1839. On October 18, 1939, an all-University Convocation was held in Trinity Church in celebration of the School's centennial. I refer you to Bostonia for November and December, 1939, and to Dean Marlatt's Report to the President, submitted herewith, for detailed accounts of the program and for the names of the eighteen distinguished persons who received the University's honorary degrees. These persons were the administrative heads of the outstandingly great theological schools of America. These leaders had come together to rejoice with Boston University in its attainment of one hundred years of conspicuous service in the training of men for leadership in the church of God. It is doubtful whether there has ever been assembled on this continent another gathering so representative of theological educational leadership as was assembled for our centennial celebration.

The School of Theology is now off on its second century. Our announced goal for the Century of Service celebration, namely, two million dollars—approximately one million for new buildings and equipment and one million for additional endowment—has not yet been attained. If self-consciousness could be bestowed on our School of Theology, and it were endowed with voice, it might appropriate the words which Saint Paul once wrote: "But I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus. Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended: but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize" (Philippians 3: 12-14). The alumni of the School and all who believe in the efficient proclamation of the unsearchable riches of the Gospel of Christ are challenged to help the School reach its goal.

The Trustees, during the past year, enlarged the conception of the campaigns which have been conducted on behalf of the Schools of Theology and Medicine. Without dropping these two campaigns, but adding to them the plan and purpose for the ultimate development of the entire new campus, the inclusive name given to the forward movement is "The Boston University Development Fund." Two significant presentations of this plan have been made during the past year. One was the publishing of a master book of the campaign entitled "Not Only Greater Than Any of its Parts, But Greater Even Than the Sum of Them." Its appeal is to all who are sensitive to the beautiful, the true, and the good.

The second presentation was the architects' scale model of the ideal development of the new campus. It is constructed on the scale of one-sixteenth of an inch to a foot. Its premiere showing was at a dinner given in the Algonquin Club on the evening of Founders' Day, last March. The dinner was attended by a group of men distinguished for leadership in the City and the Commonwealth. Former Governor Allen, Chairman of the Trustees, presided; addresses were made by Governor Saltonstall, Mayor Tobin, and other prominent citizens. All who spoke were unequivocal in their endorsement of Boston University's new campus program. The scale model has been exhibited many places since. It cannot be viewed without arousing in the observer a sense of civic pride, and creating in him a mood of service to youth through this great democratic University.

FRANK L. SIMPSON

OSCAR STORER

GOD grant that somebody viewing this scale model may feel as John Evans once felt. John Evans was one of the great figures of the Civil War period. He was a doctor, and influential in promoting the advance of medical science in both Indiana and Illinois. He deserves more credit than any other one person for the founding of Northwestern University. He was a successful physician, a transcontinental railroad builder, a city builder in both Chicago and Denver, a distinguished religious leader in the Methodist Church, a political leader, and as such, the friend and counselor of Abraham Lincoln, and appointed by Lincoln as Governor of the Colorado Territory. This great and successful man, in a memorable address delivered before the Denver Board of Trade, declared, as his maturest judgment, that:

"A well-founded university lives as long as the country in which it is founded lives. It lives for ages. Its influence runs through all time . . . Why, there is nothing in all a man's lifetime that he can do that will be so permanent in its beneficial results as founding an institution of learning that will live on, and work, year after year, age after age, after he is laid in the grave."

Desire for recognition and longing to be remembered are as natural as breathing to normal human beings. But recognition that does not rest upon service to others is vain and empty. The finest recognition is that which inheres in being a friend of an institution like Boston University. I honor our Trustees and friends, and thank them on behalf of all those whom the University serves,—and will serve through the unborn Future,—for what they have done and are doing,—and for what they will yet do!

Founders and Associate Founders of Boston University have their names carried in the official catalogues, and their names are always read at the Founders' Day Convocation while the audience stands at attention. There is no finer way to be remembered than to be known as the benefactor of a great university. When financial, commercial and industrial enterprises shall have crumbled into dust, when the names they bore shall have been forgotten, and lizards crawl where those names were writ,—even then the University will be serving in the names of those who give to it,—names which it will perpetuate in honor.

THIS Report is really a tapestry of lights and shadows woven by the thread of the year's work. We have seen the shuttle moving back and forth, leaving the thread now visible and now invisible, but ever weaving upon the tapestry the picture of Democracy.

Every institution comes in time to have certain distinguishing characteristics. I have already quoted one characteristic of Boston University, namely, "a respectable intellectual tradition." It is frequently described as a pioneering institution, and it deserves the reputation. Those who live intimately with it like to call it "the friendly University." It has more than once been famed for its closeness to life, to reality. It has always been characterized by a certain ease of adaptability, of adjustment, of appropriation. It was founded by men of strong religious convictions whose announced purpose in founding it was to promote learning in the liberal and useful arts and sciences, and to promote virtue and piety,—and it has never been ashamed of its moral, ethical and religious inheritance, recognizing that what the world needs more than anything else is an honest, active, motivating belief in the spiritual conception of life.

All of these descriptions are accurate. But I am persuaded that if there is any one distinguishing characteristic of Boston University, standing out in bold relief above all others, it is the philosophy of Personalism which permeates the whole life of the institution. A part of its "respectable intellectual tradition" was started by Borden Parker Bowne, whom many competent critics in Europe have pronounced America's first great philosopher. The name which Bowne finally gave to his system of philosophy was "Personalism." The things he set forth were not altogether new with him. Consciously or unconsciously, he learned them of Jesus and of New Testament writings and Old Testament prophecies. Lotze, the German philosopher, helped him to formulate his system. Nevertheless, it was Bowne of Boston University who gave Personalism its first and fullest exposition. It teaches that all values are personal, and only persons can value. Personalism views the whole universe as a society of persons. Its sovereign test of every experience is, What kind of person will this make? It estimates all things in terms of their effects upon persons. It shows that the invisible power back of the visible phenomena of the universe is not an impersonal force but a self-conscious Person who knows Himself and knows what He is about. The name that we give to this Person is God. All our work on this view obtains a cosmic meaning. It leads us to a belief in a friendly universe. According to this philosophy, anything that blights, and blasts, and poisons, and dwarfs human personality is wrong. That is why drunkenness is wrong: it poisons and twists human personality. That is why war is the greatest collective social sin in the world: it sins against personality.

