THE UNIVERSITY HOSPITAL APPOINTS NEW VICE PRESIDENT OF DEVELOPMENT

Boston, Mass.--Bonnie R. Clendenning was recently named vice president for Development at The University Hospital (UH). In her new position, Clendenning is responsible for fundraising programs at the 379-bed teaching hospital, which is affiliated with Boston University School of Medicine (BUSM).

Clendenning came to UH from Boston University School of Law where she was director of Development and External Relations. She was responsible for annual and capital fund solicitation and oversaw the school's publications, public relations and special events. Prior to that she was the director for External Relations at Tufts University School of Medicine, where she supervised the school's Development Services. She held a similar position at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

Clendenning has traveled and worked extensively abroad. She was a teacher in Iran, a bookseller in England and a museum administrator in France and Belgium. She received her undergraduate degree from Smith College and her graduate degree from the Fletcher School.

The University Hospital, founded in 1855, is a principal teaching hospital of BUSM and a member of Boston University Medical Center.