Bowne's successors at Boston University—Professors Brightman, Knudson, DeWolf and the rest of them—are not the idle slaves of even a “respectable intellectual tradition.” They are original and independent thinkers, distilling in the alembic of their own minds the personalistic philosophy, and giving it meaningful potency for the ills of this crassly materialistic age of ours. Thus does Boston University render a peculiar service to the preservation of Democracy. The importance of the individual, the sacred worth of the person, the essential equality of individual human rights—these are the things that are central to any genuine Democracy. Edwin Markham, in his little poem on “Man Making” expresses well our thought:

“We are all blind until we see
That in the human plan,
Nothing is worth the making, if
It does not make the man.

“Why build these cities glorious
If man unbuilt goes?
In vain, we build the world unless
The builder also grows.”

We are all blind, says Markham, until we see that the unfolding of personality, the making of the individual, is the important thing. That is what true education is: the leading out of the individual into a complete and rightly integrated personality, at home with himself and at home in the universe. This intellectual blindness to which Markham refers may come from hysteria and fear as much as the physical blindness of that man whose case the Associated Press reported two or three months ago,—a man who lived in Missouri and who had regained his sight suddenly after four years of blindness. Then after he had had his sight for some six months, a bright light flashed in his eyes one night, and startled, he cried out, and “then everything went black,” he said. Since then, he has been as blind as he was after the accident that made him blind four years ago. His physician explains his affliction as photophobia—“fear of light.” “He will see again,” the doctor says, “when his fear of light is broken by a firm conviction that he can see.”

In the distressing condition afflicting the world today, there is so much fear that I am persuaded some persons fear the light. Some persons have been so blinded by the cruel flashes of war that they can no longer see straight.

BORDEN PARKER BOWNE

IT IS popular now to believe that big armies, big navies, and big air forces will guarantee the preservation of Democracy. O, blind and perverse generation, do you not know that Russia had an army? Do you not know that it was Mussolini's marching Italian armies that robbed Italy of such Democracy as she had? Do you not know that Germany was safe in her republican form of government until Hitler's fanatical army aided him to substitute dictatorship for Democracy? No, the safeguarding of Democracy is not primarily in armies and navies and airplanes. It is in enlightened men and women who believe with all their hearts in Democracy.

Boston University is doing its part in promoting real Democracy. The study of problems relating to government and citizenship has been given a new place of importance at Boston University. Nearly every Department has courses, either in history or sociology, if not directly under the name of government and citizenship, that direct the attention of the students to the development of American Democracy and the significance of United States citizenship. The School of Law, in the very nature of the case, has many courses that should sharpen the student's interest in and elevate his loyalty to our American form of government. In the College of Liberal Arts and in the Graduate School, courses in Government and in United States Citizenship have been established as a separate department, thus effecting a completely reorganized curriculum in this field. Let me suggest that you read the offerings as set forth in the catalogues for both the College of Liberal Arts and the Graduate School, and note not only the comprehensive survey course in American Government and Politics, but also courses dealing with political thought in America, American Constitutional Government, United States Citizenship, Political Parties, History of Political Theory, State and Municipal Government, Public Administration, Relationship between Government and Business, European Governments, and International Relations. Professor Gaspar G. Bacon has been appointed Chairman of the newly organized department of Government and United States Citizenship. The list of professors whose courses are offered in the department is a most impressive one.

Our College of Business Administration has grouped together well established courses in business and industrial management for the training of industrial and production executives. Fourteen coordinated courses are designed to meet the needs brought about by the increased industrial schedule in preparedness production.

To the above samples of what we are doing at Boston University should be added the service rendered through the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, in which, during the past score of years, we have trained more than six thousand young men for leadership in the army. Ordinarily, 80 per cent of the students in our College of Business Administration elect the Military Science courses. This year, 90 per cent are enrolled in the R.O.T.C.

I have appointed an "American Defense Committee," consisting of the Deans of the several Colleges and Schools. We are organizing eleven different sub-divisions of this "Defense Committee," and are ready to place at the service of the Government such resources of talent, skill and training as we possess.

YOU will pardon me if I mention here my book, "The American Canon," which was published during the year covered by this Report. I mention it only because it is the most deeply-rooted defense I can make of the American Democracy which we prize so highly. The book has been accorded a kindly reception. While appreciating all the endorsements given it, I wish here to thank the Executive Committee of the Trustees of Boston University for their word of approval. The official record of the meeting of November 13, 1939, contains the following minute, recording action which was taken wholly on the Committee's own initiative: "Unanimously voted that President Marsh has performed a valuable national service in bringing out this book at this particular time."

The thing I have aimed at in "The American Canon" is to furnish the foundations of an intelligent patriotism,—a patriotism that can be both fervent and dynamic because it is born of intelligence. It is more difficult to create an enthusiastic devotion, even to the point of sacrifice, for an ideal than for a person. Thus totalitarianism, which precisely focuses sacrificial devotion to a person, has an immediate, albeit shallow, advantage over true American Democracy, which demands allegiance to ideals. But if each succeeding rising generation is made intelligent concerning the genesis and development of these ideals, if each succeeding generation is made appreciative of solid attainments of national character, if each succeeding generation learns beyond a quibble or peradventure that our American republican form of government is the crowning evolution of the ages; that in it are all of the achievements from Marathon to Runnymede, and from Runnymede to the Constitutional Convention of 1787,—I say if each succeeding generation is given a clear and intelligent understanding of the basis of American Democracy, then our youth will give it their allegiance without grudging or dudgeon. We do not need to resort to false propaganda: All we need to do is to let our youth know the facts. It is the groundwork of these facts that I have tried to set forth in "The American Canon."

WE CAN hold to all that I have just now said without growing hysterical. We can yield unalloyed loyalty to our form of government, and unalloyed allegiance to our flag without surrendering to war psychosis. Some persons—even persons who ought to know better—are saying things today that I believe they will not look back upon with complete satisfaction or smug complacency.

Some persons lacking in historical sense or a knowledge of human nature—or both—seem to think that our only danger of totalitarianism in this country is through a victory of the Nazi armies abroad. I am firmly convinced that it is better for the world that England should win and Germany be defeated in the present struggle, but I do not agree with those persons who seem to think that a Nazi victory abroad will be sure to establish totalitarianism in America, and that a defeat of Nazism will guarantee the perpetuation of Democracy on this continent. Nobody with historical knowledge and historical sense will be guilty of talking that kind of nonsense.

Totalitarianism was not established in Russia, or in Italy, or in Germany through the imposition of any outside force. A renaissance of democracy resulted from the World War of 1914-18. For a short period near the end of that War, Russia flirted with the democratic ideal, which, aided by its army, it scrapped for Communism. Italy had enjoyed a large measure of democracy since the days of Garibaldi, and had allied herself with the great democracies of France, Britain and the United States. The Fascist totalitarian regime was not superimposed upon Italy from without, but was developed from within Italy itself. Germany established a republican form of government at the end of the World War. But Germany listened to the voice demanding revenge, and armament, and selfish national aggrandizement. It was a raucous voice that demanded exclusive love of Germany, all forgetful of a larger idea of humanity; demanded patriotism that meant the discomfiture of other nations, quenching the aspirations of other nations. But what was called patriotism turned out to be only tyranny on a larger scale. Thus Germany, following the voice of one who professed to be the indispensable man for Germany, lured onward by ambition for alleged national power and efficiency, scrapped its democratic form of government and adopted Nazism with all the horrors that it has wrought upon the world.

Whenever a people loses the conviction that a democratic form of government—a truly democratic form and not merely one in name—is better than any other form, then the death knell of Democracy has already been sounded. Whenever a people's devotion to Democracy becomes diluted, then Democracy is on the way out. The tragedy of it all is that a nation may be slowly poisoning Democracy by administering opiates to hush its voice of rebuke against those who are losing their devotion to it. The peril is that some persons will become so zealous in their defense of their own narrow notion of Democracy that they will sacrifice real Democracy itself. Indeed, it has come to such a pass that some persons actually advocate defending our American way of life from the encroachments of totalitarianism by the very devices and methods that totalitarianism uses. I actually heard within the recent past a debate in the Senate of the United States in which senators advocated conscripting the public press under certain contingencies for the dissemination of government propaganda, and justified it on the grounds that that is what Hitler has done. In the name of common sense, if we accept Hitlerism in order to combat Hitlerism, what is it that we are defending from Hitlerism?

One of the great economists and philosophers that Great Britain produced in the nineteenth century was John Stuart Mill. When he wrote on government, he wrote not only as one of the profoundest thinkers of all time, but as a man of experience as well, for he was a member of the British Parliament. His "Essay on Representative Government" is still a classic, and in that essay he said some things that need to be pondered today. Note the following paragraph:

"A people may prefer a free government; but if, from indolence, or carelessness, or cowardice, or want of public spirit, they are unequal to the exertions necessary for preserving it; if they will not fight for it when it is directly attacked; if they can be deluded by the artifices used to cheat them out of it; if, by momentary discouragement, or temporary panic, or a fit of enthusiasm for an individual, they can be induced to lay their liberties at the feet even of a great man, or trust him with powers which enable him to subvert their institutions—in all these cases they are more or less unfit for liberty; and though it may be for their good to have had it even for a short time, they are unlikely long to enjoy it."

B. U. Keynotes Democracy

President Daniel L. Marsh has presented to the assembled trustees and faculties of Boston University the fifteenth annual account of his stewardship as leader of this largest New England university and one of the best known in the country.

President Marsh cited physical and educational growth. These are valuable. More important today and always is the fact that Boston University trains its students in true democracy. No demagogue, no dictator to his faculty, President Marsh last night did not lay down didactic rules as a noted New York educational leader presumed to do last week.

Instead, the Boston University president declared:

"The safeguarding of democracy is not primarily in armies and navies and warplanes. It is in enlightened men

THE only way that subversive propaganda can be effectually combated is by an enlightened patriotism—a patriotism that is sprung of a knowledge of American history, and that is nourished with the ideals and loves and sacrificial devotions which have entered into the making of our goodly heritage of liberty and self-government, and that has grown strong and healthy by exercise in the duties of citizenship. Boston University begets patriotic children. It rears them in the nurture and admonition of American ideals and patriotism. It trains them in the exercise of the duties of citizenship. It aims to make its children know what American Democracy is, and to develop fervent allegiance to it.

President Roosevelt spoke a wise word recently when he warned young people that it was a mistake for them to leave College for patriotic work in the shipyard or to enlist in the army or navy. Continuing, he said, "We must have well-educated and intelligent citizens . . . . Young people should be advised that it is their patriotic duty to continue the normal course of their education."

And Wendell Willkie could have had Boston University in mind when he said: "Without the leadership of the independent college or university, our educational system today would be in danger of accepting present political standards as unquestioningly as they are now accepted by educational institutions in Germany."

Boston University, which four years ago won the FIDAC Educational Medal as the foremost university in the world in the promotion of international understanding and friendship is rendering an equally important service today in the promotion of all that makes American Democracy worth defending.

Respectfully submitted,

DANIEL L. MARSH,

President.

Bravo, Dr. Marsh! Everlasting life to such a university like yours, keynoting democracy in a city like Boston, and sending forth young people across the world, to safeguard American "life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness!"

Personalistic Philosophy

Boston University is proud of what an eminent scholar once called its "respectable intellectual tradition." But it is prouder still that its professors and instructors are not bound by this or any other tradition, as such.

Paying tribute to the B. U. faculty in his annual report Thursday, President Daniel L. Marsh said: "They are original and independent thinkers, distilling in the alembic of their own minds the personalistic philosophy, and giving it meaningful potency for the ills of this crassly materialistic age of ours. Thus does Boston University render a peculiar service to the preservation of democracy. The importance of the individual, the sacred worth of the person, the essential equality of individual human rights—these are the things that are central to any genuine democracy."

The B. U. president believes that the highest service any university can do in the present crisis of human liberties is to protect academic freedom against the challenge of hysteria. We hope that Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University is listening.

Marsh, Teacher

Boston University under the administration of President Daniel L. Marsh has consistently reflected the spirit of true Americanism. It is now New England's largest educational institution and one of the nation's 20 largest universities. Dr. Marsh has not missed an opportunity to indicate that the University means always to keep alight the lamp of intellectual freedom. At a time when liberty of idea and action is shackled, Dr. Marsh rightly feels that no greater service can be rendered to the nation and humanity than for Boston University to concern itself with the free and untrammelled search for truth.

Is there any wonder that Boston University has earned a unique place in the cultural life of New England and the nation? Animated by a spirit of broadmindedness, Dr. Marsh is rearing an educational structure on the sound foundation of tolerance and sympathetic understanding.

Dr. Marsh believes that democracy is a philosophy and science of life; and that is why the school trains its students in true democracy. No wonder that Dr. Marsh's reports are listened to with interest and respect by all those who are concerned with the safeguarding of our ideals and institutions! As a man of high character and of profound thought, Dr. Marsh teaches as much by his life as by his utterances.

What the United States needs today is more men of the type of Daniel L. Marsh as teachers and exponents of the best in American traditions.

Annual Meeting and Dinner of the Boston University Trustees

The Trustees of the University gathered for their annual meeting in Dean Lord's office at the Charles Hayden Memorial, Thursday afternoon, October 10, at four o'clock. Honorable Frank G. Allen, chairman of the Trustees, presided.

The following Trustees whose terms had expired were re-elected for a five-year term: Frank G. Allen, Alfred H. Avery, Howard D. Brewer, J. Emmons Briggs, George A. Dunn, Ernest G. Howes, and Patrick A. O'Connell.

Francis C. Gray, a public-spirited Bostonian connected with many financial institutions and General Chairman of the Community Fund of Boston in 1940, was elected a member of the board of Trustees for the term expiring in 1945.

The officers of the Board and the members of the Executive Committee were re-elected as follows:

Frank G. Allen, Chairman of the Trustees; Guy W. Cox, Vice-Chairman; Merton L. Brown, Secretary; E. Ray Speare, Treasurer.

Executive Committee: Ernest G. Howes, Chairman, George A. Dunn, Secretary, Charles Francis Adams, Alfred H. Avery, Horace A. Carter, William E. Chenery, Guy W. Cox, Pliny Jewell, William F. Rogers, Howard W. Selby, Stephen W. Sleeper, Graydon Stetson, the Chairman of the Corporation; the Treasurer of the Corporation, and the President of the University.

The Board gave careful consideration to items of importance brought to their attention by President Marsh and Treasurer Speare.

It was voted that the annual reports of these two officers should be presented to the Trustees at the dinner meeting following.

At the annual meeting of the Trustees following the election of Dr. Marsh as President, the Trustees of the University gave a reception to the members of the University Senate and their wives; and at the dinner meeting following, the President and Treasurer read to the Trustees and the members of the Senate their annual reports. That custom has been followed in all the years since.

The auditorium of the Charles Hayden Memorial makes a beautiful setting for these gatherings.

The reception began promptly at six o'clock and continued beyond the scheduled time in order that all guests might meet the Trustees.

Seated at the head table were:

Mr. Charles Francis Adams, Mr. Merton L. Brown, Mr. Guy W. Cox, Mr. Pliny Jewell, President and Mrs. Marsh, Bishop and Mrs. Oxnam, Dr. E. Ray Speare and Mrs. Lucius E. Thayer.

In the absence of Governor Allen, Guy W. Cox, Vice-President of the Trustees, presided; and Rev. Dr. Lewis O. Hartman offered the invocation.

Warm-hearted applause greeted the Treasurer of the University as he rose to give his annual report. University service of great value has been rendered by Edward Ray Speare since his election as a member of the board in 1903, at which time he succeeded his father, Alden Speare, one of the Associate Founders of the University. Mr. Speare is deservedly popular with all members of the University family, having a well-informed and sympathetic attitude in connection with the work of each one. Mr. Speare modestly claimed that the efficient work of his office was due to the members of his staff; and in particular he acknowledged his indebtedness to Comptroller Ralph E. Brown, for twenty-nine years associated with the Treasurer's Office of the University.

Following the report of the Treasurer, Professor James R. Houghton sang "Hail, Boston University," the audience joining in the chorus.

President Marsh was warmly greeted, the audience standing and applauding at the opening and at the close of his address. There were many expressions of heartfelt appreciation of his leadership.

Francis C. Gray Elected Trustee

Francis C. Gray, a public spirited Bostonian with a distinguished record of accomplishment, was elected a member of the Board of Trustees of the University at the Annual Meeting at the Charles Hayden Memorial on Thursday, October 10th. Mr. Gray was elected for a five-year term becoming a member of the Class of 1945.

After graduating from the Harvard School of Law, Mr. Gray worked in the office of Ropes, Gray, Boyden & Perkins for seven years except for the better part of two years when he served as First Lieutenant of the 303rd Field Artillery and was overseas for nearly a year.

Mr. Gray was for awhile law partner with Henry L. Shattuck; later was President of the Lee Higginson Trust Company, and is now Vice President of the Fiduciary Trust Company of Boston.

He is Secretary and Trustee of the Massachusetts General Hospital, Secretary and Trustee of the Provident Institution for Savings and a member of its Board of Investment.

American Universities

Boston University sometimes seems overshadowed by the great institutions of learning with which it is surrounded. The following list, published in the New York Times, giving the enrollment in the twenty-five largest American universities includes Boston University and Harvard University in New England.

These enrollment figures do not cover part-time students or those registered in evening classes. Alumni of Boston University may with proper modesty take pride in the rank of their Alma Mater in this list. Only eleven institutions in the country have a larger enrollment, and eight of these are state institutions having the advantage of large appropriations from public funds.

In the list of the nation's institutions of higher learning Boston University takes its place as number twelve, and among the privately endowed institutions of learning it takes its place as number four, New York University, the University of Pennsylvania and Columbia University being the only privately endowed institutions with larger enrollment.

Boston University School of Social Work

RICHARD K. CONANT

With the new University Year a new school was established in Boston University, the School of Social Work, an outgrowth of the Division of Social Work of the former School of Religious and Social Work. The growing importance of social work as a profession was recognized by Dean Henry H. Meyer, who organized a division for it in the earlier school and selected Richard K. Conant, formerly Massachusetts Commissioner of Public Welfare, to develop it. In establishing a separate School of Social Work the University undertakes a project which is significant in present-day developments and one which will, in the opinion of Dean Conant, increase the University's contribution to community welfare in Massachusetts and in New England.

In the United States there are forty-one graduate schools of social work which are accredited as members of the American Association of Schools of Social Work and Dean Conant gained the accrediting of Boston University in January, 1939, about one year after he became Director of the Division of Social Work. He had realized for some years as Commissioner of Public Welfare that the need for trained men in public and private social work was not being met in New England and felt the importance of more training facilities for both men and women. There even was some sentiment in the State Legislature that the State establish a school of its own to meet the need. Many of the state universities, especially in the West, have established schools to train men and women for the rapidly increasing number of positions in public welfare and social security services.

All the schools of social work have waiting lists and their capacities for full time students are limited by the number of field work placements of good standards which can be secured in the social service agencies as opportunities for practice training for the students while they are in school. The present capacity of the Boston University School of Social Work for full time students was reached at the opening of the school and the places were assigned to those applicants who seemed to the admission committee likely to become successful social workers. An increase of twenty full time students, from thirty-seven last year to fifty-seven this year, a fifty percent increase, was as much as could be undertaken.

The best opinion of the profession, Dean Conant says, is that training for public welfare administration should be given in a school of social work. The administrator should have a thorough grounding in social work in order to be a leader in its development and administration. Too early specialization in administration or in any one field of social work does not get the desired result. The best educational plan is to devote the first graduate year to a broad training in case work dealing with individual problems and with family problems, to training in work with groups of boys and girls or adults for their constructive development and to training in community welfare work. During the second year of the two year graduate course, more specialization can be undertaken in administration, research, community organization, psychiatric or medical social work, children's work or work with delinquents.

Practice is of equal importance with classroom instruction throughout the course. For two days a week the first year and for four days a week the second year the student is placed in one of Boston's social agencies of high standards to work with and to be trained by a visitor under the supervision of a member of the faculty of the School. Boston is an ideal training center for social work because of the broad scope of its public and private welfare work and the high standards of its agencies.

Practical also is the instruction at the School. All members of the faculty are now practising or, if full time members, have recently been engaged in the practice of social work. The contact of the School with actual practice is kept fresh. Education and practice together help the faculty, the agencies and the students to maintain growth in the developing skills and new systems of social service, public and private.

As lecturers in the new courses on "Social Work Resources" and "The Objectives of Social Work", many executives of social service agencies and specialists from those agencies are brought to the School, cementing the contact between the University and the community. At the opening meeting of the course on "Objectives of Social Work", an assembly course, President Marsh emphasized the importance of character and earnestness of purpose in the student who intends to become a social worker. Harry M. Carey, the new Director of the Greater Boston Community Fund, pointed out that social work is today facing the greatest challenge of its history. He said, "The most important factor in a war regime is morale. What group knows more about morale than social workers? What profession knows more about handling groups in mass, about preventing sickness, about helping families to adjust themselves to present day conditions, about leisure time activities, about arousing a community to its responsibilities? Our techniques in all the fields, the rehabilitation and maintenance of family life, the safeguarding of the interests of children, the protection of health, character-education, community organization, are too valuable not to be used by the entire community . . . We are going to have more governmental social work, more work for the handicapped, a greater development of the mental hygiene processes, a further development in the health protection field and increased use of leisure time group activities. There will be a growth in the character-building agencies and a better understanding of human behavior. I think there will be an increased understanding of social work, and that social work can be the most potential force for good, if it will take up the great challenge of these critical times."

Exemplifying the contact between the school and the community, Dean Conant is active in social service as President of the Massachusetts Child Council, Secretary of the Massachusetts Conference of Social Work, which each year holds ten district conferences throughout the State and a large annual conference, a member of the special commission appointed by Governor Saltonstall to consider the old age assistance laws, and a member of the budget committee of the Greater Boston Community Fund. He graduated from Harvard in 1905, Harvard Law School in 1908, practised law for a few years in

DEAN LORD IN HIS OFFICE

The First Year in the Charles Hayden Memorial Building

EVERETT W. LORD

For twenty-three years the College of Business Administration occupied a renovated building owned by another educational institution—all that building, and parts of others in the neighborhood, crowding itself into inadequate and unsuitable quarters, but carrying on and progressing in spite of such evident handicaps. The inadequacy had been recognized for years, and from time to time, there were suggestions, or petitions, or pleas, for relief—for a home of its own, worthy of the College; for opportunity, not so much to expand, as to maintain its vital energy, to perform its essential functions. But the appeals brought no relief and we had almost reconciled ourselves to continuing for all time, “cramped, cabined and confined” at old 525 Boylston Street.

It was not that we had no sentimental attachment to the old home: on the contrary, faculty and students alike, and loyal graduates even more, felt real affection for the dingy rooms and the rugged walls of brick. That was assured by long and happy association. But, just as affection for a friend cannot entirely blind one to his short-comings, so we could not fail to recognize the pitiful inadequacy of our college home—so we could not do otherwise than shrink a bit from bringing visitors within our walls, though we might put on a brave front and hope that the accepted quality of our product might overshadow the failings of our plant.

Indeed, the old building did not make a favorable impression on visitors. Students were lost to us because they, or their parents, could not reconcile the manifest antiquity of the structure with the expectation of a modern college training. Still more students were lost because we could not provide facilities for new courses and new classes. And in spite of their industry, faculty members were unable to render their best service when crowded into cubby holes which allowed no space for conferences and insufficient room for their own reference books.

In these circumstances the announcement that the property had been sold and must be vacated within a year was not altogether unwelcome. It made our problem one no longer of desire but of necessity. The College of Business Administration could not be abandoned. It must have a home: and that immediately raised a question. Should Boston University follow the custom of years past, seek out some discarded building and spend thousands in an effort to remodel and reshape it for our use? Or should we make a supreme effort and erect a new building adapted to our needs and inaugurating a new era in Boston University housing? Happily, the Board of Trustees, after serious consideration of the question, made the momentous decision in favor of new construction and backed a campaign for a million dollars for a worthy home for the College of Business Administration.

Now that that home has been occupied for a year, it may be interesting to consider how it has affected the college and the entire University.

First of all, it is certainly true that the long and vigorous campaign for the necessary million did much to create a unified university spirit, as graduates, faculty, and students of every Department gave the campaign their sincere support. So the interest in the Charles Hayden Memorial Building is not confined to the College of Business Administration, but is spread throughout Boston University. It emphasizes the fact that this is a Boston University building, in which all may take equal pride. Probably, also, the erection of this first building on the new campus has brought new courage and new hope to every Department of the University and made more real the vision of a great university center on the banks of the Charles where all the university family may live and work together.

The first effect of these new surroundings that is noticeable to all is the great improvement in student—and faculty—morale. No one can pass through the beautiful portals and walk across the marble floor of the spacious lobby—the “Main deck”, in the College of Business Administration idiom—without an uplift of soul which effects his whole character and bearing. Students are more careful about combing their hair and keeping their shoes shined: they are more eager to show themselves to be gentlemen, at home in these luxurious surroundings. And faculty members take pride in bringing here friends from other colleges, whose admiring and all but envious comments add to the pride of those who can call the building home. This is a very real gain, for it was precisely in the rather low morale that we suffered of old.

The Charles Hayden Memorial Building is architecturally beautiful and administratively efficient. It provides generous office space for the administration and the various departments of the College, making possible individual and collective activities that were out of the question at “525.” It has laboratories which have added immeasurably to the value and interest of our courses.

For example, there is the printing laboratory—something long desired, but impossible before. In this room, adjoining the Journalism suite on the ground floor, we have a small printing office, with specimens and exhibits in great number. There our students in Journalism and in Advertising may study type and type usages, and may work on special projects assigned by their instructors. Printers and stationers have made generous contributions of equipment which enable us to give practical instruction in the technical subjects connected with our courses.

A psychological laboratory has enabled our department of psychology not only to provide advanced work for qualified students, and to conduct many highly significant research projects, but to open the doors as well to business men and industrialists who have so many distinctly psychological problems to face. For them we have established a Psychological Center which, at meetings held during the year, has presented the results of psychological research in important and intensely practical ways.

Because we now have halls in which they can meet we have organized and maintained this past year an Export Round Table at which business men have, in large numbers, presented and considered their problems of foreign trade; a Sales Executive Club, devoted to the interests of the men who direct selling forces; a Commercial Education Club, bringing together students and graduates engaged as commercial teachers; a New England Interscholastic Press Association, composed of representatives of hundreds of high school newspapers and publications; and a Professional Council of Journalism, which links some of the leaders of the newspaper world with our department of Journalism.

We have not made use of our beautifully equipped Radio Studio, but the room itself and its equipment is available for extensive use as a University adjunct.

On the topmost floor is our spacious reading room and library. No longer do our students have to resort to nearby hotel lobbies and drug-stores to find a place for study. We are hoping that Friends of the Library, organized this past year, will soon make much needed additions to our library, which is not now, as it was in the old home, crowded for room.

For social life the men have made much use of the two large rooms assigned to them for study, and of the “Forcas’le”, a sufficiently masculine apartment where they may smoke at ease; and the young women have made good use of the complete kitchen, connected with their “Blue Room”. They have held several teas and small receptions in their pleasant quarters and are unanimous in their approval of the new facilities.

These are only a few of the ways in which the Charles Hayden Memorial has added new life to the College, but they indicate something of its value. The greatest and most lasting value is that of which I have already spoken—the marvelous influence on students and visitors. Our Vocational Department reports that employers, who in the old building were openly skeptical about the quality of students trained in such an atmosphere, here clearly expect to find men of the highest grade: and, with our new facilities, that department has been able to extend its highly successful guidance program, formerly limited to Juniors and Seniors, to every student of every class.

The Charles Hayden Memorial Building makes Boston University College of Business Administration one of the outstanding schools of the country. It makes it incumbent upon us to maintain a scholastic standing worthy of our new home. Recognition of that fact permeates our organization and results in more and better work. The “Mark Hopkins on a log” ideal is a pleasing one: but for practical purposes a commodious and beautiful building with ample facilities for every feature of student life is infinitely better—and that is the ideal to which our College of Business Administration has had the happy fortune to attain. That it may be only the precursor of similar good fortune for all our sister colleges and schools in Boston University is our cherished expectation.

Boston University Fans Invade New York

(By a veteran of the Official Bookstore Tours)

Students, faculty, alumni and friends by the hundreds took advantage of the holiday week-end to journey to New York. Supplementing the usual attractions of the famous metropolis were the Boston University—Manhattan College Football Game at the Polo Grounds on Friday night, October 11th and, officially designated "Boston University Day at the World's Fair", Saturday, October 12th.

Many joined the tours offered by the Boston University Bookstores and traveled in groups via the Eastern Steamship and Colonial Steamship Lines. These tours left Boston Thursday evening. Rallies were held under a beautiful full moon on the open deck of the steamers. Fellow travelers were well aware that Boston University was on its way to "take over" New York. Short cheer for MacDonald! Short cheer for Hanley! Skyrocket! Rah Locomotive! interspersed with familiar University songs provided the happy, carefree background which characterized the entire weekend.

The game was well attended and our cheering section, augmented by hundreds of New York alumni, was very much in evidence. Our band in brilliant scarlet and white uniform, performing in creditable manner, held the spotlight between the halves.

In spite of the fact that Saturday's attendance at the Fair set a new high record for the year, Boston University folk were present in such numbers that this observer experienced the feeling of being "quite at home". Our band, under the capable direction of Fred Harris, (Senior, College of Music) was given a prominent place on the program of the day.

Sunday was made for sightseers and sightseers were made Sunday. Practically to a man, every tourist turned sightseer. Seats on the upper deck of Fifth Avenue busses were at a premium. The sun smiled brightly from a cloudless sky and provided just enough warmth to make one question that this was really mid October. The Hudson River, George Washington Bridge, Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, Grant's Tomb, Cathedral Church of St. John the Divine, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick's church, Barnard College, Mt. Sinai Hospital, Central Park, Frick Museum, Radio Center, Washington Square, Fifth Avenue's shopping centers and skyscrapers held the attention of those who were out to "see the town atop a 'rubberneck' bus".

Aboard the steamers again late Sunday afternoon, New York's skyline was seen to the best advantage. The reflections of a setting sun formed the backdrop for a city of towering buildings with their millions of lighted windows. A city in which we, now seasoned travelers, had been a part, a dweller, a contributor to its welfare, even tho' just for the week-end.

Again a full moon and again college songs and good cheer as we sail nearer and nearer toward home. We liked New York and were glad to have experienced its atmosphere and attractions but we love Boston and its peaceful suburbs, its slower tempo, its solidarity and sincerity.

Hope there's a New York game next year!

The First Three Football Games of 1940

MURRAY KRAMER

It is the unforeseen things that generally make or break a football team. A few long passes, a sudden development of a sophomore, a fumble, a successful conversion, injuries—any one of these factors can give a college eleven an outstanding season from a standpoint of victories or can turn an anticipated winning season into one of great disappointment.

Take the case of our Boston University varsity football team. Just last month in Bostonia, I wrote an article on the outlook for the season stating that we could possibly win six games and lose two. As a matter of fact, the coaching staff felt that they had the best team potentially since the 1937 outfit which defeated Boston College. Inwardly, Coach Pat Hanley was of the opinion that with any sort of luck, a seven to one record was not impossible, which would be the best season any football team had ever enjoyed in the history of the University. But the elements, unfortunately, went to work. Instead of being favored by Dame Fortune, Old Man Jinx struck with the fury of the 1938 hurricane and after the wreckage was cleared, it now appears that Boston University's 1940 football machine will be lucky to break even for the year.

Never before in the memory of this writer, who has seen more Boston University football than anybody connected with the University in the last fourteen years, did any Terrier team ever undergo the misfortune of this present eleven. Injuries are part of the game. There are always bruises and aches and occasionally a casualty that may sideline a boy for a period of time; but when a team loses six boys for the season, all of them veterans with varsity ranking, it is a blow that cannot be repaired.

In the very first scrimmage of the year, Joe Lanata, senior end who was slated to start the season as a regular on the right wing, had his leg broken. In that very same scrimmage, Ed Rooney, 220-pound tackle who was heavily counted upon this season, tore a cartilage in his knee which necessitated an operation, putting him out of commission for the season also. As though that were not bad enough, in a scrimmage between the first and second games, little Jim Sullivan, 140-pound halfback who shared duties with Al Clark, suffered a broken collar bone. He soon had company when Al Clark received the very same injury in the Manhattan game ten days later. Ken Skoropowski, who is considered the best guard in New England by Coach Pat Hanley, was accidentally kicked in the base of the spine in the Upsala game and was kept in the hospital for a week under observation. There is a chance that Ken may be back before the end of the season, but his loss has certainly been felt in the Manhattan and Cincinnati games. Sid Michaels, the only veteran center on the squad, suffered a severe leg injury in the Manhattan game and he may also be lost for the rest of the year.

Those are the major casualties. Delving deeper into the injury jinx, we find that Captain Jim McDonald has a chronic bad knee which may go at any time. George

CAPTAIN JIM McDONALD

Pantano has a broken nose, Charlie Cremens has a bad hand, John Conneaney has an aggravating knee injury, Ralph Salvati has a pulled tendon and we could go on and on, but this should be enough to give you a fair idea of what has happened to the Boston University football squad this year.

There has never been a season like it for injuries and there may never be another one to come anywhere near it, but we are concerned with the present and these casualties have just about wrecked the team. It is well known that here at Boston University, football players are not hired nor are they bought. When a college has an amateur football team, it will never be deep in reserves. Injuries to key men raise havoc with the plans of any coach. The absence of these men generally result in the loss of games that could possibly have been won with the team at full strength.

The Scarlet and White opened their season against Norwich on September 28 in impressive fashion after getting away to a bad three-minute start. A pass interception by Domina of Norwich who ran it back 90 yards put the visitors ahead of the Terriers, 7 to 0, before the game was three minutes old. But the team settled down, took complete control and went on to defeat the best team Norwich has had in thirty years by the score of 38 to 7.

The following Saturday, Upsala came to Weston with

Conference on Preaching and Annual Meeting of the School of Theology Alumni Association

The Thirteenth Annual Conference On Preaching, arranged by the Boston University School of Theology, was held at Copley Church, Boston, October 14, 15 and 16. Dean Earl Bowman Marlatt was in charge of all arrangements. Distinguished ministers of various denominations took part in the program and clergymen in large numbers were in attendance, some of them coming from far-away cities.

The Annual Meeting of the Alumni Association of the School of Theology was held on Tuesday evening, October 15th. Rev. Dr. Charles W. Jeffras, President of the Association, was toastmaster. Addresses were made by Alumni of the School as follows:

Rev. Dr. James C. Baker, Methodist Bishop for the California Area.

Dr. Earl Bowman Marlatt, Dean of the School.

Rev. Dr. G. Bromley Oxnam, Methodist Bishop of the New England Area.

Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, President of the University.

Rev. Dr. Charles R. Brown, Dean Emeritus of the Yale Divinity School.

BISHOP BAKER: I never come to Boston without a great thrill. I wonder sometimes if anybody ever came to Boston for the first time with greater anticipation than I did when I came from Illinois to enter the Boston University School of Theology. — I bring to you not only my own greetings but the greetings of Boston University men in California and in Arizona. We have a splendid group of them. They are giving a fine account of themselves. They show the spirit of Boston University in the way in which they do their work. We are sending you men from California. I have located some in this group this evening. Some of our best men come to your School of Theology and we are taking some of your best men from you. We of California salute you.

BISHOP OXNAM: My love for this School has deepened as the years have come and gone, and now in this year when it seems to be necessary to spend billions of dollars for physical defense I trust someone will see the wisdom of giving two million dollars to house and endow this School of Theology now absolutely essential to spiritual defense.

PRESIDENT MARSH: If you read Bostonia you will note in the October number the account of work being done in this war torn world of ours by graduates of the Boston University School of Theology in the service of the Prince of Peace.

All around the world you will find graduates of the Boston University School of Theology, guiding posts, as it were, to help us find our way through the thick darkness that covers the world.

DEAN BROWN: I always enjoy coming to these Conferences on Preaching not only because of the splendid lectures that are arranged from year to year, but it is a great joy to keep my connection with the students of the School of Theology. I would like to say a few rather serious words about the value of worship. I graduated from the School of Theology fifty-one years ago last June. At the School they taught me a great many things and among the great things they taught me the beauty and the meaning of worship.

I can remember how Dr. Townsend read the Bible. There was one autumn that followed a troublesome summer, widespread railroad strikes, the country was in a very restless state. The last of September he was asked to lead chapel and that day he read to us the Forty-sixth Psalm. I wish he might come back and read it to us now in these very difficult times.

"God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble.

"Therefore will not we fear, though the earth be removed, and though the mountains be carried into the midst of the sea;

"Though the waters thereof roar and be troubled, though the mountains shake with the swelling thereof. Selah.

"There is a river, the streams whereof shall make glad the city of God, the holy place of the tabernacles of the Most High.

"God is in the midst of her; she shall not be moved: God shall help her, and that right early.

"The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved: he uttered his voice, the earth melted.

"The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah.

"Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolations he hath made in the earth.

"He maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth; he breaketh the bow, and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire.

"Be still, and know that I am God: I will be exalted among the heathen, I will be exalted in the earth.

"The Lord of hosts is with us; the God of Jacob is our refuge. Selah."

I cannot read it as Dr. Townsend read it, but I always think of him when I read that psalm to myself and of the way his reading of it fell on our hearts and minds.

At the Annual Meeting the following officers were elected: Rev. Charles T. Allen of Newton, Mass., President; Rev. John K. Montgomery of Atlantic, Mass., Secretary; Rev. Harvey K. Mousley of New Bedford, Mass., Treasurer; Rev. Gilbert W. Wieting of Newport, N. H., Auditor; and the following national vice presidents: Rev. William H. Stewart of Rockville Center, N. Y.; Rev. Thomas S. Kepler of Appleton, Wis.; Rev. Richard C. Raines of Minneapolis, Minn.; Rev. Paul Secrest of Youngstown, Ohio; Rev. Jesse L. Corley of South Pasadena, Calif.

The Oldest Graduate, Rev. Samuel M. Beale Boston University School of Theology Class of 1871

The oldest living graduate of Boston University and probably the oldest graduate of any American university celebrated the one hundred and first anniversary of his birth at his home in Sandwich, Massachusetts, Wednesday, October 23rd.

From the Alumni Office there went to him fifty white carnations, and fifty scarlet carnations, in appreciation of the first century of his life. There was also one red rose to start him pleasantly upon his second century of service.

One year ago Mr. Beale wrote as follows:

"I thank God that the University continues to send forth young people inspired to serve, and I pray that the University may long continue its wonderful service.

Francis C. Gray

He served for six years as member of the Boston School Committee and was Chairman of that Committee for two years.

He is Trustee of King's Chapel, the Massachusetts Humane Society, is a Director in the United States Smelting, Refining & Mining Company, and the Massachusetts Fire & Marine Insurance Company.

Mr. Gray married Helen Rotch Bullard in 1916 and they have three sons.

In 1940 Mr. Gray was Chairman of the very successful Greater Boston Community Fund Campaign. In that Campaign President Marsh acted as Chairman of the Division of Institutions.

He was selected as Secretary of that Committee by Dean Everett W. Lord, who was at that time Secretary of the New England Child Labor Committee. He carried on the work of that organization from 1911 to 1921, serving during the World War as 1st Lieutenant of the 304th Infantry. In 1921 Calvin Coolidge, then Governor of Massachusetts, appointed Mr. Conant to head the State Department of Public Welfare. Reappointed by Governors Cox and Allen, he greatly enlarged the State Department during the depression until 1935, adding old age assistance and social security functions. He is a member of the American Association of Social Workers and is active in various other social service organizations. His home is in Lincoln. He was appointed Professor of Social Work, by President Marsh, in Boston University in February, 1937.

Football

a big, tough outfit that figured to give the Hanleymen plenty of opposition and they did that little thing. In fact the invaders put on the first offensive march of the day in the first period and went all the way to the one-foot line before losing the ball. The Terriers settled down at this point and took the offensive and went on to win, 15 to 6.

With two victories to their credit, the injury-riddled Boston University eleven made their first New York City appearance in sixteen years meeting Manhattan. Because of the great number of regulars out, the Terriers were conceded no chance whatsoever of beating Manhattan. In fact it was feared by many that the game would wind up in a rout. Instead, the Scarlet and White put on a magnificent exhibition as far as courage and fight were concerned and went down to a 20 to 6 defeat. All three Manhattan touchdowns were scored on passes, which might have been batted down if the Terriers were at full strength and at their best.

After the Manhattan game, students and alumni became fearful as to what would happen when the Terriers stacked up against Boston College on November 9 at Fenway Park. The Eagles, with one of the five best teams in the United States today, will be top-heavy favorites to humble Boston University on its Homecoming Day game. On paper, the University has no chance whatsoever, but somehow or other, facts and figures do not seem to apply when these two teams meet. During the past six years, Boston College has always been an odds-on choice to defeat the Terriers and although they have turned the trick four out of six times, they have been hard-pressed in every one of their triumphs.

Boston University will be outmanned, outweighed and may be outplayed on Homecoming Day, but they will not be outfought, and a team that refuses to give up may often surprise the best of football experts.

In Memoriam -- Dean Alexander Swanson Begg

Dr. Alexander S. Begg, Dean of the Boston University School of Medicine for the last seventeen years, was summoned by the Great Physician on the night of Wednesday, September 25. On the day of his death he had attended the School's activities connected with registration; and with President Daniel L. Marsh he was to have addressed the assembly of the School of Medicine on Thursday morning welcoming the new students.

Dean Begg was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, May 23, 1881. He was educated at the Collegiate Institute, Sarnia, Ontario, and Drake University, where he received his Doctor of Medicine degree in 1907. After teaching six years at Drake University, Dr. Begg became a teaching fellow at the Harvard Medical School, where he finally became Dean of the Graduate School of Medicine. In 1921 Dr. Begg became professor of anatomy at the Boston University School of Medicine; and in 1923 he was elected Dean.

During the years as Dean of the School of Medicine, Dr. Begg gave himself without reserve to the service of the School and the development of the University. He was a member of some of the most important University committees and was constructively connected with the development of the University's athletic program. He was well-qualified for his position. Under his vigorous leadership the School of Medicine has been expanded and developed along modern, progressive lines; and during the last few years he has been a magnetic and helpful leader in the campaign which Boston University has been conducting for the increased endowment and better equipment of the School of Medicine.

Dr. Begg had broad vision. He was an able contributor to the advancement of medical education and had a fine understanding of the historical sequence of its development. He was distinguished by his freedom from prejudice and bigotry and by his ideals for the advancement of the School. He set high value on the quality of teaching and encouraged the earnest aspirations of the students.

Dr. Begg was active in military service during the first World War. He started as first lieutenant in the Medical Reserve Corps and retired in 1919 as a Colonel. He was in active duty at the office of the Surgeon General of the American Expeditionary Forces in 1917 to 1919; and for eleven months he commanded Base Hospital 88 in France.

He was a member of the Association of Medical Colleges and served on its executive committee for several years and was elected permanent president of the Massachusetts Medical Society in 1935.

Only a month ago he was named Massachusetts chairman of the American Medical Association's national committee on medical preparedness. He was a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the American Association of Anatomists, the Association of Military Surgeons, the American Medical Association, and Phi Beta Kappa.

All who realize the significance of the distinctive ability with which these positions were fulfilled as well as the many who were privileged to benefit intimately from his helpful guidance, generosity, good humor, and friendliness feel sure that Dr. Begg's leadership in medical education will not soon be forgotten.

Dr. Begg leaves three children, John of Hudson, New York; Barbara, a student at the Boston University College of Liberal Arts; and Dr. Charles F. Begg, a graduate of the College of Liberal Arts in the Class of 1935, now an interne at the Rhode Island Hospital, Providence.

The faculty of the School of Medicine entered upon its records the following resolution:

RESOLUTION

We, the members of the teaching and scientific staffs of Boston University School of Medicine today gather with deepest sorrow in the loss of a friend and guide. He was truly the moving spirit of this institution and carried through long and hard years with unexcelled energy and skill, a burden that he far too often took from the shoulders of those whose freedom he had always at heart. We learned not only dependence and respect, but equally a love as between old friends and the confidence born of such affection. Therefore:

WHEREAS, through the death of their beloved Dean, Alexander Swanson Begg, the Faculty of Boston University School of Medicine will miss greatly the wise counsel and friendly influence of their leader experienced during the past seventeen years, and

WHEREAS, the Faculty recognizes and sincerely admires his numerous and effective contributions to the betterment of medical education, and

DEAN ALEXANDER S. BEGG

WHEREAS, his energy and enthusiasm, his military bearing and cordial greeting were an inspiration to all who met him, be it

RESOLVED, that this brief memorial be entered in the record of this Faculty meeting and that copies be sent to his family as an expression of our appreciation and sympathy.
